Britain Pledges Blum Aid Against Fascists

Strife Bared As Coal Board Abolishes Its Publicity Unit

Action Taken in Absence of Chairman Who Wants to Resign.

Patronage Fight In Body Revealed

Lewis and Guffey Seen Forcing Out Chief of Commission.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Further evidence of the dissension within the Bituminous Coal Commission came to light yesterday when a majority of that agency voted, in the absence of Chairman Charles F. Hosford, jr., to abolish its five-man publicity division, transferring its functions to the secretary of the commission.

This event constituted the latest chapter in the controversy within the commission over jobs and patronage which has torn the commission for many months, bringing about a situation in that agency as intense as that existing now in the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Hosford, chairman of the commission, submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt on Monday through Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, his sponsor. Mr. Roosevelt on Tuesday said he hoped Hosford would remain with the commission until April 30, although it is known the chairman is anxious to leave within the next week or two. He is understod yesterday to have taken steps to persuade Mr. Roosevelt to release him before April 30.

Friends Explain.

Meanwhile, there were reports that Senator Guffey and John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization and president of the United Mine Workers, had forced Hosford to resign in order to get a man more amenable to their will.

According to Hosford's friends, he never intended to remain with the commission for his full term, and resigned now in order to get back to his business in Pennsylvania. He wished to make way for another member before the commission undertook formulation of a new order on coal prices, it was said.

Another report was to the effect

Schools' Funds Are Slashed in D.C. Supply Bill

Businessmen Alter Stand on Privilege Tax as Conferees Report.

By James D. Secrest.

Disclosures that Senate and House conferees had slashed $465,000 off Senate appropriations for public schools and that Washington businessmen have changed their minds about the business privilege tax were made yesterday as the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs sought to finish drafting the District revenue bill.

Filing of the conference report on the District supply bill revealed the serious cut in school appropriations voted by the Senate and also uncovered a compromise between the Senate and House managers on the allowance for administration of unemployment relief.

Whereas the House had limited the administrative allowance to 7½ per cent and the Senate had raised it to 12 per cent, conferees agreed on 8½ per cent.

Cuts in the school appropriations were chiefly in the items for additional teachers and furnishings for new schools. House managers contended that the personnel and equipment would not be needed before the 1940 fiscal year, as the schools would not be opened next year.

Several increases in the school budget were accepted by the House, including $20,000 for a second-story addition to the Crosby Noyes

Radio Monopoly Inquiry Vote Is Slated Tomorrow

By the United Press.

Federal Communications Commissioner T. A. M. Craven yesterday introduced a resolution calling for investigation of "monopoly and trends toward monopoly" in the radio broadcasting industry. It is understood the commission will vote on it tomorrow.

Rumors that the billion dollar industry would be investigated have been current since January 20, when the commission issued a report on social and economic aspects of broadcasting, asserting that "monopoly exists or may exist."

Senator Wallace White, (Republican), of Maine, has pending a measure calling for a Congressional inquiry and Craven's resolution was said to have been modeled after his.

Composer Cited To Pay D. C. Wife $24,950 Alimony

Monticello, N. Y., March 16 (AP).—A back alimony judgment of $24,950 plus interest was filed here today against Vincent Youmans, the composer in favor of his former wife, now Mrs. Anne Eschner of Washington.

The couple was married in Philadelphia in 1927. In a separation agreement signed in New York City in 1932, Youmans was ordered to pay $150 weekly toward the support of the wife and their twin children, now 10 years old.

Banks Permitted To Insure Lives

Albany, N. Y., March 16 (AP).—A bill permitting savings banks to sell life insurance was passed by both houses of the State Legislature today. It permits savings banks to sell life insurance policies up to $3,000 to any individual.

Gov. Lehman said he was "very glad" of the bill's passage.

Medical Society Expels Group Health Doctor

Dr. Mario Scandiffio, a member of the Group Health Association's clinic staff, was expelled from the District Medical Society last night by an "overwhelming" majority vote.

His expulsion—for violating "certain rules of the society"—climaxed a day during which the feud between the Group Health Association and the allied forces of the District Medical Society and local hospitals progressed from sniping tactics to open warfare.

Earlier in the day battle lines were drawn up as:

Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., of the Community Chest, disclosed that pledges are being canceled because hospitals are refusing to admit GHA doctors. He intimated that member hospitals may be dropped from the Chest if the conflict is not solved soon.

President William C. Kirkpatrick of Group Health said court action would be invoked if the Medical Society expelled Dr. Scandiffio because he is a member of the GHA clinic staff.

An official spokesman for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, sponsor of the group medical enterprise, conceded that all attempts to make peace with the medical society have ended in failure and said more drastic steps will now be taken by GHA in defense of its existence.

In an announcement of Dr. Scandiffio's expulsion signed by Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the Medical Society, it was said that he had been formally charged by the compensation, contract and industrial medicine committee of the organization with violating the society's by-laws and constitution.

After a five-week hearing, the executive committtee recommended

Senate Told Pet Bureaus To Be Spared

Administration Pressure to Defeat Congress' Power Charged.

Foes of Reorganization Allege Lobbying by Agency Officials.

By Robert C. Albright.

Administration pressure to defeat the Wheeler amendment to the Government reorganization bill, specifying Congressional approval of all consolidation orders, was alleged last night by Senate opponents of the bureau reform measure.

Individual "assurances" to Senators that some agencies would not be disturbed were charged and admitted on the floor, as the Senate for the second day failed to reach a vote on the key provision of the Administration bill.

Lobbying by some department officials, and some long distance calls by State Governors, were among the allegations made by opponents of the bill. They further charged majority leaders with delaying a ballot on the amendment until strength to defeat it has been rallied.

"Afraid to Vote."

"They were afraid to vote today," declared Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island. "They were filibustering until they have the votes."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, commented that "certain things are being promised on and off the floor that amount to reorganization of the Government before the bill is passed."

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley backed away from a test vote last night, but vainly sought unanimous consent to vote at 2 p. m. today. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, objected. Wheeler was represented as wishing to debate the matter further if a vote was withheld last night.

It was the second major controversy since amendment of the bill opened Monday. The Senate on Tuesday defeated, 50 to 38, the Walsh amendment to continue the present Civil Service Commission. In that case, the Senate had recessed over a day before voting on the amendment. Friends of the amendment said they had sufficient votes to adopt it on Monday, but many asked to be released on the following day.

The Wheeler amendment would require both House of Congress to

Father, 2 Fliers Detained in Plot To Kidnap 2 Girls

Nassau, Bahamas, March 16 (AP).—Police records showed Forrester Scott, Philadelphia attorney, and two fliers were detained today in connection with an attempted airplane abduction of Scott's two daughters who are great-granddaughters of Alexis duPont.

The girls, Eva, 6, and Zoe, 3, are here with his divorced wife, now Mrs. Harry Clarke Boden. Scott and the pilots, Stanley Boynton, of Philadelphia, and F. B. Miller, of Miami Beach, were booked for investigation. Scott retained two of the foremost Nassau barristers.

The girls' nurse said they were playing in a park on the waterfront when two men attempted to seize them. They and a third man were caught at a plane in the harbor.

Robert Garrison, Post Writer, And 2 Others Killed in Crash

Robert Garrison, jr., Washington Post sports writer, was killed instantly last night in an auto accident near Savannah, Ga., while on a vacation trip to Florida.

BOB GARRISON.

Killed with him were two passengers in his machine, Earle V. Weatherford, an employe of the Veterans Administration, and his sister, Miss Marguerite Weatherford of Baltimore. Weatherford and Garrison, an honor student at Central High School and George Washington University, lived at 1124 Twelfth street northwest.

The accident occurred close to the South Carolina-Georgia line about 25 miles from Savannah on U. S. Route No. 17, the new coastal, high-speed highway connecting New York City and Washington with Southern vacationlands.

Garrison was driving, Weatherford sitting in the front seat beside him and the woman riding in the rear seat, when the sports writer attempted to pass a truck with a trailer loaded with railroad ties.

According to South Carolina Highway Patrolman R. W. Crawford, an approaching car forced Garrison to attempt to return to the right side of the road, and in doing so his car crashed against the ties which ex-

Polish Crisis Speeds Hitler To Berlin; Reichstag Called

Fuehrer Hailed As a Conqueror

Rome-Berlin Axis.

Abandoning his Austrian tour of triumph, Fuehrer Hitler rushed back to Berlin yesterday because of the threatened clash between Lithuania and Poland. Welcomed as a conqueror, Hitler promptly summoned the Reichstag to hear "a declaration of the government."

Premier Mussolini gave his approval to the German coup in Austria, in a speech in Rome. He warned the world that Italy would be able to defend her borders against aggression.—Page 7.

Vienna became a city of terror when Nazis proceeded to consolidate their conquest by systematic arrests and other persecution of anti-Nazi elements. The list of suicides lengthened, topped by Maj. Emil Fey, strong man of the Schuschnigg regime, and a group of distinguished scientists.

Reichstag Called.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 16.—Adolf Hitler me back to Berlin in triumph tonight and abruptly called the Reichstag to meet Friday to hear a "declaration by the government."

A Lithunanian-Polish crisis at Germany's back door, Czech-German warnings to the Czech Parliament, the Spanish war situation, and hurried French and British conferences persuaded Hitler to return to Berlin earlier than he had planned.

A frontier clash last Friday, in which a Pole was killed, precipitated the tension between Poland and Lithuania.

Cancels Speech Tour.

Polish official sources admitted that "certain demands" had been made in categorical form, but there were flat assertions in Warsaw that no ultimatum had been issued.

Developments in the Spanish civil war might vitally affect both Germany and Italy.

Hitler canceled plans to speak in a number of Austrian cities because of the gravity of European affairs.

When he ordered the Reichstag convened, there was no mention of his purpose except the announcement of a "declaration."

Progress Reported Made.

Official Polish sources described the "demands" made to Lithuania as of such character that they did not involve Lithuanian prestige but "clothed in such words that Lithuania could not accept them without hurt to her pride."

Lithuania appeared to be in a concilatory mood. It was stated that progress had been made in the last 24 hours but that the situation still had not been cleared up.

Kidnaper of Ross Condemned to Die By Federal Jury

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—A Federal court jury tonight condemned kidnaper John Henry Seadlund—the man who told Government agents he'd rather "burn" than languish in prison—to death in the electric chair.

The jurors answered "yes" to the question of whether the extreme penalty should be imposed on Seadlund, 27-year-old former Ironton, Minn., lumberjack, who pleaded guilty to the $50,000 ransom abduction of Charles S. Ross, 72, retired Chicago greeting card manufacturer. The trial, which began Monday, was solely on that question.

The slim, curly-haired defendant received the news with no visible display of emotion. He scanned the jurors intently as each was polled.

He even contrived to smile—a rather set smile—as he was escorted from the courtroom.

Hitler's sudden return to Berlin was ascribed to word that Poland has presented an ultimatum to Lithuania, believed based on a clash along the Polish-Lithuanian frontier, (1). The Polish Corridor (3) is a sore spot between Germany and Poland, and there have been suggestions Poland might try to get some Lithuanian territory in this struggle. Nazis Wipe Out Last Vestiges Of Old Austria

Customs and Men Vanish as Regimentation Is Completed.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 16.—Austria's Nazi masters swept away the last traces of her sovereignty today with the efficiency of a new broom.

Customs, institutions, men vanished. Nazi regimentation appeared and with it worry, rumor and denunciations.

Maj. Emil Fey, anti-Nazi and iron man of the Dollfuss regime, was found dead in his home. Beside him were the bodies of his wife and 20-year-old son. Newspapers said he killed them and then shot himself.

French Troops Rush to Border; May Aid Spain

Paris Prepares to Scrap Policy if Reich, Italy Give Aid to Rebels.

By the United Press.

Paris, March 16.—French troops were rushed to the Spanish border tonight and the government, after consultation with Great Britain, prepared to scrap its nonintervention policy and pour arms and other aid into Spain if Germany and Italy send reinforcements to the Spanish rebels.

After a tense day of conferences between Paris and London, both governments agreed tentatively to support the nonintervention policy, providing there was "positive assurance" that Germany had not sent large numbers of troops into Spain to spearhead Gen. Franco's drive on Barcelona.

The fact that the drive has been halted, according to Spanish reports, as a result of immense sup-

U.S. Operatic Star Will Not Sing in Nazified Austria

New York, March 16 (AP).—Alexander Kipnis, famed bass-barytone, has renounced his position as one of Austria's best-loved singers.

Although Kipnis' position was so strong in Berlin that he remained there over three years after Nazi control was established, he finally left Germany of his own volition.

He has cabled his American manager, Charles L. Wagner, that although his contract with the Vienna State Opera has several years to go, he will not sing there or in Salzburg while Nazis are in control.

The singer is an American citizen of Jewish faith.

Fey Kills Himself and Family As Suicides in Austria Mount

By the United Press.

Vienna, March 16.—A wave of suicides spread across Nazified Austria tonight, taking the lives of former monarchists, despondent Jews and professors of Vienna's famous medical clinics, as this 2,000-year-old nation became a mere province of the German Reich.

Maj. Emil Fey, former leader of the outlawed anti-Nazi Heimwehr and one-time vice chancellor of Austria, killed his wife and their 19-year-old son and then himself while rejoicing crowds shouted "Heil Hitler!" in the streets.

Fey, one of the outstanding figures of post-war Austria, fought the Nazis in their bloody putsch of four years ago and was at the side of Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss as the latter bled to death on a couch in the chancellory after being shot down by Nazi bullets.

Shortly after the Fey suicides Friedrich Reitlinger, Tyrolean industrialist who held power in the Heimwehr under Prince Ernst Rudiger von Stahremberg, persuaded his daughter Jane to shoot him and then kill herself rather than submit to Adolf Hitler's rule over Austria.

Dr. Gustav Bayer, 63-year-old professor of medicine, and his daughter Helga committed suicide at Innsbruck in the Tyrol by swallowing morphine and turning on gas jets.

Jewish leaders reported that suicides among their people were in-

The British government promised its warships to keep open France's communication with Africa if this were threatened by Italo-German forces now fighting in Spain. Lord Halifax, addressing the House of Lords, warned Hitler that the peace of Europe might be endangered if Germany attacked Czechoslovakia.

France Promised Help.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 16.—Great Britain tonight promised that her navy would help defend French communications with Africa if Italo-German forces in Spain should threaten them, and called on Germany to respect her promise that her coup in Austria was not aimed at the Czech republic.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax warned Germany that if she wished to "see European peace maintained" she must respect the assurance she gave to Czechoslovakia following Hitler's seizure of Austria.

[Commons shortly before midnight approved, 317 to 141, Chamberlain's policy of continued strict nonintervention in Spain, rejecting a Laborite motion assailing the government for "the lack of any policy on the part of the government to counterarmed intervention in Spain by certain foreign powers, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

Lord Halifax warned Germany in the House of Lords in his first public statement on the swift-moving events which have brought Europe dangerously near the brink of war.

Ending the government's refusal to commit itself on the issue of Czechoslovakia, Lord Halifax recalled assurances Germany gave Czechoslovakia last week-end that the annexation of Austria was not aimed at her.

"Assurances Given."

"Those assurances were solemnly given and more than once repeated," he said. "We naturally expect the German government to obey them, and if indeed they (the German government) desire to see peace maintained—as I earnestly hope they do—there is no quarter in Europe in which it is more vital that undertakings should scrupulously be respected."

Enemies Fade As Vote Nears On 'Big Navy'

Less Than 100 to Oppose President's Bill in Ballot Due on Monday.

By Sidney Olson.

Not more than 100 votes will be cast against the President's "big Navy" bill in the final vote, scheduled for next Monday, House leaders predicted last night.

Pointing to waning opposition in debate and the wide split in Republican ranks over the billion-dollar measure, leaders indicated their belief that the tense European situation had shoved "off the fence" a number of undecided members who have thus far had intended to vote against the bill.

Debate closed last night, after dragging along, with only sporadic outbreaks, for three days of the dullest and least exciting talk in the House this year. The lack of fireworks has held attendance far below that on any other major measure.

Republicans Make Pledge.

Republicans again trudged to the well of the House yesterday to pledge support to the bill, headed by Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the Naval Affairs Committee, who shouted that "the best way to force a disarmament conference is to build a navy that will show the world we mean business.

"If there is going to be a naval race," he said, "we must win it."

Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican), of New York, in a pointed speech warned the House that "even with the proposed increase, the Navy will be scarcely sufficient to protect only the Pacific Coast."

He said, "A weak Navy is a waste of money."

Still another Republican, Representative James W. Mott, of Oregon, went to the defense of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, asserting attacks on it by certain Democrats have been "completely unjustified —without foundation and without a single iota of evidence." He said:

"If I were a Democrat, and thought some of the things that you think about your President, I would have no alternative but to demand his impeachment.

"On the contrary, I think he is right and he is honest."

Taber Opposes Bill.

But Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, refused to join the march of the minority to the side of the President, and urged that the House refuse to grant authorization for the construction of three new battleships in the bill.

"The United States now has authorization to build all the war vessels its yard and designers can handle," he said. But even Taber, while opposed to this section, said he did not oppose the program as a whole.

The close of debate yesterday opened the way to reading of the bill for amendments, which is expected to consume the time of the House today and tomorrow. Light attendance is expected today, as many members have St. Patrick's Day speaking engagements.

TVA Delays Action.

One reason for the slowness of action on this bill, which could easily be passed today under pressure, has been the reluctance of the leaders to conclude the measure before the President interviews the three TVA directors tomorrow morning.

The reason is that immediately on conclusion of the Navy expansion program, the conference report on the independent offices appropriation bill becomes the business of the House. In that bill is the highly controversial item of $2,700,000 to begin construction of the proposed $112,000,000 Gilbertsville (Ky.) dam, keystone of future TVA expansion.

Leaders do not want a vote taken on that item until after the President's TVA conference.

Politics and People

Pat Harrison Not Vengeful, But Acting as Wise Leader in Opposing Profits Tax.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Senator Pat Harrison's declaration in favor of outright repeal of the undistributed profits tax has been interpreted as one of the most significant signs of times and trends on Capitol Hill we have yet witnessed.

It has been pointed out that a year ago Senator Harrison was a loyal Administration supporter—that as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee he would not then have dreamed of publicly taking a stand on a tax matter directly and flatly contrary to wishes of the White House. Some observers have unkindly suggested that Senator Harrison is now showing his teeth in retaliation for his White House treatment in the Senate leadership fight last summer.

The latter observation is unfair to the Mississippian. It is true that he has taken a stand against the White House which he would not have taken a year ago. But it is not because he is now moved by any spirit of revenge. Incidentally, actions in politics inspired by revenge seldom get very far.

The real reason that motivated Senator Harrison is that the spirit of the times has changed. Let it be recalled that several weeks ago Mr. Robert C. Albright published in The Post results of a survey he made of Finance Committee members which showed that 13 out of 21 members were ready publicly to assert they favored complete repeal of the undistributed profits tax—and Senator Harrison was not one of those then favoring repeal.

So it is not a question of Senator Harrison leading a revolt in the Senate against the fancy tax schemes of the Administration. Senator Harrison is trying to keep at the head of the procession. One cannot long remain a leader marching at the foot of the column.

Obviously Senator Harrison has carefully surveyed the Senate situation. He has taken account of the widespread hostility to the undistributed profits tax, not alone among big businessmen but also among little businessmen—on whom it bears down the heaviest —and has concluded that the undistributed profits tax is doomed. Senator Harrison has never been one to beat his head against stone walls.

Who was the wise man in public life who said: "I am a leader; therefore I must follow."

The really significant thing about all of this is that the tides of public opinion have changed. From 1932 until about a year ago popular sentiment was running toward change, experimentation, innovation and white rabbits. This was a reaction against Hoover's sit-tight, stand-pat attitude. Now there is a reaction from unorthodox practices. The white rabbits turned out to be illusions and the country decided it wanted something more substantial.

Keener than most of our politicans, President Roosevelt sensed this change in public sentiment many months ago. It is one reason why he has not rushed out with new panaceas to combat the recession—why we have had no fireside chats. He cannot be sure whether the country would respond favorably. Indeed, it is a good bet that Mr. Roosevelt will become increasingly cautious and conservative, unless public opinion changes. He, too, leads by following.

The President may try to put up some kind of a fight for retention of the principle of the undistributed profits tax as a facesaver. But it is clear that the substance of the undistributed profits tax is doomed, for the House has become no more amenable to the Presidential will than the Senate in this matter. True that body retained the principle in the bill, but it slapped hard at the White House when it threw the so-called "third basket" provision out of the window and when it repealed the existing publicity provision on corporation salaries in excess of $15,000.

And the undistributed profits tax should go out of the law. It was put there, not as a revenue raiser, but primarily to crack down on corporations and especially big corporations. But as usually happens it hurt the little fellows more than the big ones, The latter already had surpluses to lean against.

The damage of the undistributed profits tax, however, has not been limited to individuals. Along with the capital gains tax, it has had a detrimental effect on the entire economic structure of the Nation. For the essence of a capitalistic system is capital and the opportunity of capital to make a profit.

As Leonard P. Ayres, the economic analyst, has so well phrased it in the current Cleveland Trust Co. Business Bulletin, "Financial anemia is the ailment from which American business is suffering."

"Anemia is a lack of blood," he pointed out. "Financial anemia is a deficiency in the flow of new business capital. The capitalistic system requires a continuous flow of new capital, and in our case the flow has become inadequate, and business stagnation has resulted.

"There are two main sources of new business capital. One consists of the internal savings of business. These are funds companies earn and plow back into their own operations in the form of replacements, additions and betterments of plant and equipment. A second source is new capital raised by sale of securities. This capital comes from external savings of others, rather than from the internal savings made by the companies themselves."

First the New Deal placed a tourniquet on one arm of the economic structure through severe restrictions in security trading and drastic taxation of incomes and capital gains. Then it placed a tourniquet on the other arm through the undistributed profits tax. It was all done with the best of motives—to save us from bleeding to death, so the New Deal surgeons said. But their action stopped the flow of blood.

On Capitol Hill

A bill to establish transportation zones, fix railroad fares at from $1 to not more than $5, and guarantee the roads an annual income equal to their average income for the last ten years was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota. His measure would make the highest fare for a trip from New York to the Pacific Coast, $5; from New York to Chicago, $3. The plan also calls for a $500,000,000 appropriation and is called "postalizing transportation."

A proposal to amend the communications act to make it a Federal offense to use the radio, telephone or telegraph in the commission or attempted commission of a violation of United States law was made yesterday by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California. His bill also provides that evidence obtained by wire tapping might be used in court if obtained by Federal officials after authorization by a Government department. Lea said the Treasury and Justice departments had expressed need for such an act since a recent court decision holding evidence obtained by wire tapping could not be permitted in prosecution.

Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, announced yesterday he would be a candidate for reelection from the Fifth Florida District.

James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers yesterday before a Senate sub-committee contended the Borah-O'Mahoney industrial licensing bill would create "confusion" and "uncertainty" in industry. Emery said the bill would "compel reorganization or reincorporation of the manufacturing, mercantile and the major farm co-operative business of the United States."

The master at arms force and guards, now in service at the United States Naval Academy, will become policemen if a bill introduced by Representative Gambrill (Democrat), of Maryland, is enacted. Salaries would range from $1,700 for the privates to $2,500 for the captains.

Roosevelt Seen Ready to Enter Fight for Tax

Administration Opposed to Modifying of Corporate and Capital Levies.

The President still is firmly supporting central business tax provisions of the House tax bill, and may take an indirect hand in the Senate's tax modification fight when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

This conviction was expressed last night by a recent White House visitor who discussed the tax measure with the President. This spokesman said the Administration will oppose drastic modification by the Senate Finance Committee of House corporation income and capital gains tax provisions.

Backed by an overwhelming Finance Committee majority, Chairman Pat Harrison already has proposed to "give business a push" by substituting moderate flat rates on corporate income and capital gains for the graduated House tax rates.

Tug of War Expected.

A tug of war between Administration forces, seeking Senate enactment of House tax provisions, and the Senate Finance Committee majority, favoring more robust tax encouragement to business, is in prospect when the bill goes to the floor. This fight on fundamental tax bill provisions will continue through the final showdown in conference.

No evidences of friction have developed to date within the Finance Committee, which is almost solidly aligned behind Chairman Harrison in his determination to make a recovery measure out of the bill by lightening business tax loads.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley is one of the few members of the Finance Committee who does not see eye to eye with the chairman on tax modification, but he has been withholding his fire and has attended few of the preliminary conferences.

Ideas Only Tentative.

Harrison's recommendations as yet are only in tentative form. He proposes a 15 per cent flat tax on capital gains realized on assets held more than one or two years. He would scale down all individual income surtax brackets over 60 per cent, and would substitute flat corporate income tax rate of 17, 18 or 19 per cent for the 16-to-20 per cent undivided profits tax principle advocated by the House.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill said last night he has prepared revenue estimates on the Harrison proposals, but declined to make them public until he has laid them before the Senate committee, probably this morning.

This afternoon, three days of public hearings will open before the Finance Committee, with R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railways, leading the list of witnesses.

Nearly three score spokesmen, primarily from business concerns and organizations, have asked to testify before hearings close Saturday. Time of witnesses will be cut down so hearings can be completed in the three days alloted. Chairman Harrison said the committee will go into executive session to draft the Senate bill next Monday, and a report to the Senate probably will be made the following week.

Meanwhile, a new proposal for releasing frozen assets to set new business credit in motion was advanced by Senator Clyde L. Herring (Democrat), of Iowa. Senator Herring agrees with Chairman Harrison that modification of the capital gains tax is probably the most needed change in the bill.

"Step-Down" Proposed.

The Iowa Senator called for Treasury estimates on a plan to bring maximum relief to capital gains taxpayers after they have held property three years. The House proposed a graduated "step-down" schedule bringing maximum relief at the end of five years, instead of the ten-year holding requirement in the present law.

The Herring proposal would take 100 per cent of gains from property, held only one year, into account for tax purposes. But after the first year, the amount of the gain taxed would be reduced by 3 per cent a month for 12 months. In the third year, reduction in the amount of gains taxable would continue at the rate of 2 per cent a month. Maximum relief would be reached at the end of the third year, when only 40 per cent of the gain would be taken into account for tax purposes.

The Finance Committee has given no consideration to restoring the proposed 20 per cent penalty surtax on close-held corporations, which was advocated by the President, but defeated in the House.

Governor Murphy Terms Minimum Wage 'Inevitable'

Lansing, Mich., March 16 (AP).—Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, describing a minimum annual wage as "inevitable," expressed belief today Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, is "the man best able" to start such a program.

"I hope very much," the Governor told newsmen, "that Mr. Henry Ford, who did so much for the country and the whole industrial world by fixing a high minimum wage, will give his attention to this problem."

He added, "an annual wage for workers is inevitable. This present situation, with millions of unemployed, just can't go on or our present economic system is a failure. Solution of this problem will be a greater contribution than anything else to our economic life.

"If industry does not meet the situation voluntarily," Murphy said, "then the Government must, and will do it."

Safety education in the schools does save lives of children, the Department of Agriculture declared yesterday in announcing publication of a pamphlet, "Guides to Traffic Safety" prepared by the executive committee of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

From 1926 to 1935 child deaths in traffic decreased 18 per cent while deaths of adults increased 91 per cent. The greatest gains have been with grammar school children, the Bureau of Public Roads found.

The bureau declared that high schools need training courses for drivers to carry on the safety idea to young people about to drive.

3 More Brokers Held in Thefts From Patrons

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 16.—Three brokers were arrested for grand larceny today when they went to Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., to be questioned about alleged misuse of $165,000 worth of securities belonging to customers. Max Friedman, 33, assistant cashier of another firm, also was arrested.

The accused men were Hugo G. Campagoli, president and treasurer of Campagnoli & Co.; Joseph B. Schubert, secretary, and William H. Ferris, vice president.

They pleaded not guilty and posted $5,000 each. They were indicted on 28 counts of larceny.

Friedman came back from a Florida vacation when his accounts at the firm of Butler, Herrick & Marshall were found short $128,000. "I lost the money on the horse races," acting Police Capt. John G. Stein quoted Friedman as saying after his arrest. Friedman had worked for the firm 17 years.

Meanwhile, Richard Whitney pleaded guilty to a second indictment charging grand larceny for the theft of securities worth $109,384 from the New York Yacht Club.

Whitney, a former president of the New York Stock Exchange, who was head of the bankrupt firm of Richard Whitney & Co., was indicted by the New York County grand jury yesterday.

The complaint was made by Commodore William A. W. Stewart, of the Yacht Club. He charged that Whitney, as custodian of the club's securities, had hypothecated them for a personal loan, the funds being placed to the credit of his firm.

The other indictment, to which Whitney pleaded guilty Monday, concerned the larceny of $105,000 in securities belonging to the estate of his father-in-law, George R. Sheldon, which Whitney was accused of using as collateral for a bank loan.

Before he was arraigned today, Whitney sat among the spectators for about ten minutes, awaiting arrival of Judge Owen W. Bohan.

At the request of counsel, Judge Bohan fixed March 28 for sentence and continued Whitney's $35,000 bail on the two indictments.

Each of the charges carries a maximum penalty of from five to ten years imprisonment.

After his arraignment, he was taken to a detention pen for fingerprinting. Later he was to be questioned by the probation bureau of the court, a formality which helps the judge decide what penalty should be imposed.

Policeman to Face Scrutiny Of Coed Assaulted in Park

George Washington Student to Confront Officer Arrested at Zoo as 'Peeping Tom;' Description Tallies With Her Assailant.

A policeman arrested last week at the Zoo as a "Peeping Tom" will be brought to Police Headquarters at 10 a. m. today for suspension and possible identification as the attacker of a George Washington University coed in Rock Creek Park last October.

After his arrest by a Zoo policeman, District authorities found his description fitted that given by Ruth McMillen as the man who slashed her with a knife and beat her unconscious.

It was learned yesterday that the policeman, married and the father of a son, had also figured in a case of indecent exposure recently.

Last October, while on way to a weiner roast of the Colonial Campus Club, 19-year-old Miss McMillen, of 219 Whittier street northwest, became lost in the park between the Taft and Calvert Street bridges. She asked a well-dressed man for directions.

He seized her, forced her behind a pile of stones and beat her unconscious when she screamed. Then he slashed her with a knife. She was found about 20 minutes later, wandering dazed and hysterical.

Miss McMillen will go to headquarters today to see if the arrested policeman is her attacker.

About the same time several other young women were less severely attacked in the vicinity. Police will seek to determine if the suspect was responsible for these assaults also. He will be held for trial by the Police Trial Board.

Police Fear Children May Get Stolen Poison

Philadelphia, March 16 (AP).—A stolen package containing enough poison capsules, police said, to kill several persons was the object of a concerted search today.

The package disappeared from a truck parked in south Philadelphia near where a group of children were playing.

Detroiter Offers To Give Eye So Pa. Boy Can See

Harrisburg, Pa., March 16 (AP).—A Detroit man today offered his right eye to little Roger Laverty, Lansdale, Pa., boy whose mother agreed to sacrifice an eye to save the child's sight.

The offer came in a letter to Gov. Earle from Ed W. Detrick, a former Pennsylvanian.

Board Opens Way To Lawyer Appeal

The board of Police Court judges yesterday overruled a motion to strike a bill of exception filed with the Court of Appeals by John P. Mullen, local lawyer recently found guilty of soliciting a case. An order suspending Mullen from practice in Police Court has been entered by Judge John P. McMahon.

The motion was placed before the Police Court judges by Austin F. Canfield, chairman of the District Bar Association grievance committee which charged Mullen.

The overruling of the motion clears the path for action by the Court of Appeals.

Mullen originally was charged with conspiring to overcharge a defendant in securing bond and with soliciting the same case when the defendant already had an attorney. The conspiracy charge later was dismissed.

House Is Given Anti-Numbers Bill After Row

Chairman Is Overridden as Committee Rushes Delayed Report.

Riding roughshod over its chairman, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, the House District Committee yesterday voted to report favorably with amendments the anti-numbers bill which has been deadlocked in committee more than a year.

The action was taken at the stormiest session of the committee, which has a reputation for stormy meetings, and only after four members had been summoned to provide a quorum.

Chairman Palmisano tried to adjourn the meeting over the cries of protest from his colleagues before the quorum arrived, and he had started to leave the room when the quartet walked in.

Goes to Telephone.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, had acted as generalissimo of the revolt. When Palmisano announced that a quorum was not present and a vote on the bill would have to be deferred, Schulte went to the telephone, made several calls, and returned with the pronouncement:

"A quorum will be here."

A few minutes later Schulte and Palmisano became embroiled in an altercation and the meeting burst into an uproar. Schulte charged the chairman with trying to protect the numbers racket, while Palmisano recalled that the Indainian had opposed a $10,000 increase on the police appropriation in the District supply bill.

Four More Enter Room.

As the four additional members walked into the room, Palmisano said, "The committee already has adjourned."

Members shouted back that they didn't have to adjourn and wouldn't, while others urged the chairman to return to his seat.

Grumbling that most of the members didn't know what they were voting on, Palmisano consented to call the meeting to order again.

Representatives Brewster (Republican), of Maine, and Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, challenged the chairman's statement as they insisted that no one could prevent a member from voting on any bill at any time.

Bill Is Approved.

"I wasn't trying to block the bill," Palmisano added. "I just thought we ought to wait until Tuesday to bring it up so the members could study the hearings and the amendments."

In the executive session that followed the committee approved the bill, together with the amendments suggested by United States Attorney David A. Pine, with Palmisano casting the sole dissenting vote.

After the meeting Palmisano said he would not attempt to prevent the bill from coming up on the next District day, March 28, but he said he might offer an amendment.

After passing the House the bill will have to return to the Senate for action on the amendments.

ROTC System Wins Praise at School Session

Dr. Byrd Extols Results as Aid to Defenses of Nation.

The excellent results obtained by R. O. T. C. training both in character building as "an integer in national defense" were extolled yesterday by Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of Maryland University, in an address before the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States.

He explained that educators were almost unanimous in their approval of the system and added that men who had been "through the mill" also were overwhelmingly in favor of compulsory military training in schools and colleges.

Denying that praticipation in R. O. T. C. activities develops militaristic tendencies, Dr. Byrd said, "the peace of the world will not be assured by the United States laying down its arms and making itself vulnerable to attack by less idealistic nations."

The land-grant colleges of the United States, he continued, owe their existence in part to Congress' realization that the Federal forces at the outbreak of the War Between the States were completely without trained reserves.

As a result, he said, the law providing for land grants to colleges required the institutions benefiting from the act to require military training as part of their curricula.

Earlier in the day Lieut. Col. A. M. Hitch, of Kemper Military Academy, urged fathers not to attempt to be "pals" with their sons.

Asserting that the effort would fail, he explained the attempt would only result in "allowances" which would do the boys no good.

He stated that youths today are as fine as they ever were and declared, "it is the parents" and teachers' duty to find out what a boy has and develop it."

Woman Employed 7 Years as Bellboy

St. Louis, March 16 (AP).—A "bellboy," employed at a downtown hotel for seven years, was discovered to be a woman when examined today by City Hospital physicians, Police Capt. Robert Kaiser announced.

Picked up for routine questioning, the bellboy, 27, gave the name of John Brown. Kaiser said his suspicions were aroused when he talked with the prisoner and he ordered the hospital examination.

Van Duzer Considering New License Tag Date

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday he was considering plans to change the expiration date of automobile tags from December 31 to February 1.

This, he said, not only would give employes of his department a chance to enjoy the holidays, but would be in keeping with States' laws. Numerous State laws, he pointed out, permit the use of tags until April of the year following issuance.

Hitler's Promises To Italy Told in Mussolini Paper

Milan, Italy, March 16 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's promise to prove Germany's friendship "if one day Italy needs it" was published Tuesday in Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia.

An interview with the Fuehrer in Vienna told of the promise in return for Il Duce's acquiescence to Hitler's absorption of Austria.

Mussolini's newspaper quoted Hitler as saying:

"Believe me, I shall absolutely never forget what Italy has done.

"All the German people will not forget what Mussolini and Italy have done—our friendship above all formalities.

"The (Rome-Berlin) axis is stronger than ever. We are ready to demonstrate our friendship and gratitude to you if one day Italy has need of it."

Austria

Jewish. There was no charge and no explanation.

Photographer Seized.

Alfred Tyrnauer, a representative of the International News Service, was arrested twice and his Austrian passport confiscated. His situation at present was not known.

Three attaches of the United States Legation were busy throughout the morning investigating searches of at least two homes of Americans and the Associated Press office. In the latter, four pictures were confiscated. Two of them, showing a Viennese night club scene, were more than two years old.

Three correspondents of British and American newspapers left the country. They were Friedrich Scheu, of the Daily Herald of London; M. W. Fodor, of the Chicago Daily News, and Douglas Reed, of the Times of London. A women representative of a Belgrade newspaper was under house arrest.

Suspicion Reigns.

Friends were afraid to talk to friends. Business colleagues were suspicious of each other, fearful they had made too loyal or too disloyal utterances in the past. Telephone users made elaborate codes to assure themselves of the identity of their listeners.

Jewish stores were placarded. Trucks drove up to them and carted away clothes, perfume, shoes, hats, soap, toothpaste.

Viennese police took the oath to Hitler before Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police, now their commander.

Courses in National Socialism opened. "Heil Hitler" was made the official greeting in all schools. Five big Viennese theaters closed.

Brownshirt Austrian "SA" troops were being reorganized, with Arthur Seyss-Inquart, governor of Austria, as chief. The Alpinist Association, owner of many mountain ski huts, was being incorporated in the Hitler youth organization.

Women's Groups Liquidated.

A new Nazi commissioner was named to the national library—one of the Hapsburgs' and Vienna's greatest prides.

All women's organizations were liquidated.

Every Dollfuss platz—named for the Austrian chancellor who was assassinated in a Nazi putsch in 1934—was renamed for Hitler.

The Max Reinhardt plaza, in front of the Salzburg festival theater, was no more. The signs were taken down today.

Reinhardt, a Jew, had been the guiding spirit of the festival since its rebirth 17 years ago. It was learned he would not direct at Salzburg the two presentations—Jedermann and Faust—which have been an integral part of the festival for a decade.

Theaters Are Purged.

The two state theaters—the Opera and Burg—and three private playhouses were purged. Commissioners, it was anounced, were being named to seven musical organizations including the world-famous Vienna Symphony Orchestra.

The four days of patriotic ecstacy were over. Austrian Germans began looking for the promised benefits of Nazidom. Some firms raised pay in expectation of better times. Textile factories boomed on orders for Nazi uniforms.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

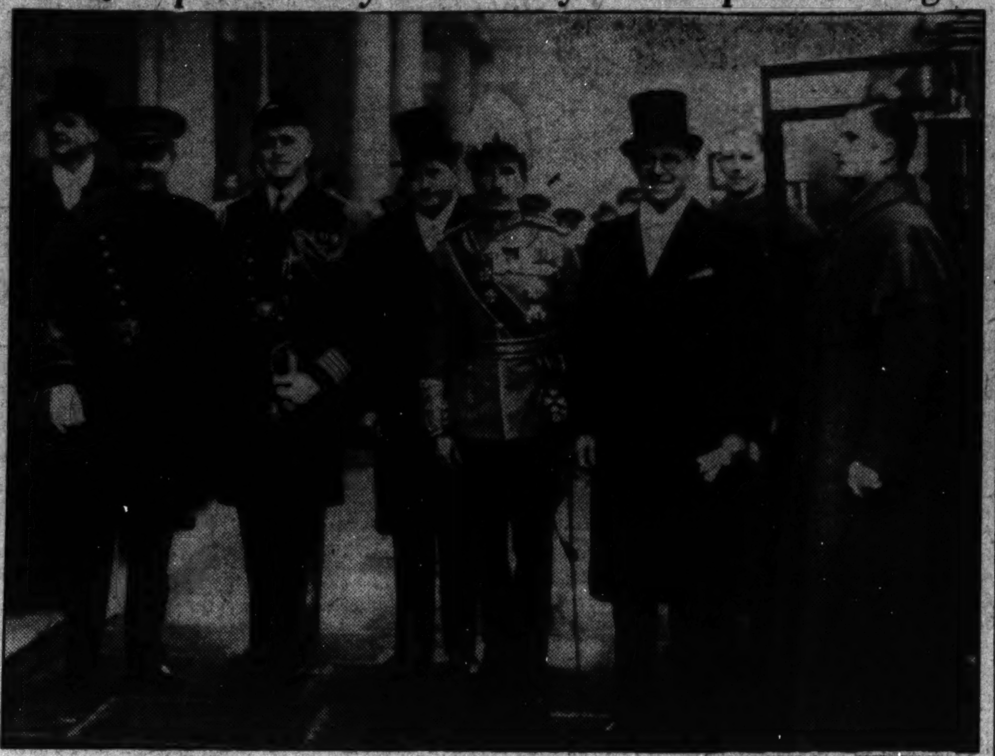
As Joseph Kennedy Left to Pay His Respects to King



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Joseph P. Kennedy (second from right) was the center of a ceremony March 8 when he paid his respects to King George VI as the new United States Ambassador to London. In the official group are (left to right) Col. Raymond E. Lee; U. S. military attache; Capt. Russell Willson, U. S. naval attache; Herschel Johnson, U. S. councilor, and Sir Sydney Clive, marshal of the London diplomatic corps, as they left for the audience.

French Troops Rush to Border; May Aid Spain

Paris

plies of arms from "a nearby government," led to widespread belief that France already had begun to shove military supplies over the border.

Rumors spread through the Bourse, during a wild day, that Premier Blum had appealed to Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain to approve French naval occupation of the Island of Minorca, off the Spanish Coast, but this was denied officially.

However, French mobilization of arms along the Franco-Spanish frontier was the most intensive in months. Three battalions of field artillery were rushed into the Pyrenees from Hendaye, and anti-aircraft batteries took new positions in the mountains overlooking the border.

Acting on secret instructions of the national defense council, frontier guards were strengthened from Pedpignan to Hendaye, while across the Mediterranean in North Africa defensive positions were strengthened around electric power sources in Algiers and Oran.

The Quai d'Orsay denied emphatically that Blum had made any suggestions to Chamberlain, beyond reaffirming French support of the nonintervention agreement, with the provision for immediate "reconsideration" if other powers step into the Spanish picture.

Meanwhile France, faced with growing threats on three sides due to the increasingly tense Czechoslovakian situation, conferred with Russia on the question of lending military aid to the Prague government in the event of any encroachment by Germany.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul Boncour conferred with the Soviet embassy and received assurances that Russia would join France in military support for Czechoslovakia in the event of an attack.

Blum prepared to go before parliament tomorrow with his program of three vital problems, asking a vote of confidence. The cabinet, after an all-day session, was understood to have settled on these three points:

France will seek to maintain the status quo in Spain, reiterating her nonintervention policy.

France will assure Czechoslovakia that she will honor her treaty with that country and go to her assistance if she is attacked.

The Blum government will affirm its opposition to exchange control and its adherence to the tri-power monetary agreement with Great Britain and the United States.

These represent the minimum in each of the policies that Blum must declare in order to satisfy the Popular Front and the rightist opposition, but it is no secret that Blum is not satisfied with the trend of policies. Three times he has referred publicly to his cabinet in apologetic terms.

3 U. S. Navy Ships Wait to Evacuate Citizens in Spain

By the Associated Press.

Franco's new drive in Spain put the United States' European Naval Squadron on the alert yesterday for orders to evacuate American citizens whom new fighting may endanger.

Commanded by Rear Admiral Henry E. Lackey, the light cruiser Raleigh and the destroyers Claxton and Manley, comprising the squadron, were at nearby French ports ready for any emegency.

Several hundred American Nationals, practicaly all Puerto Ricans and Filipinos, remain in Spain, despite repeated official pleas that they leave.

American consular officers remaining in Spain have been given authority temporarily to close their offices and seek safety whenever they considered their posts unsafe.

Jews Celebrate Purim, Their Gayest Festival

Jews the world over last night began a 24-hour celebration of Purim, gayest festival on the Hebraic calendar, which will end at sunset today.

Commemorative services were held in Washington synagogues, featuring the traditional reading of the "Megillah," which tells the story of Purim. The holiday marks the triumph of Queen Esther and her cousin Mordecai over the villainous Haman, prime minister to King Ahasuerus.

Nazis Jail Austrian Foes; Fear of Persecution Drives Others to Suicide

HERBERT FEY, son of Emil Fey, former vice chancellor of Austria, was slain with his mother by the Hitler-hating Fey, who then committed suicide.

EMIL FEY, who chose death for himself and family rather than face Nazi persecution. Other prominent Viennese leaders decided similarly.

KURT, Jr., 11-year-old son of deposed Chancellor Schuschnigg, who remained under arrest rather than allow his son to be a Nazi hostage.

KURT SCHUSCHNIGG, who preferred arrest by Nazis rather than flee and leave his son behind as a "pledge" of his father's "discretion."

WILHELM MIKLAS, deposed president, about whose home a cordon of Nazi soldiers has been thrown to "protect him."

OTTO LOEWI, distinguished Austrian scientist who shared in the Nobel prize for medicine in 1936, has been arrested by Nazis.

HANNES SCHNEIDER, world-famous ski teacher and Schuschnigg supporter, was arrested and placed under guard in a schoolhouse.

DR. HEINRICH NEUMANN, throat specialist, who once treated Duke of Windsor when he was King, was arrested because he gave funds to Fatherland Front Party.

VICTOR TLACH, an American, who is honorary consul general for Austria in Cleveland, resigned when ordered to fly a Nazi flag from the consulate.

Suicides Mount As 'Heil Hitler' Rules Austria

Tragedies

creasing by the hour and that the Nazi police—since yesterday a branch of the German secret police under Heinrich Himmler—took complacently the wave of self-destruction.

Prof. Gabo Nobl, 72-year-old dermatologist and university professor, and his wife ended their lives. Internationally famous, Nobl was a professor of the Vienna University and director of Vienna's general clinic.

Frau Dollfuss Flees.

White-haired Wilhelm Miklas, president of sovereign Austria through nine turbulent years, who was removed by the Nazis Sunday as German troops poured across the frontiers, was a prisoner of storm-troopers. Nazis said the storm-troops constituted a bodyguard assigned to protect Miklas from molestation.

Arrest of Baron Louis de Rothschild, of the Austrian house of the famous Jewish banking family, was confirmed tonight when it was announced that the baron had been seized on orders of the Nazi banking department. The near collapse of his Credit-Anstalt Bank in May, 1931, created panic and only government intervention saved it from closing.

Scores of Jews Seized.

As thousands of Jews sought to escape across the Czechoslovakian frontier, many without passports, scores were arrested by Nazi frontier guards.

The Polish, Hungarian and Rumanian diplomatic offices were besieged by hundreds of terrorized Jews trying to escape from Austria. The Hungarian consulate, summoning extra workers from Budapest, worked 12 hours a day coping with the demands.

The suicide of Fey, one of Austria's big men in the postwar regime, caused a sensation in Vienna. He was at the height of his prominence when Dollfuss was assassinated by the Nazis in July, 1934, and was held a prisoner while Dollfuss bled to death.

Fey, who was 50, was minister of public safety in 1933 under Dollfuss and then became vice chancellor. Born in 1888, Fey served with distinction in the World War and received Austria's highest decoration, the Maria Theresa order. He organized the Vienna heimwehr in 1927.

Faced Complete Ruin.

[Neighbors of Maj. Fey said he apparently had died in the face of complete ruin and, perhaps, worse, the Associated Press reported. Even the body of his favorite dog was found. All lay on the bedroom floor. A maid in the Fey household, who slept at the opposite end of the apartment, said she had heard no shots. According to friends, the Associated Press said, Fey hung a huge Swastika banner from the balcony of his home Monday, after the absorption of Austria as a part of Germany had been accomplished. But when he tried to enter his office in the Danube Steamship Co. the next day, they said, he was ejected under humiliating circumstances. Almost at the same time his son had been dismissed from the Austrian army in which he had begun his military career, the Associated Press added.—Editor's note.]

Financier Arrested.

Among Austrian Jews reported arrested trying to escape across the northeastern frontier into Czechoslovakia were Siegmund Bosel, Viennese financier, and Karl Bondy, newspaper publisher.

In Bosel's automobile, it was asserted, the Nazis found $70,000 worth of jewels and a large amount of money sewn between the fabric and lining of his clothing.

Bondy published several anti-Nazi newspapers, and the Nazis, as soon as they seized power, confiscated them and published them with a Swastika cross in the title, devoting the columns to a bitter anti-Semitic campaign.

Schuschnigg Guarded.

Vienna, March 16 (AP).—While Nazi newspapers reported the suicide of Maj. Emil Fey, strong man of the beaten Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's long fight against absorption by Germany, Schuschnigg himself was a tired, despairing man closely guarded in his Belvedere palace home.

Reliable sources said the former chancellor was offered an opportunity to flee with his wife into Hungary, provided his sons remained in Austria as hostages to guarantee that he would never renew his fight against the new Nazi authority. He refused, the source said, and became a prisoner.

Under equally close guard was President Miklas, who was stripped of the last vestige of his authority when Hitler rode triumphantly into Vienna.

Fleeing were even distant relatives of the once proud house of Hapsburg from the country their line had ruled a thousand years. Since any Hapsburg might be a leader behind whom a handful of the Monarchists—bitterly opposed to absorption by Hitler—might rally, there was safety for none of them in their hereditary kingdom.

Disappearing into concentration camps were many lesser figures of the Schuschnigg regime. One camp was set up in the Northwest Railday Station in Vienna, which was no longer used for train traffic. Thus, it was reported, vanished Prof. Otto Loewi, famous scientist, who, in 1936, was awarded the Nobel prize for medicine and psychology.

Hitler Hurries From Austria to Call Reichstag Into Session Tomorrow to Hear 'Declaration'

Berlin

Sea, 300 miles west of Lithuania, were reported under steam, led to speculation that Germany might go to Poland's assistance if Russia took up Lithuania's cause.

In such an event, Poland, if victorious over Lithuania with German help, would probably return Lithuanian Memel to Germany, it was said.

An honor guard of infantrymen met the special plane which brought Hitler from Munich. Berlin was decked with garlands and an ocean of swastika flags.

In the evening, in response to insistent demands from the Berlin throng, he appeared on the chancellery balcony and declared:

"You can readily imagine how happy I feel to see all Germandom solidly behind me."

Poland Refuses Offer.

Kaunas, Lithuania, March 16 (AP). Little Lithuania tonight feared both Poland and Germany might seize advantage of European ferment to settle old scores with Lithuania.

The Baltic nation was apprehensive Poland's troops would be used to settle renewed border trouble between the two nations, friction which became worse after a frontier clash March 11 in which a Polish guard was killed.

Lithuanian officials said Poland had refused an offer to discuss the issue through Estonia, Lithuania's Baltic neighbor.

The situation was made more difficult by the fact Lithuania and Poland have been without normal diplomatic relations for the past 18 years due to Poland's seizure of Wilno (Vilna).

Her Fears Increased.

Lithuania's fears also were increased concerning her once-German city of Memel, included in Lithuania by the post-war settlement but regarded by Germany as "unredeemed territory."

With Russia to the east, Lithuania is wedged between three powerful neighbors.

(League of Nations officials in Geneva said Lithuania informally had indicated she would appeal the dispute to the League Council.)

Polish newspapers across Lithuania's frontiers openly were demanding force to settle the long-smouldering friction.

Explains Guard's Death.

The Lithuanian government maintained the Polish guard was killed last week when he penetrated far inside Lithuanian territory, and that in succeeding clashes the victims usually were Lithuanians.

Further trouble was averted, they said, by the withdrawal of Lithuanian troops when Polish soldiers crossed the border the same day.

Lithuania has never ceased to protest against Polish occupation of Wilno, so-called ancient Lithuanian capital, since the Polish general, Lucian Zeligowski seized it on October 9, 1920.

When the two countries emerged as separate republics after the World War, a definite frontier did not exist between them. Modern Poland was formed from Russian, Prussian and Austrian territory and Lithuania from Russian territory.

The League of Nations has attempted unsuccessfully to satisfy the dispute over Wilno. But a state of "latent war" has existed between the two countries.

Lithuania likewise has quarreled with Germany over Memel, once a part of Germany, but given to Lithuania to administer after the war. Nazi agitation in Memel frequently has brought tense relations with Germany.

Uncle of Farouk Is Visitor in N. Y.

New York, March 16 (AP).—Bringing "greetings from the land of the pyramids," Commissioner General Hussein Sabry Pacha, uncle of King Farouk of Egypt, arrived today to arrange for his country's display at the New York World's Fair.

His excellency, accompanied by the royal architect, Ahmed Sidky, said he hoped to see President Roosevelt and to visit Washington, Baltimore, New Orleans and possibly San Francisco.

Army Officer, Key To Rubens Case, Reported Hunted

By the United Press.

New York, March 16.—The Daily News will say tomorrow in a copyright dispatch that Federal officials are hunting an Army Reserve officer as key figure in the Robinson-Rubens passport mystery.

The officer, according to the news, resigned his commission and left New York on the week-end that the Government began a spy roundup, seizing two soldiers and a red-haired German woman on charges of sending U. S. Army, Navy and Air Corps defense secrets to Germany.

Artillery Repels Attack on Canal In War Practice

Colon, Panama, March 16 (AP).—Combined United States Army and Navy forces today ended a two-day was problem by defeating a simulated enemy attack against the Pacific entrance of the Panama Canal in an attempt to prevent transit of the United States fleet from the Atlantic.

Coast artillery on the Pacific Coast repulsed the "enemy" attempt to land raiding forces but planes theoretically inflicted heavy damages on canal supply depots.

The second phase of the annual departmental maneuvers will start Sunday when an "enemy" force arriving with transports will land large forces on the Pacific slope.

Spanish Rebels Encircle Caspe In Biggest Drive

Most of City Is Reported Taken by Them After Heavy Fighting.

By the Associated Press.

San Sebastian, Spain, March 16.—Spanish insurgent forces, front-line dispatches reported tonight, have encircled Caspe in their drive across the last mountain barrier to the government - held Mediterranean coast.

Most of the city was reported occupied by the insurgents after heavy fighting.

Earlier reports at Hendaye, France, on the Spanish frontier, said the insurgents were threatened with delay because they overran Caspe in their haste without properly mopping up and still faced government resistance there.

The government army, insurgent commanders reported, was attempting to reorganize its lines on the borders of Catalonia.

At Barcelona, insurgent air bombs scattered thousands of Catalonians, who massed around the president's palace to demand that the government continue resisting the insurgents at all costs.

They heard the fiery speeches of trade union and political leaders assuring them of the loyalty of their army and the determination of their government.

Insurgent patrols advanced on the left bank of the Guadalope River beyond Caspe, winning control of a road south to Alcaniz.

Franco's fliers downed four government planes in an air battle over Alcaniz, important government military base which has fallen to the insurgents.

Insurgent dispatches reported 10,000 government troops, including American and Canadian volunteers, had been captured in the first four days of the offensive.

Gen. Franco's fast-moving troops, which in less than a week penetrated more than 60 miles into government territory east of the old Zaragoza-Teruel line, seized control of the important Montalban-Alcaniz highway and sent advance parties through the San Just Mountains southeast of Montalban.

Franco checked his eastward drive at Raimundo—approximately 35 miles from the Mediterranean—and rushed troops from his main body back to Caspe to help smash government resistance. The government had sent reinforcements into the city from across the Ebro River.

It was apparent Franco intended to protect his coastward advance on the north by establishing a strong security line along the south bank of the Ebro. The government's foothold in Caspe endangered him from the north.

The government, recovering to some extent from its panicky disorganization of yesterday, hurried reinforcements up from southern fronts and undertook to enforce better discipline among troops struggling to prevent further loss of territory.

Barcelona authorities, in support of their contention that the government's terrific losses were due to German and Italian troops fighting with the insurgents, quoted a captured Italian aviator as saying Gen. Franco now has 700 Italian and German warplanes.

The Aragon line last week ran generally north from Teruel to the insurgent stronghold at Zaragoza. Today it strikes off to the northeast up the Alfambra Valley from Teruel to Montalban, then courses in a generally easterly direction along the Montalban-Alcaniz highway to Galando, on the Guadalope River.

From there it jumps across country to Torrevlilla, thence northeast through hill country to the strategic junction of the inland Barcelona-Valencia highway with the Alcaniz road. Raimundo is a tiny village adjacent to the junction and dominating it.

The line runs northwest through Valdealgorfa to Alcaniz and meanders along the east bank of the Guadalope River to the outskirts of Caspe. From there it swings northwest along the Ebro through Chiprana to Escatron and Fuentes de Ebro, in the Zaragoza sector.

3d Mystery Fire Breaks Out Upon Liner Berengaria

Southampton, England, March 16 (AP).—A third mysterious fire aboard the 52,101-ton British liner Berengaria broke out tonight while she was in her berth here.

The blaze, in a tourist cabin on C deck, was extinguished quickly by the ship's staff. Damage was slight.

Company officials said the cause was not known and began an investigation.

The Berengaria had just arrived from New York without passengers after a fire there swept the first-class lounge and caused damage estimated at more than $10,000.

On February 14, 60 firemen fought an hour to extinguish a fire in several of her cabins. That blaze also broke out in port here.

Japanese Enact Mobilization Bill

Tokyo, March 16 (AP).—The House of Representatives today passed without dissent, and without argument, the army-sponsored national mobilization bill against which House members had fought bitterly until a few days ago.

Opponents of the bill had declared it would place dictatorial wartime powers in the hands of the government and that it was copied after the laws of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

Duce Sanctions Austria's Fall, Warns Against Invading Italy

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 16.—Premier Mussolini approved Adolf Hitler's absorption of Austria today, but warned that any invasion of Italian frontiers would mean war.

"Our frontiers are sacred!" Il Duce shouted in a nation-wide broadcast. "We will not discuss them. We will defend them!"

His words clearly were an effort to stifle the anxiety of the Italian people, with Austria now only a province of Germany and the Nazi frontier at the Brenner Pass.

Thoughout Italy millions gathered around radios and loudspeakers to hear Il Duce's assurances that Italy's borders were inviolable and that anschluss was no menace.

Italy, he proclaimed, is not frightened by "the global figure of millions of Germans present on our frontiers."

"First of all Italy, this Italy, does not allow itself to be easily impressed," he declared. "This Italy has a firm will, a firm spirit. It marches straight ahead."

Mussolini defended Italy's acquiescence to the annexation of Austria as consistent with her past policy of defending Austria's independence. But, he declared, it would have been "an historical and political absurdity" for Austria, a German state, to have existed independent and anti-German.

The previous policy, he told a crowd that jammed the Chamber of Deputies, was based on the premise that Austria wanted independence.

Recent events, he declared, proved Austria no longer desired her freedom and, therefore, it would have been pointless for Italy to intervene against her ally in the Rome-Berlin axis.

"Italian interest in the independence of the Austrian federal state existed, but it was based on the premise that the Austrians, at least a majority of them, desired such independence," Mussolini said.

"But what has happened in these days in Austrian territory shows that the profound desire of the Austrian people was for anschluss.

"To the surviving cults of effete machiavellianism which we reject it may be observed that when an event is fated it is better to confront it with yourself rather than in spite of yourself or, even worse, against yourself."

Il Duce disclosed that he had counseled an emissary of the ousted Austrian chancellor, Kurt Schuschnigg, against the pleciscite Schuschnigg had proposed. He said it was "the first time in months" Austria had sought his advice.

"I told him in the most peremptory manner that it was a mistake," Mussolini declared. "'This bomb will explode in your hands,' I told him."

Calculations Wrong.

Mussolini charged that "the usual opponents of Fascism" hoped that the coup in Austria would cause a clash "between the two totalitarian states." But their calculations were wrong, he said.

"That clash would have been the prelude to a new world war . . .

"The moment had arrived instead to strengthen the axis . . . which the two totalitarian states follow (on the Rome-Berlin axis) in a parallel way.

"Now the German people know that the axis is not a diplomatic edifice effective only for normal occasions. It has been shown to be solidly established in this exceptional hour of the German world and all the world."

Sudeten Chief Calls on Czech Nazis to Rally

By the United Press.

Prague, March 16.—Karl Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German (Nazi) Party in Czechoslovakia, tonight issued a manifesto calling for the "support" of all Germans in "events of the most far-reaching importance."

The manifesto followed a series of attacks on the government which were viewed with grave fears as German troops poured into Austria below the Czech border, and threats of further "Germanic penetration" into central Europe became more imminent.

The Czech government has appealed to France and Great Britain for assurances and has announced its determination to oppose with arms any penetration such as was effected in Austria.

Asks Germans to Rally.

Henlein's manifesto, couched in words of exultation, declared that Germans "throughout the world must share the jubilation of our German brothers and sisters in Austria."

He called upon all Germans to join the Sudeten German Party. The manifesto said that Germans in Czechoslovakia must fight "for the right to live and honor our people."

The manifesto was made more alarming as it followed on the heels of a split between the German Farmers Party with the anti-Nazi German activist groups, after violent sessions in Parliament. The Farmers Party leaders charged that the activist movement was being led by Communists.

Franz Spina, minister without portfolio representing the German Farmers Party in the government, announced his resignation from the so-called Central Activist German parties, a coalition of anti-Nazi groups.

The decision stunned government leaders and political observers, who believe Spina's resignation may be a forerunner of a general resignation from the cabinet of five Farmers Party deputies, who may join the opposition.

Government Attacked.

Meanwhile in the Senate a new attack was made on the government by E. N. Huber, member of the Sudeten German Party, who issued a declaration in the name of his party asking whether Czechoslovakia would "change its domestic policy in accordance with the Swiss example and adapt its foreign policy to that of Switzerland and Belgium?"

"Only in this case," Huber said, "is the Sudeten German Party ready for co-operation. We tell you this before it is too late. It is now five minutes to twelve."

The Senate rose in an uproar, drowing out the voice of the speaker as senators clamored for recognition. The scene duplicated that in the chamber yesterday when a similar challenge was hurled by a Nazi deputy.

Guerrilla Raids, Counter Drives Rout Japanese

China Reports Invaders Driven Back From Shansi Province.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, March 16.—Chinese guerrilla raids and smashing counteroffensive attacks appeared today to have pushed the Japanese back in several sectors and stopped them in the others.

From Shansi Province, which the Japanese overran in a big offensive a week ago, came reports that the Chinese had recaptured Linfen and were making strong attacks on Chaocheng and Hwohsien. These cities are in the southern part of the province.

In northwest Shansi the Chinese said they were sweeping through a triangular area between Koku, Paoteh and Kolan, where desperately resisting Japanese were trying to hold their ground.

Chinese successes in the Hoku sector were said to have eliminated danger of the Japanese forging across the Yellow River there and invading Shensi Province to the west.

The Chinese reported hand-to-hand fighting along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway some 50 miles north of Suchow, where the Japanese have started a new offensive against the Lunghai Railway.

Flanking attacks along the Yi River farther east were said to have given the Chinese other victories.

Japanese naval officers reported shooting down two Chinese bombing planes after a 60-mile pursuit. Six Chinese planes raided the Japanese airfield outside Hangchow.

National Unity Belgians' Need, Spaak Declares

Brussels, March 16 (AP).—Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak today reaffirmed Belgium's determination to defend her territory and the government's foreign policy of preserving liberty while maintaining good relations with all neighbors.

Speaking in the Chamber of Deputies, he declared the need of national unity was the lesson Belgium and other small nations must learn from the fate of Austria.

He expressed regret oer the way Germany absorbed Austria, saying:

"Even if anschluss (union) apparently meets the wishes of the population, I regret the methods used. To avoid such difficulties, I appeal to the wisdom and patriotism of my countrymen."

He said the League of Nations remained a noble ideal, but was "a sick person needing great care."

Small nations like Belgium, he added, have to take that fact into consideration.

A Salutary Revolt.

Opposition to the antinumbers-racket bill appears to have been confined to Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee. When hearings on the bill were finally concluded and the committee forced a vote, the measure was reported out with overwhelming support. No doubt it will be approved by the House as soon as it can be brought up on the floor.

Virtually everyone who has given any attention to the numbers racket in Washington realizes that it is a dangerous feeder to more serious crime. To cope with gambling in general, and with the gangs that are supported by it, a more adequate weapon against the numbers game is absolutely essential. Indorsement of the bill by the Board of Trade, following similar action by many other civic bodies, is indicative of the public attitude.

The revolt of the House District Committee membership against Mr. Palmisano's efforts to delay the bill suggests, too, that a large majority of Congressmen are deeply interested in better law enforcement here. When an issue of this sort comes to a showdown, Congress usually comes handsomely to Washington's assistance.

The difficulty lies in bringing District problems to the attention of the conscientious members, who are always most hard pressed by the problems of their own districts and of the country as a whole.

To Reassure Business.

Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, says that every effort will be made to effect changes in the House tax bill with the object of reassuring business.

Nothing would be more conducive to that end than a further modification of the capital gains tax which, despite changes approved by the House, remains much too high. Senator Harrison favors a return to a limited flat rate of capital gains taxation and likewise suggests the possibility of reductions in the high surtax rates of the upper income tax brackets, certainly these levies have been serious deterrents to capital accumulation and investment expansion, particularly in combination with the punitive taxes on undistributed profits.

Since nobody has the remotest idea how much revenue would have resulted from the special levy on the undistributed profits of family-ownd corporations, there is something rather ironical about the excessive solicitude of Treasury experts over the loss of this prospective income. Fortunately, there is no indication that the Senate Finance Committee is disturbed by the subtraction of what at best would have been a mere drop in the ocean of Federal tax receipts.

The encouragement which elimination of this tax will give to business may easily provide indirect returns to the Treasury that will more than offset any direct losses. In fact, business relief and adequate revenue go hand in hand. They are not mutually exclusive objectives, as Senator Harrison evidently realizes.

Broadcasts To England.

In some respects the broadcast of John L. Lewis to Great Britain was a rebuttal to what Secretary Ickes told the British about the United States three weeks ago. The Cabinet officer gave the New Deal credit for saving the American political and economic systems. But the leader of the C. I. O. sees this country drifting "with terrifying and deadly sureness" to "financial bankruptcy, economic collapse and human tragedy."

Secretary Ickes gave the impression that America's problems are being sucessfully met by democratic methods. But, Mr. Lewis complains that "America is moving in economic reverse." Neither industry nor government—Mr. Lewis might well have added organized labor—has come forth with a solution. His complaint that Congress has been lacking in leadership and that it has failed to grapple with continued depression contains a note of bitterness that has only recently crept into the speeches of the C. I. O. chieftain.

Obviously this speech was not written primarily for British ears. It is aimed directly at the Roosevelt Administration. In selecting a foreign audience Mr. Lewis has, nonetheless, clearly added his protests to the swelling tide of criticism against the Administration. The cooling in his attitude toward the New Deal may be chiefly a result of the Roosevelt depression, but it doubtless also reflects the thwarting of his political aims in Pennsylvania.

Much of Mr. Lewis' advice is sound. For example, he said:

> It is time for Americans to co-operate . . . It is time for capital to recognize labor's right to live and participate in the increased efficiency of industry and the bounties of our national resources. It is time for labor to recognize the right of capital to have a reasonable return upon its investment.

But the word "co-operate" has a strange sound on the lips of Mr. Lewis. If he had used that technique last summer, in his whirlwind campaign to establish the C. I. O. in the mass-production industries, present difficulties might have been less severe. Certainly the ranks of labor would not now be divided into antagonistic factions if Mr. Lewis had approached the recent negotiations with the A. F. of L. in a genuine spirit of co-operation.

Secretary Ickes' theme was co-operation against fascism. Mr. Lewis now advocates co-operation for economic recovery. The British listeners will be justified in asking why Americans don't practice what they preach.

A Civil Service Administrator.

The decisive defeat of Senator Walsh's amendment calling for retention of the Civil Service Commission is a major victory for supporters of the Administration's reorganization bill.

It is tantamount to approval of the proposal to substitute a single civil service administrator for the present commission of three members. This change was recommended by the Brownlow committee on administrative reorganization on the ground that the board or committee form of organization is cumbersome, wasteful and ineffective. Conflicts and jealousies are likely to develop, it was said, and responsibility is diffused with resultant administrative delays and lack of vigorous leadership.

Consequently, the substitution of a single executive was recommended as a means of giving civil service administration greater unity, energy and responsibility. However, to assure the desired improvement, the Brownlow committee suggested that the administrator should himself be selected on a competitive, nonpartisan basis by a special examining board. Thereafter, the President would be expected to make his appointment from the three candidates highest on the list.

Such safeguards against the induction into office of any but the most highly qualified individuals do not appear in the bill now before the Senate. It merely provides that the administrator "shall be selected without regard to any political affiliations" and shall be a person "specially qualified for the office." The President alone would be the judge of the adequacy of the appointee's qualifications.

Moreover, although the appointment is for a 15-year period, it is admitted that Congress would have no power to prevent the removal of an executive official, like the proposed administrator, whenever the President so desired.

It is true that the members of the present Civil Service Commission are directly responsible to the President and subject to removal at his wish. Nevertheless, a bipartisan body is in a much better position to resist political pressure than a single administrator would be. The Brownlow committee's opinion to the contrary is based upon the assumption that the new administrator would be appointed on the basis of merit, as tested by examination, and that he would function as the head of a central personnel agency which "would greatly advance the merit principle in the Government and would lead to the extension of the civil service."

The Brownlow committee agreed that the members of the Civil Service Commission, which has been functioning over 50 years, "have devoted themselves assiduously to the public business and have endeavored conscientiously to observe the statutes and orders that have been laid down for their guidance." All the less excuse, therefore, for experimenting with a new form of administrative organization vesting tremendous responsibilities in a single individual.

Of course, a very able administrator might be found who would accomplish more than a commission. But as Senator Walsh pointed out in course of the debate on his amendment, we have bipartisan boards because of the experience of years. "The rights of the minority and the rights of all citizens," he said, "are more likely to be secure and safe in the hands of a bipartisan committee than in the hands of one individual who may be dominated and controlled completely by the Governor of the particular State or by the President of the United States."

As an experienced politician and former Governor of Massachusetts, Senator Walsh knows whereof he speaks.

We Shall Have Music.

Considering the year and considering the season, the oversubscription of the National Symphony Orchestra Association's appeal for $103,000 is a real triumph. Hans Kindler and his colleagues may take it as high compliment that neither the depression nor the income-tax collection—to say nothing of several other fund-raising appeals earlier in the year—could dissuade the Capital from insuring the continuation of what is so evidently a much-cherished institution.

Explicit testimony to the orchestra's success is to be seen in the number of Washingtonians who contributed to the fund. Nearly 5,600 individuals now have made themselves partners in the undertaking, as contrasted with approximately 2,300 last year. It is true that more than half of this year's fund consisted of "special gifts"—substantial donations from more wealthy patrons. But over $45,000 was given in small sums, including those made up of pennies and nickels contributed from the earnings of appreciative school children. To borrow a phrase, such popularity must be deserved.

The $103,000 goal represented the minimum on which the orchestra association felt justified to proceed with 1938-39 plans. Doubtless the extra $2,759 realized can easily be used on the regular winter program. Certainly it would not be enough by itself to carry a series of summer concerts from which no income can be expected if they are played on Federal property.

Nevertheless, the fact that the number of contributors was doubled this year will justify the expectation that ticket sales for next winter also will increase. If this is so, the prospects for the much-desired summer series will be considerably brightened.

Caught In The Maelstrom.

"We in America are not the masters of world events," said Representative Wadsworth, addressing the House Tuesday in behalf of the pending naval bill.

No, we are not. Nor have we done what was so clearly in our power to do, during the past 19 years, in the way of helping to mold the trend of world events constructively. On the contrary the United States has insisted on pursuing a policy of aloofness in the pathetic belief that aloofness is possible for a nation as inextricably entangled in world destiny as is ours.

That did not matter so much while standards and values in international conduct were to some extent maintained by other nations in our behalf. We failed to participate in the system established to protect those values. But we enjoyed the benefits which it provided, however inadequately.

Now that barrier to aggression has been ruthlessly swept aside by a series of smashing blows. "Force today," as Congressman Wadsworth rightly points out, "is ruling the world, whether we like it or not." It is now a case of every nation for itself and the devil take the hindmost.

To be weak and defenseless in a world of gangsterism is to invite aggression. Ethiopia was weak and it has disappeared. China was weak and is now suffering the horrors of ruthless invasion. Spain was weak and when that weakness was accentuated by an internal division it became a prey to foreign conquest. Austria was weak, and has ceased to exist.

Is there any good reason to believe that the aggressors will at any given point be content to stop in their tracks? The dynamics of the totalitarian state make warmaking and military expansion essential for its survival. No sooner is one victim overcome than plans to overwhelm the next become operative. After Ethiopia, Mussolini quickly turned his attention to Spain. After Manchuria, Japan invaded China proper. After Austria what?

It is only logical, therefore, to believe with Mr. Wadsworth that the time may easily come when the dictators will turn their attention to this hemisphere and seek to master those countries which are "with certain exceptions, the greatest in area of what we might call the semi-developed regions."

During the past six years, with constantly accelerating speed, the world has passed out of the era of international co-operation in behalf of peace into that of naked and unrestrained power politics. Like it or not we are caught in this maelstrom. We cannot be immune from it. Forced as never before to depend on ourselves alone we shall now realize that the policy of isolation has as its price a degree of militarization which this country has heretofore been happily spared.

Sauce For The Goose.

During what was reported as "a 15-minute stop between planes" at Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Roosevelt recently undertook to explain her views on "wages for wives." But it cannot be said that she wholly clarified the subject. She did not, for instance, explain how a wife can at one and the same time be a wage earner and a full partner in the home.

The difficulty of the combination is exemplified in the case of the "poet-philosopher" of San Francisco who has entered suit against his wife for separate maintenance. Forgetting philosophy, he charges that she failed to keep a marriage pledge to be the breadwinner while he "performed the necessary housework." The issue posed is whether home-keeping husbands are entitled to a weekly wage.

There are those, slaves to convention no doubt, who are annoyed by any such revolutionary ideas, as witness a recent trial in Pennsylvania. Under the terms of a law recently passed in that State wives are equally liable with husbands for the support of their mates. But when a Pittsburgh man sued his wife for support, alleging that he could not find work and that his wife had an interest in a tavern and was well able to keep him, the judge threw the suit out of court, declaring the unfortunate plaintiff a disgrace to himself and his wife.

All of which goes to prove that one blanket will never cover love, law and logic, and that what is sauce for the gander is not always sauce for the goose.

If the Government fixes a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours, it certainly ought to supply padded walls for employers.

"The hatpin will be back this spring," declares a stylist. Isn't this where we came in?

Money And Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Has it indeed fallen to President Roosevelt to provide us with a simple and badly needed concept, a foundation upon which a logical and equitable economic structure can be built up? In every corner of the earth, from pole to pole, the monetary economy was at first founded upon a commodity money. This necessarily embraced the idea of a "basic wage."

Whatever the money consisted of, whether cattle or cowrie shells, furs or fish, wheat or wampum (and to this very day the native money of Uganda consists of goats), it was an incarnation of human labor. Such a money was inherently just. It could be hoarded to any extent without injury to anyone, save possibly the hoarder. A debtor could always repay a debt by working; and his remuneration could never fall much below the "basic wage," enshrined in the money commodity. A moneyless man could at any time obtain money by putting forth the indispensable quantum of effort that was needed to create more of it.

A money which is not always "accessible" to an individual, in return for a definite expenditure of energy, or a recognized total of achievement—is it not an instrument of oppression, a perennial source of social injustice? Under such a commodity money the modern infamy—that willing workers must famish in enforced idleness amid potential abundance, because rich men cannot or will not spend their incomes fast enough—would be unthinkable.

Clearly, so crude and unwieldy a device as a commodity money is altogether unsuitable for the modern complex civilization. But we surely must, somehow or other, restore the fundamental principle of social justice which was inherent in it. The "floor for wages" must be the "basic money wage"—always available to every applicant, in return for the statutory quantum of effort or achievement. It could be embodied in public works, in collective undertakings, in social amenities of every sort, in the continual enhancement, enrichment and embellishment of the communal life.

League Constitution Model.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The democratic nations of the world could deal a crushing blow to rampant tyranny if they would only employ the constructive instruments of peace instead of the destructive weapons of war.

This dream could be realized if the League of Nations would adopt a constitution patterned after our own. Then all nations within the League could enjoy the same sense of security from invasion, as do our own 48 States. And how dictatorships would crumble before the moral pressure of a democratic United States of the World!

Our country can best serve the cause of universal peace by drafting a complete constitution for the League. Of course, a world court and a police force would be indispensable.

Isabelle Cromwell Snell.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Someone has said that we take out of this world only that which we have given away. If this is true, Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell took with her Sunday the richest of treasures; for she laid upon the altar of life the priceless jewels of devotion and service to friends, country and art. By art we mean that vast garden wherein men plant their dreams and proceed to cultivate them through the channels of music, poetry, literature and painting.

Highly intelligent, aristocratic and to the manner born, fragile as an orchid but miraculously revealing strength, possessing the cultural charm of her own generation coupled with the eager interest and enthusiasm of youth, Mrs. Snell was an extremely interesting character. It is difficult to believe that she who was never old had actually passed her seventy-fifth milestone. Surely age is not a matter of years, but of spirit—of keeping abreast with the era in which one lives, interested in the concerns of one's fellowmen, eagerly athirst for and receptive to beauty in all of its manifold forms. Mrs. Snell might well be called the disciple of the ageless.

Many recall her political activities, but the poets of Washington turn from these, however worthy, and remember and love her because she stood for all that was finest in the field of poetry. She combined the soul of the poet with the analytical insight of the critic. Because of her extraordinarily keen appreciation of this art and the ability to render clear, constructive criticism, she was always enthusiastically welcomed wherever poets held rendezvous—whether in the Martha McClear poetry section of the American Association of University Women, the Poetry Workshop of the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women, or the Poetry Clinic of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs. In all three of these organizations Isabelle Cromwell Snell was a valued and beloved member.

Mrs. Snell worked untiringly for the enactment of a law authorizing the creation of a national medal to be presented annually by the President of the United States to the American poet making the most outstanding poetical contribution during the year. She conceived her idea after learning of the similar award conferred by King George V on Laurence Whistler in 1934; and although she has not lived to realize her dream, the poets of Washington have faith to believe that in due season her efforts will bear fruit.

Mr. Hoover's Work For Belgium

(Through editorial oversight a thoroughly inaccurate letter regarding Herbert Hoover's wartime work as head of the Commission for Relief in Belgium appeared in this column Monday. In printing the following replies, The Post wishes to express its sincere regret for this unfortunate occurrence.)

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with astonishment and indignation the letter signed "Puzzled" which appeared on your editorial page of March 15 under the heading "Hoover's Reception"—astonishment because The Post has acquired a well-deserved reputation both for good taste and for accuracy and its readers do not expect to find in it such an item of cheap personal abuse, and indignation because the glaring distortions and misstatements of fact which the letter contained were allowed to stand without any note of apology or correction.

In August, 1914, Mr. Hoover happened to be in London. During the first weeks of the war, he devoted himself to organizing the repatriation of the thousands of American citizens whom the outbreak of the war stranded in Europe without means of transportation and without funds. His success in accomplishing that task indicated him as the man who could be relied upon to carry through the much greater task made necessary by the German occupation of Belgium.

Belgium was cut off from the rest of the world by a ring of steel. The food supply of its 7,000,000 inhabitants was on the point of exhaustion and starvation impended. A committee of distinguished Belgians was permitted by the German authorities to leave the country to make such arrangements as they could for the importation of food. They called upon Mr. Hoover. He accepted the task and, as no funds were available, he pledged his personal fortune for the purchase of the first cargoes of food.

He organized and headed the Commission for Relief in Belgium and, without salary, he served as its chairman throughout the war. The task which he undertook and carried out involved the purchase of food in quantities which at times averaged $1,000,000 worth per day, the transportation of this food from the uttermost parts of the earth to Belgium, the supervision of its distribution within Belgium, and last but not least the negotiation and renegotiation of agreements with the governments and the military and naval authorities of the major belligerents.

That the Belgian people should be grateful to Mr. Hoover for carrying on, with exemplary efficiency and at the cost of tremendous self-sacrifice, that great humanitarian work which saved an entire nation from starvation is no cause for wonder to anyone who has an elementary knowledge of the facts.

Until the letter signed "Puzzled" was published in your columns, I was not aware that even his most purblind political opponent had ever attempted to cast aspersions upon Mr. Hoover's work as chairman of the commission or to find fault with the Belgians for their expressions of gratitude.

FORMER MEMBER OF THE COMMISSION FOR RELIEF IN BELGIUM.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With your permission I would like to answer "Puzzled," who in your letter column of March 15, expressed himself concerning our former President Herbert Hoover. Perhaps your correspondent is more puzzled today, as we read that the Finns have also honored Mr. Hoover.

One time we used to hear about love, reverence, humility, loyalty, and associated these attributes historically through a pattern of living with the prophets who were the source of them. But the modern world, officially, is a barren world, except for science, where one may see a new tradition of nobility arising.

I feel that if "Puzzled" will turn away from those who have sought to discredit our former President, and will reject the vicious philosophy which has been foisted upon an enslaved people instead of those noble qualities which I outlined, he will begin to learn wisdom. The act of turning away alone will bring reward spiritually.

As for Mr. Hoover, he will have his reward even here, in the love, respect and admiration of friends all over the world.

A Jefferson Arch?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Has anyone proposed a triumphal arch in memory of Thomas Jefferson? An arch is an architectural feature that the National Capital lacks. Why another memorial for the author of the Declaration of Independence similar to the Lincoln shrine? Shouldn't those whom we delight to honor have distinguishing memorials rather than typical shrines?

London, another capital, has its beautiful marble arch connecting the Mall and Trafalgar Square; Paris has its famous Arc de Triomphe beneath which burns an eternal flame to the Unknown Soldier of that country; New York has its less imposing memorial arch in Washington Square, Fifth avenue, and Brooklyn has an imposing arch by Macmonies in the Prospect Park Plaza. But the National Capital has no such architectural feature.

How would one look across the intersection of Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues? It would make a fine setting for the splendid parades that sometimes pass that way.

The Post Impressionist

Not A Scrap Of Paper.

He was apparently waiting, as I was, for an interview with the Congressman, this tall, rather young-appearing man sitting in a chair near the window, his broad-brimmed black hat in his hand. He was not very dark, although his hair was sleek and black. I envied his poise, for he sat very erect and almost motionless—alert and yet completely at ease.

A student, I thought tentatively, no doubt looking for a job; or with that dauntless profile and firm shoulders he might even be a baseball player . . .

"My country does not discard treaties so easily," he said so quietly that I hardly realized that he was speaking. He indicated the startling headlines of a recent newspaper on the desk nearby.

I took a broad mental jump from baseball player to foreign diplomat and with him thus established in my own mind, I managed to nod politely. Somehow I hadn't thought of this stranger as a foreigner. He seemed like an American. I hadn't detected the slightest accent, but there was that large black felt hat. That bothered me.

"For $4,500 my country has agreed not to make war upon the United States for another 12 months," he went on, his low musical voice sounding very matter-of-fact. "You have never heard of that treaty?"

I hadn't. Most of the treaties I had heard about had turned out to be "scraps of paper" anyway and I couldn't see much use in trying to understand a stuffy old document that would flutter off the next time some big bad foreign wolf got up steam enough to huff and puff and blow it away.

At that, even a 12-month guarantee of peace for the modest sum of $4,500, I admitted, was cheap enough at the price, especially in the light of the newspaper headlines.

"But at the end of one year, what then," I couldn't resist asking.

"Your country will pay another $4,500 and there will be another year of peace and friendship between our two countries. It will go on yearly forever," he explanied. "That is in the treaty. It has already been observed for 140 years."

It was fantastic but my curiosity wouldn't subside. I thought of waiting and asking the Congressman later what this "$4,500 peace" was all about, but the visitor was willing enough to tell his story.

"When the American Colonies declared war against England," this surprising stranger went on, "they sent representatives to ask my country to remain neutral. We were very powerful then, more powerful than the infant United States, but we sent food and grain to Washington's army when the men were starving at Valley Forge. We sent men to form a bulwark between the French in Canada and the American troops. Behind this protection Washington's army emerged victorious."

He stopped speaking for a moment and searched through his pockets. He had a photostat in his hand when he spoke again.

"This is a copy of the treaty we made 140 years ago. By its terms your country granted to mine rich lands, money to be paid annually for clothing and farm implements, and the rights of an independent nation. In return we pledged never to attack the citizens of the United States."

"But if it had not been for the treaty," I asked, still skeptical.

"We would be citizens of the United States," he answered simply. "As it is, we are a nation within a nation . . . a sovereign country entirely within the territorial limits of the State of New York."

What was this man saying! I was amazed at the sheer nonchalance with which he had imparted his fantastic statements. He spoke with authority but it sounded incongruous, bizarre.

"Surely you don't expect me to believe that a separate country exists within the very boundaries of the United States," I countered.

"You would not recognize it were you to go there," he said, smiling at my bewilderment. "My people are not very different from yours now. We have been offered participation in the Government of the State and Nation, but we have never accepted it because that would raise the question of dual citizenship. We cannot afford to jeopardize our rights guaranteed in the treaty, for that would involve all our lands and even our water rights along the Niagara River."

The door of the Congressman's office opened and the secretary nodded to the stranger. As he went in he handed me a pamphlet. It was a copy of the Interior appropriation bill. Line 15 was checked and I read: "For fulfilling treaty of 1794, $4,500, to Six Nation Indians of New York."

Here then was one treaty that had remained intact for 140 years. After all, today's headlines being what they are it is nice to know that for a meager $4,500 we are safe from attack, at least by the Indians, and that the pledge they made is not just a scrap of paper.

Lest I should die before another spring
Let these few things be graven on my heart,
To bear with me
Into eternity:

Red tracery of maple buds against an April sky,
Dancing of daffodils in a gay spring wind,
The tender green of willow trees,
A flock of swallows darting by;
Gold of forsythia in the rain,
Chorus of peepers by the pond,
A song sparrow's sweet thread of melody,
The pungent odor of rich, new-turned earth
And scene of warm sun on young, growing grass.

For I would savor all of life
And drink this cup of ecstasy,
Unmindful of its bitter dregs of pain,
And revel in this mystery
Of life's awakening,
Lest, peradventure, I should fail
To pass this way again.

Touchy Dictators

By Dr. B. A.

Thin-Skinned Duce And Fuehrer.

Translated by Living Age from the National-Zeitung, Basel German-language daily.

EVERYONE knows that the present-day dictators detest being made the butt of jokes and caricature, and that they usually revenge themselves in a very unhumorous fashion on those who offend them. But Mussolini, Hitler and the lesser demigods of our day must be exceptionally thin-skinned, lacking in humor or unsure of themselves, because in the past there have been many dictators and powerful statemen who, while sensitive to attacks, enjoyed them if they were cleverly disguised as joke, satire or caricature.

Frederick the Great, for example, was only interested in whether the joks was good or bad. He didn't care whether he came off well, or whether the monarchy was lampooned. Bismarck and Napoleon greatly enjoyed reading satirical weeklies put out by the opposition. And they had the greatest fun in finding cartoons about themselves. Even Primo de Rivera, the Spanish vest-pocket Mussolini, held out against those who urged him to suppress satirical papers.

Mussolini, however, is different. He can't abide political satire. During the short and nearly forgotten period when the Fascist regime tolerated criticism in the press, no publication was more frequently suppressed that Becco Giallo. The Duce was so easily offended that it was almost ridiculous. A slight distorted mouth, lips which had turned out too thick, accentuation of his girth—it seemed that everything made him angry and no matter how timid the captions, they always fell short of the required degree of respect.

THE RULERS of the Third Reich, Hitler and Goebbels especially, detest political jokes.

One Prof. Julius Peterson, literary historian at the University of Berlin, recently asserted that anybody who used jokes or satire as a political weapon was corrupt. He called jokes "merely attempts to degrade others and to elevate one's self. They are the weapon of Heine, Borne, Kerr, Kraus and other Jewish writers. We Germans must never learn to use it."

Nevertheless, the political joke has been growing in Germany—secretly, of course. If the author who invents it or those who repeat it are collared by the authorities, we hear of punishment like this: "K. . . of Magdeburg, was sentenced to two-and-one-half years in prison for spreading a so-called whispering joke.") What was the joke? He allegedly quoted Goebbels as complaining bitterly that 98 per cent of the German people were devoted followers of national socialism, but that strangely enough one always met the other 2 per cent. Another culprit is supposed to have reported that Furtwangler had asked Bronislaw Hubermann to appear at a concert. The renowned violinist was said to have turned down the invitation with the following cable: "Grandma does not permit it." This incident actually happened.

• • • •

HOW CAN one explain this difference in the attitude of dictators? Bismarck practically solicited caricature. Frederick the Great and Napoleon enjoyed jokes made at their expense. Hitler, Mussolini and Goebbels treat them as crimes. The truth is perhaps this: it is the parvenu among the dictators who cannot endure political satire. An all-powerful ruler like Napoleon, who in the course of his career loses all urge for self-glorification—the real sign of the parvenu—cannot be insulted by satire. He may still, of course, be sensitive to merely libelous pamphlets, but he sees his significance in a rational prospective. He no longer needs to protect his ego against his own doubts.

Czechoslovakia

France And Russia Pledged To Defend Democracy If Germany Moves In Accord With 'Mein Kampf' Program.

By Buel W. Patch.

Following are excerpts from a recent study of "Czechoslovakian Independence" published by Editorial Research Reports.

GERMANY'S absorption of Austria in direct defiance of treaty clauses forbidding union of the two countries and in disregard of Hitler's own engagements to respect the independence of that nation has aroused serious concern as to the fate of Czechoslovakia.

With Austria annexed to Germany, the western half of Czechoslovakia is now surrounded on three sides by German territory. Within that part of the country, along the borders of Germany and Austria, live more than 3,000,000 Germans, constituting over 20 per cent of the total population of Cechoslovakia. In his address to the Reichstag on February 20 Hitler directed attention to the 10,000,000 Germans residing in states adjoining the Reich and declared that "protection of those German peoples who are not in a position to secure along our frontiers their political and philosophical freedom by their own efforts" was an interest which the German Reich would "know how to guard."

Remarks of Goering Far From Reassuring.

ONLY THREE WEEKS later the 7,000,000 Germans of Austria were incorporated directly into the Reich. It was inevitable there should be widespread fear that Hitler might entertain similar intentions with respect to the 3,000,000 Germans of Czechoslovakia. Such fear was not allayed by Field Marshal Goering's declaration on March 13 that "Germany will not interfere in the domestic affairs of any country," for he immediately appended to that statement that "the German Reich considers itself in every respect the guardian and protector of all Germans, including those outside the Reich's borders," and that "whoever attacks Germans, and thus Germany, will face the ever-loaded German cannon."

At the same time it was clear that Germany could not expect to absorb any part of Czechoslovakia as easily as it absorbed Austria. Immediately after Hitler's speech to the Reichstag last month, it was made plain in Prague that Czechoslovakia would offer resistance in kind to any military offensive by Germany. Later, in an address before the Chamber of Deputies on March 4, Premier Hodza said that action by Germany looking to protection of Germans in Czechoslovakia would be considered "interference in our domestic affairs," and he declared that "we should render an ill service to the development of central Europe and to our own relations with Germany if we did not proclaim with the greatest clearness that Czechoslovakia will never and in no circumstances tolerate interference in her domestic affairs."

An attack upon Czechoslovakia would bring into effect mutual assistance pacts under which France and Russia would be obliged to go to its aid. France recently assured Czechoslovakia of its intention to live up to that engagement. After Germany moved into Austria, moreover, it was reported in Paris that the French government was considering strengthening the treaty with Czechoslovakia so as to provide for assistance even in the event of an attempt at peaceful Nazification of that country.

Nazis' Eastward Plan Imperils Czechoslovakia.

FEARS FOR the safety of Czechoslovakia have been felt with varying degrees of intensity ever since Hitler came to power in Germany in 1933. In his book "Mein Kampf," whose doctrines have never been repudiated, the Fuehrer expounded the theory that Germany must have room for expansion in continental Europe, and he declared: "We shall stop the eternal striving toward the south and west and turn our eyes to land in the east . . . When we speak today of new territory in Europe, we can only think in the first instance of Russia and the border states under Russia's suzerainty."

Under the present pacts of mutual assistance any conflict between Germany and Russia would immediately involve Czechoslovakia and France. Likewise, any conflict between Germany and Czechoslovakia would involve France and Russia. It has been stated that the idea of a sudden attack upon Czechoslovakia, intended to crush that country before effective foreign aid could be rendered, was entertained in a powerful section of the Nazi Party in late 1936 and early 1937.

The plan was abandoned, according to one account, largely owing to representations by Reichswehr leaders that German food supplies were not then sufficient for such an enterprise and that the powers of resistance of the Czechoslovak army were being dangerously underrated.

It has been asserted elsewhere that Czechoslovakia's period of greatest danger occurred several years ago when Germany was refusing to sign an Eastern Locarno pact and was attempting, through such devices as the Anglo-German naval agreement and the proposed western air pact, to neutralize the west in the event of a clash in the east. Under this theory, signature of the Soviet mutual assistance pacts and the growing danger of war in western Europe caused a shift in German policy, which has been governed by the desire to avoid simultaneous conflicts on two frontiers. Through the Rome-Berlin axis and overtures to Poland, Rumania, and Yugoslavia, Berlin now sought to neutralize the east.

German Minority Split Into Two Political Camps.

DURING the early years of the Czechoslovak republic the German minority, known as Sudetic Germans from the mountain range of that name, maintained a negative attitude toward the government at Prague. In 1926, however, two of the three principal German political parties—the Agrarians and Christian Socialists—decided to cooperate and were given representation in the cabinet. In 1929 the German Social Democrats also joined the government coalition. Although the Christian Socialists again went into opposition at that time, they returned in 1936. Since then all three of the so-called German "activist" parties have been represented in the cabinet.

The world depression struck the Sudetic German districts with special severity, since it was precisely these districts which were the most highly industrialized and since Czechoslovak industry was particularly dependent on the export trade. The resultant suffering tended to increase the strength of two "negativist" German parties—the Nationalists and National Socialists, both Pan-Germanic and anti-Semitic. The hopes of their adherents for union with Germany were naturally raised by Hitler's accession, but in October, 1933, both parties were dissolved as a precautionary measure for the safety of the state.

There arose a year later, however, under the leadership of Konrad Henlein, a former gymnastic instructor, the Sudeten German Party modeled on Nazi lines. In the elections of 1935 this party registered a spectacular success, capturing 67 seats in Parliament as against only 31 for the German activist parties. Whereas the activist parties in 1929 polled two-thirds of the German vote, and 15 per cent of the total vote in 1935. It became the largest of the dozen or more political parties in Czechoslovakia, but it nevertheless was given no representation in the cabinet.

In the municipal elections in October, 1936, the Sudeten German Party lost heavily, and its position was temporarily weakened in February, 1937, when the government in an agreement with the activist parties sought to redress one of the German minority's main grievances. The chief item of the agreement was that the Germans should be employed in all state services in numbers proportionate to their representation in the total population, conditional on the applicant's loyalty to the state and his knowledge of the state language. The Henleinists repudiated the agreement, and in practice it has not worked out to the full satisfaction even of the activists.

Henlein Has Asked Only For Autonomy, Not Disunion.

THE HENLEIN PARTY has not openly expressed a desire for union of Czechoslovakia's German districts with the Reich, and it only recently demanded complete autonomy.

Following a clash last October between Henleinists and the police at Teplitz-Schoenau, which provoked violent outbursts against Czechoslovakia in the German press, Henlein in a letter to President Benes demanded that the Sudeten German districts be granted immediate autonomy and placed under exclusively German control. While Henlein has contended that autonomy would not alienate the Germans from the state but, on the contrary, would increase their state consciousness, most impartial observers hold that it would bring disunity and the eventual dismemberment of the country.

One student of Czechoslovakia's political problems has suggested that if Prague would surrender its foreign alliances and grant Henlein such rights as would insure his decisive influence over the nation's foreign policy, Hitler might guarantee Czechoslovakia's present frontiers and disinterest himself in the fate of the German minority. It is obvious, however, that the government's leaders could not voluntarily submit to such a humiliating encroachment on the independence which their nation only recently achieved after three centuries of subjection to alien rule.

The Education Of Mr Chamberlain.

THE STATEMENTS made by Neville Chamberlain and Lord Halifax in the British Parliament Wednesday show how rude has been their awakening from their recent pipe dream. But not even the Austrian developments, it would seem, have opened their eyes fully to the dour realities of the situation facing Britain, Europe and the world.

The British premier and foreign secretary, in their speeches, had something to say about the colonies question, Czechoslovakia and Spain. Regarding the first, Chamberlain told the House of Commons, in effect, that this question was now indefinitely shelved. Lord Halifax, for his part, saw fit for the first time to express British concern regarding the independence of Czechoslovakia, believed by many to be the next potential victim of Hitler's steam-roller.

• • • •

This is progress. But the force of Halifax's warning to the Third Reich to respect the independence of Czechoslovakia is considerably weakened by the fuzzy manner in which that warning is couched.

Recalling the assurances given by German spokesmen that the annexation of Austria was not aimed at Czechoslovakia, Halifax declared that Great Britain expects these pledges to be lived up to, for "there is no quarter in Europe in which it is more vital that undertakings should scrupulously be respected."

In contrast to this homily which Hitler may as blandly ignore as he ignored his 1936 pledge to respect Austria's independence, is the straightforward pledges now given by France and by Russia to come to Czechoslovakia's assistance should the little central European democracy be endangered. Such a warning is certain to have a far greater effect in preserving the independence of Czechoslovakia than Halifax's high-minded admonitions.

• • • •

BUT THE POINT to remember is not what Halifax said but the circumstance that once France is pledged to aid Czechoslovakia, as she now is, Great Britain is automatically committed, too. For if France joins in a struggle against Germany the Anglo-French alliance is practically certain to come into force sooner or later.

Indeed, it is surprising that the French have not taken advantage of this situation before. For two years the French foreign office has been little more than a branch of the British foreign office. Subservience of one great power to another has never gone to such extremes as that shown by France to Great Britain.

That in itself might not have been such a bad thing were British statesmanship during recent months up to the task of guiding the destinies of Europe. But where a Pitt, a Palmerston or a Disraeli was called for Great Britain has been cursed by a Chamberlain, inheriting the mistakes of a Simon. And whereas Britain's ruling class never in the past ignored imperial considerations in their attitude toward foreign affairs, the present ruling class is so blinded by class interests and attitudes as to have ignored imperial considerations altogether.

THIS HAS BEEN most clearly brought out in the case of the Spanish civil war. At the very outset a determined policy by Great Britain against any and all types of foreign intervention would have served both Britain's interests and those of Europe. The helplessness of British policy in the Far East, the development of the Berlin-Rome axis as a blackmailing device, even in no small measure the disappearance of Austria as a separate entity all stem directly or indirectly from the Spanish crisis. And for the prolongation of this crisis Great Britain and France are primarily responsible. They deluded themselves in the belief that time was on their side, that they could play with fire without being burned and that by a process of persuasion they could get Mussolini and Hitler to withdraw their troops from Spain.

Now these chickens of self-deception are coming home to roost. Franco's latest offensive is the product of renewed interventionist efforts by Germany and Italy on a wholesale scale never before attempted. And should this offensive succeed and the Barcelona government be forced to its knees such a development might not only greatly complicate the strategic problem in the Mediterranean, but also add considerably to Fance's defense difficulties. And after all, France is Great Britain's one important ally at the present time. Anything that weakens France, therefore, weakens Britain.

ONE MIGHT IMAGINE, therefore, that now, if ever, Great Britain would be galvanized into action, would prevent Spain, regardless of that country's internal political orientation, from becoming the pawn of the Fascist powers. What we actually find, however, is that the same indecision, delay and confusion which has marked Britain's Spanish policy for the last 20 months still remains the order of the day.

In answer to a quetsion as to whether Great Britain proposes to do anything about Spain, Chamberlain replied that he would not be rushed into making any announcements at this time. Perhaps he shouldn't be blamed for this. But in view of his record as premier there is a strong probability that this silence is a cloak for inaction.

But here again the French may, if desperate enough, commit Great Britain whether the British like it or not. If France opens her frontiers wide to "volunteers," heavy artillery, planes, to offset the large reinforcements which Franco has received during recent weeks from Hitler and Mussolini, the British as well as the French fat would be in the fire. The weaker of the two partners in the Anglo-French combination may take the bit into her teeth and the stronger will have to follow.

Real Hospitality

Guest In Kamchatka.

NO ONE traveling in Kamchatka, whether he be native or a foreigner, a European or an Asiatic, need have any fear about not finding night quarters in a village. He may enter any house, haphazard, and propose to stay there until the morrow, and it is unthinkable that he could meet with a refusal so long as the house be not already full of visitors. But we must remember that visits of this kind do not involve much trouble for the hosts. Every traveler carries his bed with him—i. e. his sleeping-sack. This is constructed in oblong form out of three tanned reindeer-skins sewn together. Sleeping-sacks made out of the skins of mountain sheep are still warmer. Wolfskins also are used, but they are more expensive; the skins of young bears also are used. The hairy side is put inwards, of course.

• • • •

WERE the owner of a house to refuse lodging to a stranger he would create a regular scandal—it would be considered a shocking thing, and there would be talk of it all over the neighborhood. When a snowstorm breaks out while you are staying in a house, you remain on till it has blown over, even if it should last a fortnight. You are bidden to the meals and have your sleeping place on the floor with the people of the house. When you start again on your journey you express your thanks and take farewell. As a rule your hosts will accept no payment . . .

The Kamchadals and the Russians often restrict themselves to saying adieu when they leave, even if they have paid a visit of a fortnight.

Great Mysteries.

We sincerely hope the Roanoke stone and the Drake plate are phonies. We hope, too, that the Runic stones unearthed in Nova Scotia and Minnesota, professing to reveal that the Norsemen penetrated far into the interior of the continent before 1362, are phonies.

These mysteries—Roanoke, Drake, the Norsemen and a half dozen others—are an essential part of our national background. To solve them at this late day would be to destroy in large measure their fascination. The persistence with which stone inscriptions, metal tablets and dog-eared documents relating to them and to Capt. Kidd, the lost Dauphin, and La Salle's lost flagship, the Griffin, are brought to light is evidence of the hold these mysteries have on the American imagination. We are for the discoveries—100 per cent—as long as they revive interest in, but do not utterly destroy, a good mystery story.

Medical Society Expels Group Health Doctor

that Scandiffio be expelled, the announcement said. The matter came up at the meeting last night at which Scandiffio was not present, although officials pointed out that he had been notified.

According to the official announcement, "the sole issue involved" in the proceedings was "whether Dr. Scandiffio has violated certain rules of the society that have been in effect for many years, concerning the eligibility of physicians for membership."

"These rules of eligibility were set up to protect the public from unethical, illegal and incompetent practitioners," the announcement said. "Obviously, such eligibility requirements are necessary in any organization of the nature of the Medical Society."

Chest Takes No Sides.

Willett's statement of position in the bitter controversy came at a meeting of the Community Chest Forum, comprised of Government employes. He emphasized that the Chest is taking no sides, though it faces financial embarrassment if the three-cornered deadlock—Medical Society, hospitals and GHA—continue much longer.

Already, it is revealed, "about a dozen" Chest contributors have canceled or threaten to cancel their pledges because eight of the nine member hospitals refuse to admit GHA staff physicians and surgeons to practice.

"The Community Chest is an innocent bystander, but it cannot afford to risk withdrawal of public support of its 55 non-hospital affiliates because the hospital members are involved in a battle," Willett declared.

Recently Columbia Hospital agreed to admit GHA maternity cases in charge of the Federal clinic's doctors, but such privileges are denied by the other eight Chest-affiliated hospitals—Emergency, Georgetown, George Washington, Episcopal, Providence, Garfield, Homeopathic and Children's.

The Chest director voiced the belief the deadlock will be broken before September, when all affiliated agencies make their annual applications for continued membership.

Applications are first referred to the budget committee and Council of Social Agencies, thence to the executive committee and, finally, to the board of trustees. The latter could, by a majority vote, act unfavorably upon the applications of all or any of the hospitals.

Kirkpatrick's blast came when he learned the executive committee of the District Medical Society has decided Dr. Scandiffio violated its constitution and has recommended that the full membership take action accordingly.

Closed Hearings Held.

The physician's "trial," which ended several weeks ago, consisted of five closed hearings. Evidence was presented at the first four hearings, and arguments delivered at the last. Dr. Edward Hiram Reede, executive committee chairman, presided over the hearings.

Dr. Allan Lee resigned from the GHA staff several months ago after he came under fire of the Medical Society and was restored to good standing. About half of the practicing doctors of medicine in Washington are affiliated with the society, which is a unit of the American Medical Association.

"We are now prepared to bring suit against the medical society for conspiracy to prevent the free choice of physicians in entering service of GHA and to prevent the free choice of our people to employ those on our staff to give medical and surgical care," Kirkpatrick said.

Pressure Is Charged.

Group Health Association and its protector, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, are convinced that the hospitals' belligerent attitude is the result of pressure by the Medical Society. Earlier this month Dr. Thomas E. Neill, society president, denied such pressure was being exerted.

"His (Dr. Scandiffio's) technical violation of the society constitution was only a front for the attack against G. H. A.," Kirkpatrick asserted, charging that the medical body believes that "by crucifying a G. H. A. man they will destroy the possibility of G. H. A. getting any more doctors to carry on its practice."

Dr. Scandiffio is a graduate of George Washington University medical school, having received his preparatory training at Columbia. He formerly taught pediatrics at Georgetown University medical school and to nurses at Children's Hospital.

Denying charges which the Medical Society and American Medical Association began to raise even before it opened for business last November at 1328 I street northwest, Group Health Association several weeks ago filed suit in District Court under the declaratory judgment law to clarify its status.

The A. M. A. and its local unit accuse the association of corporative practice of medicine and functioning as an insurance agency without complying with the insurance laws and regulations.

$5,440 Is 'Found' In FERA Money For Lunch Fund

Hot lunches will be served Washington's needy school children through April, Commissioner George E. Allen announced yesterday.

The Commissioner, who has championed the project for 5 years, stated that $4,220 in unexpended FERA money will be available to feed the 5,000 children who need hot lunches.

An additional sum of $1,220 left over from this month's FERA funds, "found" in the latter part of February, should carry the project through April, Allen said.

According to District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan feeding the children costs about $5,000 a month.

In the meantime it was disclosed that the Budget Bureau has not acted on the second request of the Commissioners to recommend in the deficiency bill $34,000 to finance school lunches for the rest of the school year and a $68,000 sum for the project next year.

The funds of the old Federal Emergency Relief Administration, now defunct, are still in the District treasury.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

She's Popular.

With 119,500 ballots to prove the case, Mrs. Thelma G. Klein (Loans and Currency), 2504 Tenth street northeast, has been declared first prize winner in the popularity contest sponsored by N. F. F. E. Treasury Local 262. The first prize is a trip to New York City.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Klein was graduated from Central High School. Originally appointed a typist in Loan and Currency on November 13, 1918, she was advanced to the grade of clerk, CAF-4, in the same office. Hugh W. Fisher, publicity representative for the local, sends the following data:

"In appearance she is a winsome blonde, of fair complexion, blue eyes, light-brown hair and svelte figure. Coupled with a sunny disposition and engaging smile, she has an attractiveness and charm that deservedly have brought her the distinction of being the outstanding popular member of her local.

"She is fond of dancing, the theater and outdoor sports, and is planning to enjoy her trip to New York sometime next month. Her hobby is china painting, and greatest ambition is to establish herself in business . . ."

Male Winner.

The runner-up was Victor J. Garland (Internal Revenue), 719 Nineteenth street northwest, who polled 102,000 votes. He ws born in Hampton, N. H., received his early education there, and completed it upon graduating from the National University Law School, with the degree of LL.B. Entering the Internal Revenue service as an auditor in 1921, he is now serving there in the same capacity.

Take up the story, Mr. Fisher: "He is reported to be a very eligible bachelor, is fond of all outdoor sports, and his greatest ambition is to achieve economic independence. He will take the New York trip on April 1. His organization affiliations include: Star of the East Lodge 59, A. F. & A. M., of Exeter, N. H.; Albert Pike Consistory, M. R. S.; Lincoln Post 17, American Legion; Washington Alumni Chapter, Sigma Nu Phi Fraternity, and N. F. F. E. Local 262.

Other Winners.

The third prize, a birthday ring, was won by Kathryn Webster (Internal Revenue) with 101,500 votes; the fourth prize $5 in cash, by Nellie Flather (Loans and Currency) with 94,500 votes. As consolation prizes, a bouquet was awarded Mattie E. Clements (Registers Office), with 77,000 votes, and cake knives each to Beatrice Catron (Disbursing), with 76,500 votes, and Rose Spense (Registers Office), with 61,500 votes. Altogether, 25 candidates were entered in the contest; a total of 1,023,000 ballots were cast.

Frankness.

Public notice in the Fisheries Service Bulletin: "During the past several years a considerable number of young men have come into the fish cultural service in the lower grades. Some of these we believe may be able to qualify for clerical work, either as typists or stenographers, and this notice is primarily directed to them. In the event you would be interested in an opportunity for promotion to such work it will be necessary for you to request of this office Civil Service Form 375. . . . Several vacancies in the field service exist at the present time, and if qualified eligibles can be found in our own service they will be promoted to these positions." And this reminder is appended:

"It should be clearly understood that living costs in Washington are extremely high. Employes should consider this carefully before submitting Form 375."

Reception.

Tonight's Frolickers: The South Carolina Society holds a reception and dance at the Shoreham Hotel. Guests of honor will be the officers of the military and naval establishments here who are South Carolinians. The reception begins at 9:30; there will be dancing from 10 to 1, with an intermission at midnight for supper. Edgar Morris, the society president, has appointed a floor committee, as follows: Capt. Frank J. Jervey, J. Austin Latimer, Hugh E. Phillips, Charles M. Galloway, Charles E. Jackson, Edward Hodges, Beverly Sims, Lloyd B. Harrison, Ben P. Fishburne, R. J. Cheatham, Warren R. Clardy, William J. Bradford and Mendel Rivers, all Federal employes.

Post 17, Irish War Veterans of the District of Columbia, dance tonight at the Willard Hotel, 9:30 to 2 . . . Happy Walker's Orchestra will move their feet . . . The Massachusetts Society dances at the Wardman Park Hotel. Russell Relley heads the committee on arrangements. Guest tickets can be secured from the secretary, Mrs. Leon Chagnon, 2500 K street . . .

And a successful party of last night—that held by the West Virginia State Society at the Raleigh Hotel. They heard a home Stater, Dr. C. S. Boucher, president of West Virginia University, who was introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph.

They had them on the jump at the Labor Department Cafteria yesterday, what with the referendum on the quality of the food (which, incidentally, aggrieved the management very much), and the mix-up of the telephone connections. The phones got out of whack and no matter what number was called, all the phones would ring. The cook had to answer when the manager was wanted, and the manager answered when somebody wanted the waiter.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, of St. Elizabeth's, who was unable to make his scheduled address to the A. F. G. E. District Government on March 11, will be the speaker at the department's meeting on March 26. He will discuss all phases of the hospital activities. The session of April 8 will be addressed by Dr. R. L. Oleson, assistant surgeon general, Public Health Service, whose subject will be "Public Health in Relation to the Government Service."

The Government Printing Office people bring out the popular G. P. O. Band and the Public Printer as headliner on the program to be given Friday night at 10:30 o'clock, in the Federal Show Window, a broadcast through Station WOL. Also, a quartet will be featured, consisting of Marvin E. Davis, Garrett C. Rush, Robert H. Simmons and Arthur S. Williams. The Public Printer will speak on the functions of the G. P. O.

Schools' Funds Are Slashed in D.C. Supply Bill

School, $10,000 to remodel the Alice Deal Junior High School, and $4,000 to improve the grounds of the Woodrow Wilson High School.

Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee drafting the tax bill, revealed that his sub-committee has been receiving appeals from businessmen and trade organizations to return to the business privilege tax, which they so vitriolicly opposed during hearings, in preference to the steep income tax now in the bill.

By letter and word of mouth they have informed Nichols that they are disappointed in his backing down from an almost lone championship of the levy on gross receipts.

"I've told them they put up such strong arguments that the tax would drive businessmen out of Washington that they convinced me," he said. "Now they say the income tax is going to drive the wealthy families out of the city.

"It looks like the District is faced with the alternative of losing its businessmen or its wealthy families."

Nichols added that there isn't a chance of the sub-committee reversing its position again as between the two taxes.

Parking Rental Weighed.

The fiscal affairs sub-committee yesterday considered suggestions for controlling the rent charged by auto parking lots, but arrived at no decision.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, suggested that the District take over all vacant lots and sell parking space for 10 cents a day, while Chairman Nichols proposed that the commercial parking business be declared a public utility so that the rates would be subject to regulation.

The greatest stumbling block to completion of the tax bill, according to Nichols, is the question whether the income tax levy shall be made applicable to 1937 income or whether other taxes, especially real estate and liquor and beer levies, will be made high enough to meet the next fiscal year's deficit so that the income tax would not become operative until January 1, 1939.

This postponement, sub-committee members pointed out, would obviate the danger of double taxation on businessmen who have paid the business privilege tax during the current fiscal year.

Continuation of the $1.75 real estate tax would raise about $3,000,000 of the deficit, while a $1 a barrel beer levy and a 50 cents a gallon increase in the liquor tax together would produce another $1,500,000.

The liquor and beer taxes, it was added, might be discontinued after the income tax levy gets under way and the realty level could be reduced.

Administration Pressure Seen On Offices Bill

specifically approve the President's reorganization orders, whereas the Administration bill would put them in effect after 60 days, unless Congress disapproved.

Wheeler said he had been confident of strength enough to adopt his amendment last Tuesday. Yesterday his margin appeared to be seriously whittled down, as several Senators said their objections to the bill as it stands had been overcome.

Chief target of opposition to the Administration provision were reports that the President would use his reorganization bill powers to transfer some of the functions of the forest service to the Interior Department.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, opened arguments for the Wheeler amendment by saying he had "authoritative" information that the President would transfer Forest Sevice functions. Western Senators in a bloc oppose Interior Department control of the grazing service now operated by the Forest Service. The Interior Department already controls the grazing service outside of the Forest Service.

Pittman said "there is nothing on earth but what Secretary Ickes wants to meddle in."

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, said he had received "assurances" from high sources that the forest service would not be transferred. Pope indicated he would have supported the amendment had he not received such assurances.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, wanted to know "for what purpose" Pope thought the assurances were given him. Glass said he did not believe "any Senator ought to want or receive any" assurances. He said he did not understand why assurances should be given Pope as to one bureau, while no assurances were given the Senate as to others.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, said if such assurances were given, they ought to be incorporated into the bill as an amendment. Pope said this would be "an invitation to get every agency exempted."

Frank Bacon Autobiography, "Barnstorming," to Be Filmed

Story of One-Night Stands Is Being Prepared by Star's Descendants; Civic Plans Run; We Discover Voice; Theater Notes.

MANY years ago there came to the stage of the National Theater a play by the name of "Lightnin'," starring a veteran trouper who had spent a lifetime in an effort to reach Broadway with a hit show that would write his name down among the immortals of the theater. That man was Frank Bacon, one of the most lovable characters, both on the stage and off, that the native playhouse has known.

BELL.

"Lightnin'," as is common knowledge, went on from Washington to New York to set up a long-run record that has only been exceeded by the prodigious endurance of that less worthy play, "Abie's Irish Rose." Frank Bacon's name thus was firmly etched high on the roster of the foremost stars of the stage he loved so well.

Now it comes to light that "Barnstorming," the unfinished book by the lamented elder Bacon, is the latest autobiography to engage the attention of motion picture producers. Interest in this book, begun, but never finished, by the veteran actor, has been manifested to such degree that Bacon's son, Lloyd, the film director; his widow and his daughter, Bessie, are planning to complete the book themselves.

"Barnstorming" is said to deal with an era in the American theater of which the surface, as yet, has not even been scratched. Although other pictures, stories and plays have depicted the lives of various "royal families" of the theater, the Bacon volume—if it becomes such—is unique in that it touches a period of theatrical history as yet unexploited—that interval when the "one-night stand" was the dominant factor in the development of stellar figures of the stage.

Frank Bacon and his family toured up and down the United States of America in full-length plays and vaudeville sketches, doing the one-night stands. His book is said to be a cavalcade of barnstorming throughout the West in the days when California was younger than it is now and the West was something more colorful than a mere background for the cinema's sophisticated dramas.

Lloyd Bacon has copyrighted his father's unfinished saga of the theater and plans to finish it as soon as he completes his directorial assignment to Dick Powell's new picture, "The Cowboy From Brooklyn." He hopes to have it finished before he begins work on "Boy Meets Girl," the film version of the stage hit by the Spewacks.

The volume will be in the nature of a family affair, in that Lloyd's daughter, Frances Bacon, a talented young designer on the Warner Brothers' lot, will illustrate it. Another unusual angle will be supplied by Lloyd's 8-week-old son, Frank Bacon 2d, who will add his touch by autographing his famous grandfather's book with his footprint—probably a vague recrudescence of the Sid Grauman influence as expressed in the footprint signatures implanted in the lobby of his Chinese Theater in Hollywood.

Young Bacon, incidentally, begins carrying on a grand old name in the theater at probably an earlier age than any of the others of the Bacons. He already has been signed to portray the role of "Happy," the baby, in "Boy Meets Girl," sharing honors with such celebrities as Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

But the point is that out of the fullness of Frank Bacon's decades of experience behind the footlights is apt to come one of the most memorable pictures of recent years—a film that will do for the stage what "Cimarron," "Wells Fargo," "Gold Is Where You Find It," "The Conquerors" and other epic productions have done for other aspects of the pioneering spirit in America.

Frank Bacon deserves to be so posthumously honored.

It seems we have done a rank injustice to two valued associates in the conduct of this hectic romp, known colloquially as "show business." A few days ago we attributed the distribution of those empty capsules, purporting to be a prescription for "Love Is a Headache," to that wise-cracking young Ray "No Relation" Bell. It finally comes out that the hoax was perpetrated by Frank Taylor, manager of Loew's Columbia, where the picture is to be shown beginning tomorrow, with Gladys George and Franchot Tone in the costellar roles. It is a source of deep chagrin that we should have misguessed the "doctor" in this instance. But it was a natural mistake. We have always held Mr. Taylor's solid acumen in high regard. It just goes to show what the power of association will do!

The Washington Civic Theater's production of Paul Green's play of "Johnny Johnson" is being sponsored by several special groups. The preview performance on next Wednesday night at Wardman Park, will be for the benefit of the Hood College Alumnae Association. The remaining nights of the week will be for the Civic's regular subscribers and the general public. On Wednesday, March 30, the sponsorship will be by the Central Business Association, with Friday, April 1, dedicated to the Radcliff College Club of Washington. The Thursday and Saturday performances of that week once again will be submitted to the tender mercies of the paying public. Nice going is what we always say—and just note the length of that run, the longest in the brief history of the Civic group.

This column, perhaps in a moment of unwarranted enthusiasm, thinks it has made a discovery. There is a barytone voice in Washington that has never been heard by any theatrical management, or the theater-going public, although it deserves to be. This voice completely bowled your correspondent over a night or two ago at a private party and something ought to be done about it—and will be. This is a little too early to name names, but I am entertaining the strongest hunch I have had since the old days of the "Crandall Saturday Nighters," when Kate Smith came out of the nowhere into the here. There will be more of this later—I hope. And when, as and if you hear this voice in a public auditorium, you will be listening to practically a duplication of the Franklin Batie vocal organ that adorned the Al Jolson musical comedies and revues for years on end, when Al was at the top of the form that made him "the world's greatest entertainer." The last time I asked Al about him, he didn't know what had become of Franklin Batie. Well, here is another one just as good, take my word for it. Or don't take my word for it. It is a great voice, anyhow.

Deanna Durbin, first seen in "Three Smart Girls," then in "One Hundred Men and a Girl," and soon to come along in "Mad About Music," will have a busy few hours once she arrives in the Capital today.

By some odd arrangement of schedule, the 15-year-old Miss Durbin will not arrive in Washington until 1:30 p. m. She then will be hustled about the Capital of the Nation, under the protective wing of Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, where her pictures go on view. A considerable list of official calls are listed for Miss Durbin—the House, Senate, where she will meet Vice President Garner, and all the rest of the "best things to see." At 7 p. m., the most brilliant of the screen's juvenile canaries will be honor guest at a dinner to which the press has been graciously invited.

This is not entirely in the nature of an irresponsible frolic for Miss Durbin. It is part of her class work in school. I am told that when she returns to the Universal lot on the West Coast, she will be called upon to recount to her fellow-classmates in the studio school for those still under age the highlights of her brief examination of what the United States Government is all about and what makes it click—if it does.

That, I submit, is a slightly heavy order for anyone of Miss Durbin's age.

Hope-Springs-Eternal Note.

It would be nice if Deanna would sing a number or two at the party tonight—and I probably won't get in for having suggested it!

Miss Durbin will be guided about town by Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, and tonight will be his honor guest at a dinner to the press.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 16.—I took some New York friends to dinner at the Cock and Bull, the English Inn out Sunset way which seats 53 but usually feeds three times that many.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Parked in front we inspected a station wagon, containing everything but a pipe organ. A whole family could set up housekeeping in it. Running hot and cold water kitchen, electric refrigerator, bunks, radio. When I was ordering dinner, I spied Carole Lombard and Clake Gable sitting in the corner. Then I knew whose wagon it was.

Carole must have been in disgrace that night for she was wearing one of her maddest hats. When she does something Clark doesn't like, for revenge she wears a crazy hat.

Clark, usually careful of his diet, was wolfing everything from roast beef and Yorkshire pudding to English trifle, that delicious dessert guaranteed to put on an extra pound.

When he's working, his dressing room is filled with red roses. He does the same for Carole. As you know, red roses mean "I love you." Yellow "jealousy." Pink, "getting icy around the edges." Violets, "I'll never forget you." Forget-me-nots, "I'm cooling." Pansies, I'm beginning to care frightfully."

Did you know they make dummies resembling film stars for store windows? I nearly lost control of my car when I saw one of Clark dressed in the latest spring outfit in a window.

Clark promised me a ride in his station wagon when he comes back from his hunting trip. He laughed and said: "Isn't it a far cry from that $35 broken down car I used to take Janet Gaynor to the studio with when we both worked as extras?"

The post racing parties are in full swing, with all the Eastern visitors still with us. I understand that at Dick Barthelmess' house, nearly $100,000 changed hands during a poker game. Myron Selznick won $25,000 on a pair of queens! The boys may have a difference of opinion in the studio, but they never let it interfere with their social pleasures. Everyone is delighted that Dick is over his eye trouble. Seems he got a streptococcus infection in London and had four operations before he was rid of it.

Len Hannah and Winsor French from Cleveland threw a whale of a cocktail party for all their friends.

Edward Paul England III has finished with the Big Apple and is whipping up a Hawaiian costume party called The Pineapple, at the Victor Hogo on March 30. It's for the benefit of the Assistance League, that charming place in DeLongpre, which helps so many needy. You can get a swell lunch there for 50 cents and you'll be served either by a Junior Leaguer, or a motion picture actress.

Before, Mrs. Leslie Howard returned to England she rebuilt and enlarged the restaurant at the Assistance League.

David Niven, just finished "Four Men and a Prayer," is off to Sun Valley, praying he won't break his neck on skis. The night before he left, he had some guests to dinner. As he knew one of them loved Kummel, he gave his houseboy orders to get some. After dinner when liquors were called for, a large bottle of Kreml, well-known hair tonic, was brought in. He had to go to Sun Valley after that one!

A Musical Hit Tops New Bills For Next Week

Porter's 'You Never Know' at National Monday; Other Programs.

Cole Porter's new musical comedy, "You Never Know," which has achieved a remarkable early success in other Eastern cities where it has been presented—notably Boston—will be presented for the first time in Washington at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. The piece has not as yet been seen in New York. Leading the cast as costars are Clifton Webb, Libby Holman and Lupe Velez, all well known to Washington audiences, although not recently seen on any local stage. Also in the cast are Rex O'Malley, Charles Kemper, April, a young dancer new to the boards; George Dobbs and Cynthia Cavanaugh. The score of "You Never Know" is said to represent Cole Porter's most tuneful efforts in the field of popular composition. John Shubert is the producer and Albert Johnson designed the settings. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Beginning Friday, Loew's Palace Theater will present one of the most artistically produced musical revues ever brought to the screen in "The Goldwyn Follies." Executed entirely in Technicolor, this subject presents a succession of scenes that set a new standard of good taste and beauty. The cast is one of stellar eminence, headed by Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Vera Zorina, one of the most promising "discoveries" of the season; the Ritz Brothers, Helen Jepson, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera; Ella Logan, Jerome Cowan, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Phil Baker, Bobby Clark, Kenny Baker, Balanchine's American Ballet, the "Goldwyn Girls" and scores more. The range of entertainment spans practically the full scope of theatrical diversion, from the Ritz Brothers' low comedy to the high flights of grand opera introduced by Miss Jepson.

"Thrill of a Lifetime," chief screen feature of the bill announced for the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday, enlists the services of The Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Betty Grable, Leif Erikson and Larry "Buster" Crabbe. Dorothy Lamour also appears in a special sequence in which she sings the title song of the picture. The stage bill at the Earle next week will be headlined by Tommy Dorsey, "the sentimental gentleman of swing," and his orchestra and specialists. Also on the bill will be Jay and Lou Seiler, featured comedians with Sonja Henie's ice carnival, and Ann Anderson, dance stylist.

There are said to be stars enough, laughs, tunes and gags enough, for a dozen big musical films in "Sally, Irene and Mary," a film adaptation of the musical comedy of the same name, which comes to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning Friday. Alice Faye and Tony Martin are the featured members of the cast, with Fred Allen in the principal comedy spot. Joan Davis, that eccentric singing comedienne, Marjorie Weaver, Barnett Parker and J. Edward Bromberg are among numerous others prominently assigned in this rollicking story of three sirens of swing in search of social security. Louise Hovick, the former Gypsy Rose Lee, also is in the cast.

At the Belasco Theater, "Mayerling" now is being shown continuously, with Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux costarred in the roles of Archduke Rudolph of Austria and the Baroness Marie Vetsera. This French production has been accorded the New York critics' medal as the best foreign-made picture of 1937, a distinction which it richly deserves. Three engaging short subjects supplement the feature.

Joe E. Brown comes to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, in "Wide Open Faces," his first comedy under the banner of Columbia Pictures. Jane Wyman, Alison Skipworth and Alan Baxter appear in the supporting cast. Joe appears as Maitre D'Squirt, a soda jerker, in this production. He also is something of an amateur detective—he thinks.

What is heralded as one of the season's most amusing screen comedies will be seen at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when "Love Is a Headache," will be presented as chief screen feature with Gladys George and Franchot Tone costarred. The story deals with the experiences of a famous actress who is constantly being "panned" by a celebrated Broadway columnist. Mickey Rooney, the late Ted Healy, Virginia Weidler, Jessie Ralph, Frank Jenks, Barnett Parker and Ralph Morgan lead the supporting ensemble. Short-reel subjects and "News of the Day" will augment the feature.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," with "Quintupland," starring the Dionne quints, will be continued through next week at RKO-Keith's Theater—the sixth of the run of the major feature. This is an ideal combination of screen features for all classes and all ages. Not to have seen this bill is to have missed the treat of the season.

"The March of Time," a new "Popular Science" short subject, and Walt Disney's Silly Symphony in color, "Elmer's Elephant," will comprise the foremost short subjects on the new bill opening tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. The bill, as usual, will be based on complete newsreel coverage of the world.

After three consecutive weeks of "Peter the First," the Little Theater announces the revival of Charlie Chaplin's last picture, "Modern Times," as chief feature of the bill for the week beginning Sunday. In this hilarious comedy, Paulette Goddard is seen for the first time as Chaplin's leading woman. The bill will be augmented by added short subjects and newsreel.

Willkie and Lilienthal Bargain Over Utility Purchase by TVA

Underwood & Underwood.

Wendell Willkie (right) and David Lilienthal.

'No Change in General Situation' Reported After a Day of Preliminary Conversation; Magnate Ready to Sell 18 Private Power Properties.

By the Associated Press.

Wendell L. Willkie, utility executive, and David E. Lilienthal, power director of TVA, went through the preliminaries yesterday of driving a bargain for Government purchase of privately owned power facilities in the TVA area.

A discussion, carried on throughout the day, resulted, Willkie said, in "no change in the general situation." He added that the conference was confined to methods of procedure and to the presentation of statistical data.

A recent Supreme Court decision placed the Federal Government and municipalities in a position to install publicly owned power facilities in competition with the private utilities.

Willkie exhibited a readiness to dispose of 18 private power properties, if he can get his price.

"It's either sell or have our system duplicated," he said with a rueful grin.

He added that the conference with Lilienthal would be resumed "in a couple of weeks."

In the negotiations, the bid and asked quotations are:

The value of the power companies as "going concerns"—asked by Willkie.

Coal

that Lewis and Guffey were striving to get absolute control of the coal commission in order to dominate its policies. There are intimations this move was a part of the arrangement by which Guffey last week announced his support of Lewis' candidate for the Pennsylvania Democratic gubernatorial nomination, Thomas Kennedy.

Still another report was that Guffey and Lewis were backing Pleas E. Greenleaf, a former political associate of Paul McNutt in Indiana, for the chairmanship in Hosford's place. The commission selects its own chairman. The Guffey-Lewis candidate for the vacancy left by Hosford's resignation was reported to be Walter A. Jones, Pittsburgh oil man who was a big contributor to the Democratic war chest in 1936.

There also were reports a movement was on foot to have the President demand resignations of all the coal commissioners in order that the quarreling within that body over jobs might be ended and a new start made. Added up, these reports pointed to intrigue and Machiavellian maneuvering unequaled in any Federal agency.

Confirmation Lacking.

Confirmation of the reports, however, was lacking. Hosford disavowed knowledge of them, asserting, regarding the report that Guffey and Lewis were seeking to get control of the commission, "I do not believe there is a word of truth in it."

All that could be confirmed is that the commission has been torn with dissension over personnel. It has voted pretty much as a unit on matters of policy and technical details relating to the coal industry, but on matters of personnel it has been sharply—and sometimes bitterly—divided.

The split in the commission, it was said, has divided Greenlee, on one side, with the two labor members, John C. Lewis (no relation to the C. I. O. leader) and Percy Tetlow, and, on the other side, Thomas S. Haymond, Walter H. Maloney and C. E. Smith. Hosford was described as supporting the latter three until recently when Smith became ill. The latter, expected to return here tomorrow, has been away from the commission since early January.

The commission's publicity division has been headed by Harold K. Philips, former Washington correspondent and American Legion official. He stated last night that he had determined to resign before the commission's action was taken and would adhere to that intention. Others in the division were Martin A. White, Bruce Macnamee, Thoas D. Peters and James M. Maxson.

Cost $25,000 A Year.

It is understood that the division cost approximately $25,000 annually and that a desire for economy was given as the reason for its abolition. In several quarters it was predicted that the division would be re-created with new personnel within a short time.

The action was taken at a regular meeting of the commission. But the action was not on the agenda of subjects to be discussed which was distributed to members of the commission Tuesday, it was reported. Hosford was required to be away from the commission's offices on business in the city during the meeting. When he returned and learned what had happened, he instructed Secretary L. W. McCullough to record him as dissenting.

Greenlee, Lewis, Tetlow, Haymond and Maloney were reported to have voted for the motion to abolish the division. But Haymond and Maloney were said to have voted affirmatively for the motion in order to be able to move a reconsideration later, knowing they would be out-voted.

Robt. Garrison And Two Killed In Auto Crash

Garrison

tended beyond the sides of the trailer.

The entire top of the automobile was crushed, Crawford said, and all occupants of the car were killed instantly, their bodies pinned in the wreckage.

A last-minute decision to take his vacation by auto rather than by boat, as originally planned, cost Garrison his life and brought a promising newspaper career to an untimely close. Weatherford and his sister were driving to their home at Key West, Fla. The address carried on papers found on their bodies gave the address as 629 Caroline street.

The three had left Washington at about 7 p. m. Tuesday. A few days previously Miss Weatherford's sister, who also lived in Baltimore, had preceded them to Key West, where they were to have had a holiday together.

Garrison had purposely delayed his vacation last summer to be able to visit Florida winter resorts.

The bodies were taken to Ridgeland, S. C., to the undertaking parlor of R. L. Dorriss. The driver of the truck—Millage Murdock, of Yemassee, S. C.—was ordered held at Hardeeville by Patrolman Crawford, pending an inquest to be conducted by a magistrate today.

Was an Only Son.

Garrison, 21 years old, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holt Garrison, sr., of Washington. The father is a department superintendent at the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry.

Garrison was a brilliant student at Central High School, where he was sports editor and, later, editor of the school paper, the Central Bulletin. He was born in Newport News, Va., and came to The Post in 1935. He was employed first in the circulation department, but he wanted to write and soon came to the editorial department as a copy boy.

He shortly was made a reporter and assigned to police and general assignments until last June when he entered the sports department, where he made a specialty of college athletics.

Though he maintained a full schedule as a member of The Post staff, his excellence in scholastic standing was maintained at the university where he had enrolled as a part-time student.

Toll Rises to 22 In Eight States Hit by Tornado

By the Associated Press.

The dead in a series of trans-Mississippi tornadoes numbered 22 list night. In sections of eight States there was heavy damage.

The storms struck Tuesday, following upon an erratic but generally northward course. The Belleville, Ill., area was hardest hit. There nine died. Eight were killed in the region of Kennett, Mo., four in Alabama and one in Georgia. Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and Iowa reported no deaths.

There were unofficial estimates that least 1,000 homes were destroyed. Much of the affected area was semi-isolated farming country.

Heavy winds and high rains followed the storms in some areas.

African communicatoins were threatened by Italian and German forces in Spain was laid before the French cabinet by Premier Leon Blum.

The premier told the ministers that in return for the British pledge France had agreed to keep her frontier with government Spain closed to men and munitions.

Urgent Appeal Sent.

Previously Blum had sent an urgent appeal to Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain to join in an immediate effort to bring about an armistice in Spain.

French officials had said that unless Britain joined at once in such an effort France would have "no alternative" but to open her frontier to aid for the hard-beset Spanish government.

In the house of commons, the opposition, through an unusual parliamentary maneuver marked by an angry exchange over Britain's indecisive foreign policy, opened the way for fiery debate.

There, Prime Minister Chamberlain in effect said that Britain had laid aside any consideration of restoring Germany's war-lost colonies because of Hitler's absorption of Austria.

Laborite Arthur Henderson asked the prime minister if Germany's move "would prejudice immediate discussion in this (the colonial) question."

Chamberlain replied:

"It is obvious that in the present circumstances nothing further can be done in that direction." He insisted, however, he had urged the British view that no European changes should be made by violence.

Laborite Draws Cheers.

Clement R. Attlee, Laborite and leader of the official opposition, drew the cheers of his backers as he opened the foreign affairs debate with the question:

"Does anyone doubt that the assistance of Hitler in the conquest of Spain is part of the price for Mussolini's betrayal of Austria?"

Chamberlain in reply accused the Laborite of using "hard, provocative words."

"It is tempting to reply in kind," he said, "* * * but the international situation is so grave I have no heart for interchanges across the table or reproaches and accusations of betrayal."

Attlee had asked:

"What will be the worth of Gibraltar if the shores of north Africa and Spain are held by a hostile power?"

The prime minister pointed out that foreign forces were fighting on both sides in Spain.

Evokes Protests.

He evoked opposition protests when he described as "only rumors" reports that fresh forces had gone to the aid of the Spanish insurgents.

Upholding the British policy of non-intervention in the Spanish conflict, Chamberlain said:

"We would best serve British interests, best serve peace, best serve the cause of freedom if we keep out of Spain, continue the policy of non-intervention and do not attempt to burn our fingers as others nations might well do."

Earlier he had told the legislators in effect that the government had laid aside any consideration of restoring Germany's war-lost colonies.

He said the world had "been brought face to face with the extremely ugly truth that neither treaty texts nor international law have any influence in dealing with power politics" where "force and force alone decides."

He rejected any idea of bringing Germany's conquest of Austria before the League of Nations, declearing League members were not prepared to go to war on the issue and therefore "nothing could be gained."

He called Germany's Austrian action as a "fait accompli unparalleled in history."

Alarms Are Tested.

Air-raid alarms were tested at the great Portsmouth Navy Yard.

Twenty thousand workers there reached the safety of underground shelters in 15 minutes in an official test of elaborate air-raid precautions.

Authorties said they were satisfied the arrangements would be effective in a real emergency.

The push button in a central office rang alarms in all offices, workshops and aboard all ships. Workers then rushed to pre-assigned shelters.

First Lady Finds U. S. Not Troubled By Austrian Coup

Los Angeles, March 16 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt said today that so far as she was able to observe, "there seems to be little anxiety in the United States over the German-Austrian situation."

"We are so far away we have a false sense of security," she said in an interview. "We are not so concerned about conditions in other countries which cause war because we think these conditions do not concern us. But they do."

Is This the Reason You Are Constipated?

If you're wondering why your bowels don't work right—stop and think about what you eat. Bread, meat, eggs and potatoes. All good nourishing foods—but all concentrated, lacking in "bulk." And you need "bulk"! Some food that forms a soft, spongy mass in the bowels—helps them move.

If it's this lack of "bulk" that's causing your constipation, Kellogg's All-Bran is just what you need. It soaks up water and softens like a sponge. And this soft mass helps your bowels move. In addition, All-Bran gives you Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. Eat this crisp crunchy cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and enjoy happier days. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Within the Home-

WHAT makes the home live?—Exquisite decorations—lovely furniture? A piano, books, fine paintings? None of these things—for without the human touch these are but inanimate objects of wood and metal. So it is then that we judge character in people by the homes in which they live, for it takes the human touch to give a home a soul—a spirit!

Likewise is a store judged not by its furnishings and decorations but by its keepers. We are well aware of this fact and further aware that the Ross Company is no exception to the rule. We have received many compliments on the appearance of our store, and are deeply proud of them. But we fully recognize that "a man is known by the company he keeps"—therefore we make it a cardinal principle from which there can be no swerving to offer for sale only those articles which through their intrinsic merit have gained national recognition. In doing this we are confident of your favorable attitude toward us, since our merchandise, as well as our store, directly reflects our own business personality. May we thank you for the confidence your have displayed in us—the same confidence that has built the Ross store up to a point where one out of every ten persons living in Washington and vicinity are faithful customers of ours.

Illustrated at the left is a diamond ring typical of our large and distinguished selection. Prices range from $19.75 to $1,500. We shall be happy to have you inspect this selection at your convenience. Credit terms if desired.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Breaking Under Strain of Mother-in-Law's Constant Flow of Sarcasm, Woman Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For years I have tried to get along with my mother-in-law, who stays in bed until late in the day and sits and looks out of the window the rest of the time, but who is ready to take everything anyone says to heart and answer back with the cattiest, most sarcastic words at her command, never letting a subject drop. I can stay away from her house but she comes to visit and sits by the hour and just rocks and drops nasty remarks that don't sink in until after she has gone.

* * * *

She has no confidence in anyone and would rather tell a lie when the truth would serve better. She does this just to get even with fancied wrongs. She isn't that way with me alone, but toward all her other daughters-in-law, who are fine, good girls, easy to get along with, and also toward her neighbors.

* * * *

I just can't understand such a person. I have been among lots of people and she is the worst I ever had to deal with. Sometimes I feel as if I will just begin giving back as good as she sends, if I can. But I can never think of anything nasty to say until I get away. Letting her get away with so much and not even answering back is getting to the place where it affects my health. How would you handle such a person?

DOT.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DOT: Spiteful thinking and shrewish speaking are degenerative habits of personality, to be avoided at all costs by the person who wishes to preserve his mental, spiritual and psychic health. I say habits, because such they are, and nothing else. As Shakespeare so wisely observed, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." Every man's (or woman's) thought processes, and his lingual expressions of opinion, are his own to fashion and control. He can make them constructive and kindly, generous and appreciative, magnanimous and affirmative, aspiring and ennobling, to himself and to others, or he can make them just the reverse: bitter, hateful, ugly, ignoble and destructive.

* * * *

Through sheer mental and physical laziness, your mother-in-law has committed herself to a vicious and limited circle of thinking and speaking which can only be broken by a deliberate act of her own will. She is suffering from mental dyspepsia, which afflicts the person who fails to find a constructive and satisfying outlet for his energies. For lack of wholesome exercise, her spiritual nature is, metaphorically speaking, drying inward from the edges to a black and bitter core.

* * * *

If she could but realize that one's spiritual nature must be continuously fed, through the mind, with ennobling thought; and through the heart, with generous, sympathetic feeling; or else it will wither away into pitifully distorted ugliness as would a starved body, she would be in urgent haste to change her mode of thought and speech.

* * * *

You can only deal with her as you would with a sick person. Turn a deaf ear to her querulousness; make no attempt to answer her in kind, lest you become a victim of the same vicious habit which has so long ensnared her; avoid her society as much as possible, and see if you find, in library or bookstore, on newsstands, magazine racks or in church reading rooms, inspirational literature of a kind which might guide her mind into different and loftier channels of thinking.

* * * *

Since her conduct is affecting your own nervous health, I think it would be an excellent self-protective measure to read such material yourself. One of the best things of this kind I have encountered in months is Winifred Rhoades' "The Self You Have to Live With" (Lippincott, $1.75), which will be on the bookstalls after March 31. Indorsed by psychiatrists, physicians and churchmen alike, this inspirational volume gives advice of the most practical kind for dealing with despondent social attitudes.

M. H.

Tip to Tongue-tied.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My reason for writing you lies in your answer to "Anxious," which appeared March 3. "Anxious" begins by saying, "I would like to know if it is possible to acquire wit and humor," and goes on to state that if a party tends to be at all formal, she gets tongue-tied and can think of nothing to say. Your definitions of wit and humor are excellent, but you say, "Whether these attributes of personality—one of the mind, the other of the heart—can be 'acquired,' is problematic."

* * * *

That doubt is the greatest stumbling block in overcoming what the shy person believes to be his lack of intelligence and intuition. I have been through it myself and I know just how panicky a sensitive person can feel when a dinner partner looks her in the eye and expects her to say something. Fear of failure drives every thought from the mind; and in a desperate effort to direct attention away from herself, the shy person resorts to the direct-question method which you warn against. It is very apt to bring a blunt "yes,' or "no," and then you are back again in the same old rut, trying to think up something to say that is neither too serious nor too silly.

* * * *

Utterly absurd as it may seem, this state of mind is not an exaggeration. Yet, it can be overcome. It took me a good many years, but I can honestly say I no longer feel shy or embarrassed, even in the most awkward situations, and, in fact, I am frequently complimented on the ease with which I amuse chance acquaintances with worldly small talk. If I have succeeded, so can anyone else.

* * * *

The solution lies in so far forgetting yourself that the fear of being a social failure never enters your head. When you have attained to that degree of self-forgetfulness, you are no longer either shy or tongue-tied. Conversation is merely an exchange of ideas, and the sensitive nature, when not self-engrossed, is well equipped to discern what the other person feels and thinks and would like to talk about.

Do tell "Anxious" to plunge right in and not to be discouraged. You can't sink, and once you start swimming, the water is fine. Suncerely yours,

A. G. W.

New Nail Polishes In Neon Shades

Newest shades in Spring finger nail polishes have been made to pick up neon accents in the costume. Emerald green, sapphire, deep purply amethyst, bronze, topaz and pimento red are designed to electrify dead black or navy blue. A multicloroed turban, enormous headlight emerald bracelet, a neon red rose with one of the above colors of polishes add a clorful note to a navy or black dress.

Toe nails in neon colors add the final touch to make-up when worn with sandals and should match the polish of the nails.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Mussels' Ailment.

One day in July, 1927, a man of 35 years of age went into a restaurant in San Francisco and ate a dozen and a half mussels for supper. About a half hour later he began to feel aching and tired all over; then he was sick at his stomach and began to have trouble with his breathing. He became unconscious, his breathing gradually became shallower and slower, until all the muscles which move respiration were paralyzed, and he died 5 hours after the supper of mussels.

Every year since then there have been deaths and severe sickness following eating of raw mussels along the Pacific Coast. Three cases and two deaths were reported in 1936. Laboratory experiments have been made which make it plain that the poison comes to the mussel contained in the ocean water. It is probably the food of the shellfish.

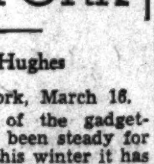
It is not possible to tell a poisoned mussel from a healthy one on inspection or from smell. Conducive to a large epidemic is a spell of fair weather and favorable low tides over the week-ends, when most of the mussels are collected and consumed. Until the investigations have proceeded to the place where where we know exactly the cause of the poisoning and how to prevent it, my advice would be not to eat any mussels on the Pacific Coast between the months of May and October. This may be a little tough on the mussel-fishing industry, but at least it will save your life.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 16.

THE GROWTH of the gadget-wearing mania has been steady for several years, but this winter it has set a record. Never have so many odd, comical, or attractive doodads been hung from the Nation's women as at present. Time was when a shiny clip or two were enough, but no longer.



ALICE HUGHES

The rebirth of yellow gold as personal decoration has put the good old gleam on feminine necks again, and some of the necklaces are in the form of little boots and fishes—though there's no connection, of course. Just happened in designers' minds.

In the mad search for novelty, there's evidently nothing too nicely insane for wear on the suit lapel, around the neck, or on the wrist. The other day, for instance, I received a new wrist bangle made of three nuts—a filbert, a walnut and a pecan. The implication, in a slangy way, is too obvious, but the thing is considered smart enough to be promoted by one of the very fanciest and best stores on the Avenue. The contribution of Paris for the spring is Schiaparelli's circus ornaments—the prancing horse, performers on the high wire, and other characters from the Big Top.

However, we don't have to import our ornamental gadgets from France. We have some excellent thinker-uppers of our own, and one of the most interesting is young Martha Sleeper, the pretty actress who only awaits the one big part to become one of the leading figures of the native stage. Martha designs as well as acts, and this month has done her bit for unusual pins by creating a line made of wood and feathers. Some I've seen are primitive African masks, another is a bison skull on the Georgia O'Keeffe order, and she herself wears a wooden decoy duck on her suit lapel. All these things are fine arts notions made into practical fashions by this clever girl.

In fact, you can wear about anything you like in the trick gadget line this spring—and ten to one everyone will say "My, how smart!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—This news from Miami concerning Sir Sonja Henie, the scooting knight of St. Olav, is not too pleasing to her local admirers. Of course, the fact that her ice show dropped some gold because of high expense is not overly distressing, since the little blonde must have most of the money in the United States already. But a newspaper friend tells me that she went a little high millinery on the craft down there, which is not good hearing. Like all public figures in the entertainment business, she has zoomed to fame and wealth on the wings of the daily press, and I hope that Sir Sonja always remembers it.

* * * *

I also learn that Sylvia Sidney, the little screen girl, soon will marry Luther Adler, currently playing the lead in our dramatic hit, "Golden Boy"—if, indeed, she hasn't by the time this sees daylight.

Huntington Sculpture Exhibit Recalls S. C. 'Outdoor Museum'

Greenbrook Gardens, Near Georgetown, Gift to State With $1,500,000 Endowment, Contain Work of Every American of Note.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

A STORY of contributions to the preservation of American sculpture of this area and the conservation of flowers, trees and vines of South Carolina is of current interest in connection with the exhibition of sculpture by Mrs. Anna Hyatt Huntington at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Mrs. Huntington and her husband, Archer Huntington, have presented to the State of South Carolina an endowment fund of $1,500,000, together with the famous Brookgreen Gardens near Georgetown, S. C.

These gardens are a mecca for artists and art lovers, naturalists and horticulturists from all parts of the world. They comprise an out-of-doors museum of examples of American creative genius in marble and bronze and of the luxuriant natural growths of the South Carolina country.

An Outdoor Museum.

Sixteen of the best known examples of the work of Mrs. Huntington are among the several hundred pieces of sculpture by Americans in the gardens. Mrs. Huntington planned the gardens and she has seen to it that a proper setting has been provided for each sample of sculpture.

None of the pieces is placed in the "stiff" arrangement necessary in indoor museums. At the end of a trail, in a natural bower or surmounting heights looking over the rice fields, one comes upon sculptured masterpieces, or they make the proper accent along a path or about a high-placed fountain and the picturesque streams of water that trickle down a hillside.

Other accents are given by tall trees and the gray, hanging moss and brilliant flowers of South Carolina.

Shows Own Work.

Among Mrs. Huntington's own 16 pieces in the gardens are "Youth Taming the Wild," which dominates the entrance pool; the "Great Danes," surmounting the pillars of the entrance gates; a reduced replica of her famous "Joan of Arc," a reduced replica of the bronze equestrian statue of "The Cid of Campeador" and a charming "Young Diana," in the center of a pool.

The wall that surrounds the 66 acres of Brookgreen Gardens was designed by Mrs. Huntington. It has a real aspect of age. Its shallow curves afford opportunity for placing sculptures. Luxuriant jasmine, coral honeysuckle and other vines add to its beauty.

Among whimsical quotations selected by Mr. and Mrs. Huntington for panels of the wall is one from the author of Alice in Wonderland: "How doth the little alligator improve his shining tale." There are other just as apt quotations dealing with nature in the panels, one fitting in particularly with the jasmine and alpine blossomed wall: "The sunshine speaks and its voice is a bird."

Art Great Entertained.

The site of the gardens purchased a number of years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Huntington, includes part of a number of famous plantations, the most important being that of Washington Alston. There was an old house on this plantation but it was destroyed by fire. One of the first acts of Mr. and Mrs. Huntington was to restore the old graveyard in which the proud Alstons had been buried for generations. One of the most distinguished members of the clan, Theodosia Burr Alston, daughter of Aaron Burr, was lost at sea. Mr. and Mrs. Huntington erected a tablet to her memory.

Energy, genius and success mark this slender woman with keen, kindly eyes and the strong wrists and hands of the sculptor. Her works are scattered throughout the world and represent 40 years of art achievement. While she is proud of being of the family of the Hyatts of Maryland, after whom Hyattsville was named, Mrs. Huntington spent most of her early life in Cambridge, Mass.

Known as Horsewoman.

Her father was professor of paleontology at Harvard University. She entered the world of art through music. It was her sister who turned to art at a very early age, while Anna studied music. One day Dr. Alpheus Hyatt told Anna to put the leg on a clay model of a child on which her sister was working for an exhibition. Anna complied and discovered the fascination of her subject. Soon she was modeling the people and animals of her daily life. When she was 16 she was determined on a career as sculptor.

Her first art studies were with Henry Kitson and later she was a pupil of Louis Agassiz. From her early days of art horses had great fascination for her. She spent a number of years in Maryland raising, training and modeling horses and is known there for her horsemanship as well as her art.

In 1900 Miss Hyatt cut two great Danes out of blue granite and these pieces won much attention. She has always felt that no one else could shape her art and insisted that the work must be done entirely by herself. When she was at work on her first great international achievement, the figure of Joan d'Arc in Paris, she was so afraid that some one would think she had help in the difficult work that she shut herself up in her shop during the creation of the piece with only a servant to wait on her. The finished work she presented to a French convent, but later used it as an inspiration to win the competition for the Joan of Arc now on Riverside Drive, New York.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Anne Jamison Keeps Her Good Looks by Riding Bicycle.

By Ida Jean Kain.

EVEN ON St. Patrick's Day you have to get up early in the morning to get ahead of the Irish. The Irish colleens, famous for their beautiful complexions, good figures and irrepressible vivacity, as well as their disarming wit, are out of doors pedaling their bicycles and drinking in the fresh salty air long before their American sisters tumble out of bed.

You can imagine the surprise of the Hollywood milkmen who encounter a lovely Irish colleen pedaling her "bike" up and down Beverly Hills boulevard at 6 a. m. They probably think she is pixlated, but it is just a good old Irish custom, and one widely endorsed for its beauty value. How well this rise-early-to-bike custom pays is illustrated by the good looks of Anne Jamison, an energetic daughter of Erin who is winning laurels as a radio and concert singer in this country.

Weight Shifting Drill.

Miss Jamison, you will agree, is a vigorous believer in exercise, and she does not coast along on her bicycling. Her superb posture, graceful walk and perfect figure are the rewards of a rigorous discipline imposed by her army officer father. She was brought up on the idea that the military adds two inches to every soldier's height by pulling up all the slack in posture, and like any soldier, she was taught to stand and walk "tall."

One of her routines was the regiment's weight-shifting drill, which aids smoothness and precision of movement. Here's the way you do it!

With head up, back straight, let the hands fall limply to the sides. Then, standing on one leg with knee straight, circle the other leg from front to back. Shift the weight to the other leg and repeat the routine. This exercised is practiced for long periods to acquire a rhythmic movement and perfect balance. (By the way, girls, that exercise will give you slim hips and lovely thighs!)

A posture exercise recommended by Miss Jamison is the following: Lie face downward on the floor with arms stretched out at the sides and legs held stiff. Rock back and forth, using the abdomen as a pivot and keeping the chest inflated. Now, clasp the hands behind the back and raise the shoulders and the legs backward as high as possible. Bend the legs only at the hips and be sure to keep the knees straight. Relax and repeat. The exercise is splendid for posture but should not be practiced by anyone having a tendency to sway back.

Balanced Menu Given.

Miss Jamison's "praise Allah" routine is helpful in counteracting any tendency to sway back. Begin with a sitting position, legs thrust straight in front with knees straight and arms in front of the body, shoulder level. Holding the elbows straight, move the arms backward as the head and trunk bend forward. Keep the head and back in line, bending only at the waist.

Maybe it isn't luck that the colleens are so pretty. With this sort of exercise program it would be impossible not to have the superb figure and high vitality that are the essentials of beauty.

Modern Home Included In Tour of Georgetown

Lovers of Historic Lore Will Have Chance to Compare Houses of Colonial Era With Present; Visits Scheduled for April 8 and 9.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Once "a whirlpool of changing administrations and embassies," Georgetown rested on its traditional laurels while the City of Washington budded and blossomed across the Potomac, and gradually stole the spotlight. In recent years, however, interest again has turned to that quaintly colorful section of the Nation's Capital, and each springtime, hundreds of visitors learn their history lessons by visiting Georgetown houses.

HOPE R. MILLER.

On the heels of the announcement that this year's tour is scheduled for April 8 and 9, comes word that for the first time on record a modernistic house will be on display along with a number of colonial houses that have escaped the influence of fashions and fancies. Thus visitors to the 18 residences included on the forthcoming tour will have an opportunity to compare the old with the new, and to glimpse Georgetown in both its traditional and its most progressive phases.

The complete list of houses and hostesses has not yet been made; but half of the former and a good many of the latter have already been selected. An effort is being made to include some of the smaller, "lived-in" type of homes as well as the bigger ones recently restored. Since early Georgetown drew not only shippers and ship owners, but artisans and merchants who repaired and stocked the ships and lived in modest dwellings. Some of these, restored in recent years, are among the architectural gems of Georgetown and are owned by socially prominent persons, who have agreed to open them for the benefit of St. John's Church, Georgetown.

Nine Houses Already on List

Among the houses already on the list for this year is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Tittman, jr., at 3010 O street, built before 1800 and saved in its original design by Elsie Cobb Wilson (Mrs. Louis Little), who acquired it several years ago. A drawing room with two unusual fireplaces and a paneled library are its distinctive features. There is a small walled garden in the rear, which also will be open for the tour.

Also on this year's list is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., at 1339 Twenty-ninth street. A year ago this attractive dwelling was just three very old, very small houses, in a seemingly hopeless state of delapidation. Now the three have become one—and a very attractive one at that. Under the direction of George Howe, a living room and dining room came out of one house, a hall and study out of another, and a kitchen and pantry out of another. You traipse up and down steps going from one of the original houses to the other and the spacious living room opens on a brick terrace surrounded by a large garden.

The modernistic house at 3230 Reservoir road is the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith. About a year ago work was started on this, the second up-to-the-minute house in Georgetown. A low, white plastered structure, it has a roof for sunbathing on top and so many big windows, sunlight can find its way in . . . on all sides. Spacious rooms are another feature of the dwelling. An unusual note is introduced in the living room where the walls are painted black and serve as an excellent background for the owners' rare collection of modern paintings. Incidentally, both Mr. and Mrs. Smith occasionally "dabble in oils" themselves. He is connected with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mrs. Smith is from Philadelphia.

Grant's Dwelling Included on Tour

Last year the house in which the Smiths were living, at 3263 N street, was on the Georgetown tour. This year, it is occupied by Representative and Mrs. James D. Wadsworth and is again included on the list. Another to be open on the forthcoming tour is at 3238 R street and is occupied by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, who has just had it done over. One of the most historic houses in Georgetown, it was once the dwelling of Gen. U. S. Grant. Later, it was the home of Col. John J. Joyce, a picturesque figure who disputed with Ella Wheeler Wilcox as to which was the author of:

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone."

Other houses listed on the tour are those of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, 2900 N street; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peter, 3027 N street; Mr. and Mrs. G. Howland Chase, 3057 N street; Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Harrison, 1430 Thirty-third street. There will be nine more.

The committee for selecting homes for the tour is headed by Mrs. Louis E. Jeffries. Mrs. James Berrall is soliciting hostesses. Among those already on her list are Mrs. Devereaux Green, Mrs. Walter Peter, Mrs. Robert Graham Wilson, Mrs. F. Bland Tucker, Mrs. Martin Goldsborough, Mrs. J. B. Wycoff, Mrs. H. G. Barkley, Miss Eliza Darneille, Mrs. Clarence Charest, Mrs. John Jackson, Mrs. Alexander Steuart, Miss Bertha Looker, Mrs. Owsley Stanley, sr., Mrs. Owsley Stanley, jr., Mrs. Phillip Turner, Mrs. William Beall and Mrs. Charles Willcox.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

SINCE SPRING will be officially here at the time of the next exhibit at the Washington Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art, the paintings to be shown will appropriately represent flowers and fruits. The pictures will be mostly modern, with a few seventeenth and eighteenth century works thrown in for contrast.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, enthusiasts of the exhibitions, will also entertain at luncheon that day.

Unlike so many fashionable projects, the gallery has done rather well financially since it was opened last autumn. The shows staged every three or four weeks have drawn almost 10,000 paying visitors. Mrs. George A. Garrett is cofounder and vice chairman of the enterprise.

OF PURELY FRIVOLOUS NOTE: Dinners are just a little ahead of musicales as the most popular form of Lenten entertainment. Speaking of musicales, whoever rents those stiff little gold chairs out to Capital hostesses must have grown rich during the past few weeks.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke will entertain at a dinner on Thursday evening, March 24, and Mrs. Bowler Hull will do the same on the following evening. With Easter holidays here, a number of young people have joined their families, among them Miss Rose Chatfield Taylor. Her parents, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, will give a dinner for her on Saturday evening, April 2. Sharing honors will be Miss Elizabeth Barbour.

The dinner which Mrs. Charles Hofer and her son, Myron Hofer, were to have given tomorrow evening has been canceled, as the hostess is ill.

CLARENCE HEWES has returned from a trip to the South and will be at his Massachusetts avenue residence here before going to England to spend his usual summer. Mr. Hewes visited Capt. and Mrs. John Gibbons in Palm Beach, then went to his New Orleans home, arriving just in time for Mardi Gras. He attended the Garden Festival in Natchez, Miss., which attracted a whole special train of Virginians, among them Miss Charlotte Noland, head of Foxcroft.

Natchez really goes to town for this event. All the beautiful old homes are opened wide, with the owenrs dressed in costumes of Ante-Bellum days. One evening there was a brilliant ball at which the men came dressed in Confederate costumes and the women in beautiful gowns handed down by their great-grandmothers. Natchez is one of those rare places where it is not unusual to find houses where the occupants are the sixth successive generation to live there.

THE HALF DOZEN young ladies who worked four hours a day at the Robert Woods Bliss bindery have been "laid off," and the Blisses now have one German to do this work. Among those who toiled for a while at binding their thousands of volumes were Miss Diana Rowland, Miss Christine Ekengren, Miss Anne Perin and Miss Betty Shouse. The work is interesting, but arduous, as the girls found that to do it most efficiently they had to stand on their feet almost continuously. The entire library is being rebound, and each book differently.

Public Asked To Assist in Safety Work

P.-T. A. Congress Cites Need of Co-operation in Campaign.

Police Captain Calls on Pedestrians to Obey Traffic Rules.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Co-operation of the average citizen with the agencies seeking to promote safety for residents of the District was stressed yesterday as one of the answers to the city's safety problem in the forum conducted by the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers at the Pepco auditorium.

The meeting, which was arranged by Mrs. Pearl Clark, State safety chairman, and opened by the State president, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, included at the morning session, a panel on legislation, motor vehicle administration, enforcement and education.

M. O. Eldridge, assistant in the vehicular traffic department of the District, urged pedestrian observance of street lights as of almost equal importance with observance by motorists.

"I should like to see 'don't walk' as well as 'walk' at the F street crossings," he said," "and I'd lake to see it enforced on pedestrians. If those signs were strictly obeyed, the crossings would be as safe as though there were no traffic on the streets."

Mr. Eldridge also decried disregard of regulations by persons crossing in the middle of the street. Because there appears less traffic in the center of the block than at the intersection, many feel safer in crossing there, but records show the hazards are greater than at the more crowded intersections where lights, or traffic officers govern the movement of vehicles, he said.

Captain Smith On the Panel

Capt. Milton D. Smith, of the traffic division of the Metropolitan Police, also spoke of the importance of pedestrians observing traffic regulations and indicated that the same persons who failed to observe the law when they were on foot were likely to show similar disregard when they were at the wheel of a motor vehicle.

He told of the training traffic officers now receive in modern methods of accident investigation and in first aid to enable them to give assistance as well as to obtain evidence in accident cases. Wherever it is considered sufficient to give a warning and dismiss a driver in event of a minor traffic violation, this is done, said Capt. Smith. The effort of the traffic officers is to keep the streets safe, rather than to hunt opportunities to make arrests.

In answer to a question from Mrs. Clark as to why traffic officers are not always at their posts guarding school corners at hours when they are supposed to be there, Capt. Smith explained that they were obliged to appear for court cases or investigations at those hours. The real answer is lack of adequate personnel, he said.

Lax License Laws Here Are Criticized

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the woman's safety committee of the D. C. Motor Club, told of the successful work of her committee in opposing the rider which would have restricted the site of the proposed new Jefferson Memorial School to an area notorious for its accident toll. She also went into detail as to the traffic laws in Finland as described recently by Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, in an address before the woman's safety committee. She contrasted the strict requirements for a driver's license there with the lax ones here where, according to Mr. Eldridge, from 150 to 175 licenses are issued daily.

In discussing this phase of the situation, Mr. Eldridge had expressed regret at the repeal of the law giving jurisdiction over those who teach new motorists to drive.

Following a luncheon served at the Electric Institute, the Parent-Teacher Congress reconvened for an afternoon session devoted chiefly to the subject of safety in the home.

A radio skit, "Keeping Them Safe," by pupils of the Gordon Junior High School, opened the program, and speakers were J. S. Bartlett, of the Electric Institute; Mrs. Adelia Boynton Heinie, of the National Child Research Bureau; Donald T. Sheehan, of the Tuberculosis Association; Gordon Stone, of the Red Cross; Dr. James M. Cummings, of the Board of Health, and Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, of the National Folk Festival Association.

Mr. Sheehan paid tribute to the Parent-Teacher Congress for its annual summer "round-up" involving the medical examination of preschool children, asserting the project was the best yet undertaken as a preventive measure.

Miss Knott was the only speaker of the group who did not deal directly with safety problems. She described plans for the National Folk Festival being sponsored by The Washington Post May 6, 7 and 8. The Parent-Teacher Congress, she said, comes nearest to being a folk organization of any in the country. Its activities are based on community interest, she pointed out—the same sort of community spirit responsible for the folk songs and dances which have developed in various sections.

Woman's Club Selects Slate

Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, who has been president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase for the past year, heads the slate of officers presented at the business meeting of the club at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church yesterday, to be voted on in April. Mrs. Edward C. Bebb, chairman of the committee, submitted the list which includes several other officers for re-election, as well as those nominated to serve for the first time.

Others on the slate are: First vice president, Mrs. Frederick Kerby, for re-election; second vice president, Mrs. Edward Helmuth, for re-election; recording secretary, Mrs. Philip P. Gott, for her first term; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Paul H. Butler, second term; treasurer, Mrs. Louis S. Murphy, first term, and assistant treasurer, Mrs. Roy J. Jorolemon, first term.

The club indorsed the resolution to be presented to the triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Kansas City in May, with the exception of that calling for legislation providing economic sanctions against aggressor nations.

Maryland Resolutions Receive Indorsement

The club also indorsed three resolutions to come before the Maryland State Federation at its annual meeting. One supports legislation to establish a board of indeterminate sentence and parole for the State of Maryland, which would provide for the release of State prisoners only when they are ready for freedom and for adequate supervision for released prisoners in the general community.

Another urges the promotion of highway safety and beautification in the State through the elimination of billboards and conservation of native plant material bordering on the highways.

The third indorses a request to broadcasting stations carrying federation programs to use at least five bars of "Maryland, My Maryland" at the opening and closing of the programs.

Mrs. Douglas Griesemer, chairman of applied education for the club, announced applications are now being received for the scholarship it awards annually to a Chevy Chase college student. All applications must be in by May 1, she said. She also asked club members to send her clippings for reference files on various subjects which are being started and will be distributed to the schools of the community.

Dr. Blaisdell Talks On Trade Balances

Dr. Donald C. Blaisdell, adviser to the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, was guest speaker of the afternoon. He outlined the policy of the Department of Agriculture in assisting to maintain the balance of trade between exports and imports and discussed briefly the influence of the Hull reciprocal trade treaties in this regard. He was introduced by Mrs. Maguire, who presided at the business meeting and program.

Music for the meeting included solos by Mrs. Leo Tooley, of Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Tremearne, and the general singing of "The Bells of St. Mary's" under the leadership of Mrs. Holland Huntington at the beginning of the program.

About 300 club members and guests were present for the luncheon which preceded the afternoon session.

Tully Nettleton Talks to Zonta

Personalities in the in the constitutional convention were described yesterday by Tully Nettleton, Washington editorial writer for the Christian Science Monitor, in an address before the Zonta Club. The program, which was held in observance of the Sesquicentennial of the Constitution, followed the club's regular Wednesday luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

Mr. Nettleton was introduced by his aunt, Lillian Cox Athey, a prominent member of Zonta. He presented interesting sidelights on Washington, Franklin, Madison and other men who helped form the Constitution. Anecdotes he told concerning them were among facts he discovered in preparing a series of article on the contitutional convention, carried for four months in the Christian Science Monitor, covering the period during which the convention actually took place. The articles were written, as they might have been, by a correspondent, giving day-by-day coverage of the sessions at that time.

One of the simple stories he told was of Rogers Sherman, a self-made man of few words, whom he likened to Calvin Coolidge. Sherman, as an official of his town in Connecticut, was asked to officiate at the opening of a new bridge. He walked across it and then back and announced, "I don't see but that it stands firm," which comprised his address for the occasion.

Mrs. Nettleton was a guest at yesterday's luncheon as was Mrs. Alfred Edwards, of England, who is in this country with her husband, a Labor member of Parliament. Miss Winifred Burwell, the club's president, presided at the meeting.

Tea Is Given By Woman's Farm Group

Lady Archer Shee, American-born woman now making England her home, was the guest of honor yesterday at a tea given by the Capital division of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association, at the Arts Club. Lady Archer Shee is president of the Women's Institute of Sunninghill, Berkshire, near which her country home is located, and will be one of the hostesses for the American delegation when the Associated Country Women of the World meets in London in 1939. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was among the guests at the tea.

The Women's Institute promotes a program in rural districts similar to that of the Farm and Garden Association here, she said, encouraging country women to develop their handicraft and take an interest in improving their communities. Demonstrations are held on subjects particularly adapted to women in the various sections. Some are experts in quilting, others in smocking or lace making.

The annual meetings are held in Albert Hall, London, and that last year was attended by 8,000 women. Queen Mary is a member of the Sandringham Institute in Norfolk and attends its meetings.

One of the recent demonstrations held at the institute of which Lady Archer Shee is president was on the making of slip covers, and she promptly went home and made one herself, following the directions, she said.

Lady Archer Shee is one of the New York Pells, who trace their ancestry back to Lord Pell, to whom George III gave the grant of land which now is Pelham Manor.

Mrs. Robert Moseley, another American woman, now the wife of an Englishman and a resident of London, also was a guest at the tea. She is chairman of American proxies for the Associated Farm Women of the World and is working with Miss Grace Frysinger on plans for American participation in the conference in 1939.

Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, Va., president of the Capital Division, and Mrs. Murray Boocock, national president, also of Charlottesville, received with the guest of honor.

Mrs. Johns' home is Ashlawn, which was the old home of President James Monroe, and the Arts Club, where the tea was held, also was occupied by him for a short time during his administration. Plans were announced yesterday by Mrs. Johns for sending box hedge from Ashlawn to be planted in the Arts Club garden and dedicated there with special ceremonies.

Mrs. Willoughby Chesley and Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax presided at the tea table, which was decorated with a centerpiece of pink and white snapdragons and lighted with white candles in silver candelabra.

Among the guests was Mrs. William S. Doak, who is much interested in the work of the Farm and Garden Association. Another was Mme. Slavko Grouitch, wife of the former Yugoslav Minister to Washington. She has been a patroness of organizations among the Serbian farm women and was present at a meeting held in England for the Associated Farm Women by the Dowager Duchess of Norfolk last year, at which Mrs. Moseley also was present.

'Orange Ball' Of California Draws Crowds

500 Attend Fete, With 15 Couples Made Up by 'Date Committee.'

It was the "big orange" last night at the annual ball of the California State Society at the Shoreham Hotel. Representative Frank Buck, newly elected president, with Mrs. Buck; Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo and other members of the State Congressional delegation, received the 500 guests. When they left no one could shake hands, for they all had arms full of oranges.

The central theme of the decorations, was a State flag, 8 by 14 feet, of oranges wrapped in colored paper to form the design in the State colors. Mrs. Byron Scott, wife of Representative Scott, was responsible for the idea, and Mrs. John M. Johnston, secretary to Representative Scott and a member of the committee for the dance, worked it out.

He had 3,000 to work with, sent by the growers after being displayed in the annual exhibitions held in Los Angeles and elsewhere in the citrus belt.

Max Hayden, secretary to Representative D. J. Gearhart, one of four Republican Congressmen representing California this term, was chairman of the committee for last night's ball. Among those assisting him, in addition Mr. Johnson, were, Donald McDonal, secretary to Representative Thomas Ford; Miss Alice Touhy, secretary to Representative John Tolan, and Miss Ruth Rogers, secretary to Representative Charles J. Colden, and Hal Thorsen, who was chairman of the flooor committee.

One of the unusual features of the arrangement was the escort committee, which arranged dates for native sons and daughters of California who were still unacquainted in Washington and would not attend the party because they had no partners. About 15 couples were made by the committee whose only difficulty was in finding tall men to escort the tall girls who were the majority of those who registered.

Georgetown U. Students Score Boarding Costs

Hundreds in Mass Meeting Call Food and Rent 'Exorbitant.'

Gathering in the historic quadrangle of Georgetown University at dusk yesterday, several hundred students participated in a mass demonstration against prices in the university cafeteria, and semester room rents, which they declared were exorbitant.

Red torches flared around the fountains and against the dormitories as students listened to their leaders demand a reduction in board rates.

"Georgetown men are hungry men," they sang, as windows opened around the quadrangle and faculty members, and undergraduates not participating in the meeting watched and listened.

Fireworks exploded as the young men hastened from the dining room after dinner, got their torches and assembled.

After cheers and a salute not unlike the Nazi greeting, the students quietly adjourned. The Student Council, branded as "ineffectual" by the group, was to hold a special session behind closed doors later.

The mass meeting followed presentation of a petition to prefect of discipline, Father John J. Kehoe. The petition asserted that a careful study had revealed the board of $500 a year charged Georgetown students was between $125 and $150 higher than that charged in other universities.

Faculty members termed the petition "presumptious" and "an affront to their authority," leaders of the group charged.

Yesterday morning they staged a smaller demonstration. They carried crude placards and one of the students obtained a Japanese flag.

"We're not communistic," said one of the demonstrators last night. "We just want the right to present petitions—and more moderate cost of living."

Traffic Officials Split on Move to Transfer Liens

Districe traffic officials appeared before a Senate sub-committee yesterday to argue for and against a bill to transfer the recording of automobile liens from the recorder of deeds' office to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer supported the proposed move, explaining it would enable his office to guarantee certificates of title issued on automobiles. At present, he told the committee, all liens are not recorded and he could only say that to the "best of his knowledge" liens brought to his attention were the only ones outstanding against a particular vehicle.

The bill was opposed by William J. Tompkins, recorder of deeds. He said the proposed change was not in accord with practices in the various States and that records of chattel mortgages should remain in his office to protect contractual rights of buyers and sellers.

I. C. C. Refuses Va. Bus Merger

By the Associated Press.

The Richmond Greyhound Lines, Inc., failed Tuesday in its 18-month effort to win Interstate Commerce Commission authority to purchase the Peninsula Transit Corporation, motorbus line operating in Tidewater Virginia.

The commission said it had not been shown the purchase would meet statutory requirements arising from the interest held by the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railway Co. in Richmond Greyhound Lines.

The railroad owns 49 per cent of the company's stock and the Greyhound Corporation 15 per cent.

Contract Bridge

A Faulty Analysis.

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

It is, of course, sound practice to prevent declarer from ruffing losing cards with dummy's worthless trumps. Like every other sound theory, however, this can be greatly abused. Many a trick is thrown away by the defenders in an effort to stop a ruff that could not develop. Consider East's fruitless trump lead in the following hand:

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

♡ K 5
◇ K J 8 6 3 2
♣ 10 6 5 4

♡ 9 7 3
◇ 10 9 4
♣ A Q J 3 2

North
West East
South

♠ K J 4 3
♡ A Q J 6 4 2
♣ K 8

♠ A Q 10 9 7 5
◇ A Q 5
♣ 9 7

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the heart nine. Dummy ducked and East won with the jack. Now, in the fear that declarer had started with three hearts and would ruff the third round in dummy, East returned a low trump. Declarer double finessed with the nine-spot and, when it held the trick, cashed the ace. Thus, the defenders had to be satisfied with two spades, two hearts and two clubs. The 500 point penalty gave East-West a very fair match-point score, but it could have been considerably better. East's trump lead had cost a trick, and 300 points.

East should have realized that it was very unlikely that South had started with three losing hearts. There was much more chance that West held three hearts as partial justification for his free club bid. And anyway, East had a vital duty to perform which a spade lead would prevent. He should have seen the value of getting rid of his own singleton diamond, so that declarer could not use a diamond entry in dummy by means of which to lead through East's spades. After collecting two hearts tricks, East should have led the king and low club. West would have won the second round and continued with the ace, upon which East could have discarded his diamond. Declarer then would have been helpless. If, after ruffing the third club, he attempted to reach dummy for a spade finesse, East would ruff and by continuing with heart leads would insure himself of two additional spade tricks in the king and jack. If declarer tried to get out the spades by leading from his own hand, he would soon find himself in a shortened trump condition. That is, East would have four trumps to declarer's five, after the club ruff. Now, if declarer led the ace and another spade, East would win with the jack and return a heart. Declarer would ruff and now would have only two spades to East's two.

The past week's news poses these questions and others equally significant. But the news doesn't give the logical answers . . . the significance. Today's NEWSWEEK does. Read it—and see if anything you've read elsewhere tells you so clearly . . . quickly . . . authoritatively . . . what has happened, why it happened, and (most important!) what is likely to happen as the result in the near and distant future.

To the functions of other news sources, NEWSWEEK adds news projection, news significance. It not only sums up the published facts, but analyzes the causes, motives and issues. And it assembles them all into an enlightened forecast of their probable outcome.

NEWSWEEK brings you news significance every week . . . and in every field of general interest. Geared to the needs of our day, it is read by 300,000 action-minded, forward-looking families . . . 100,000 more than a year ago. Get a copy today, and you'll quickly understand why.

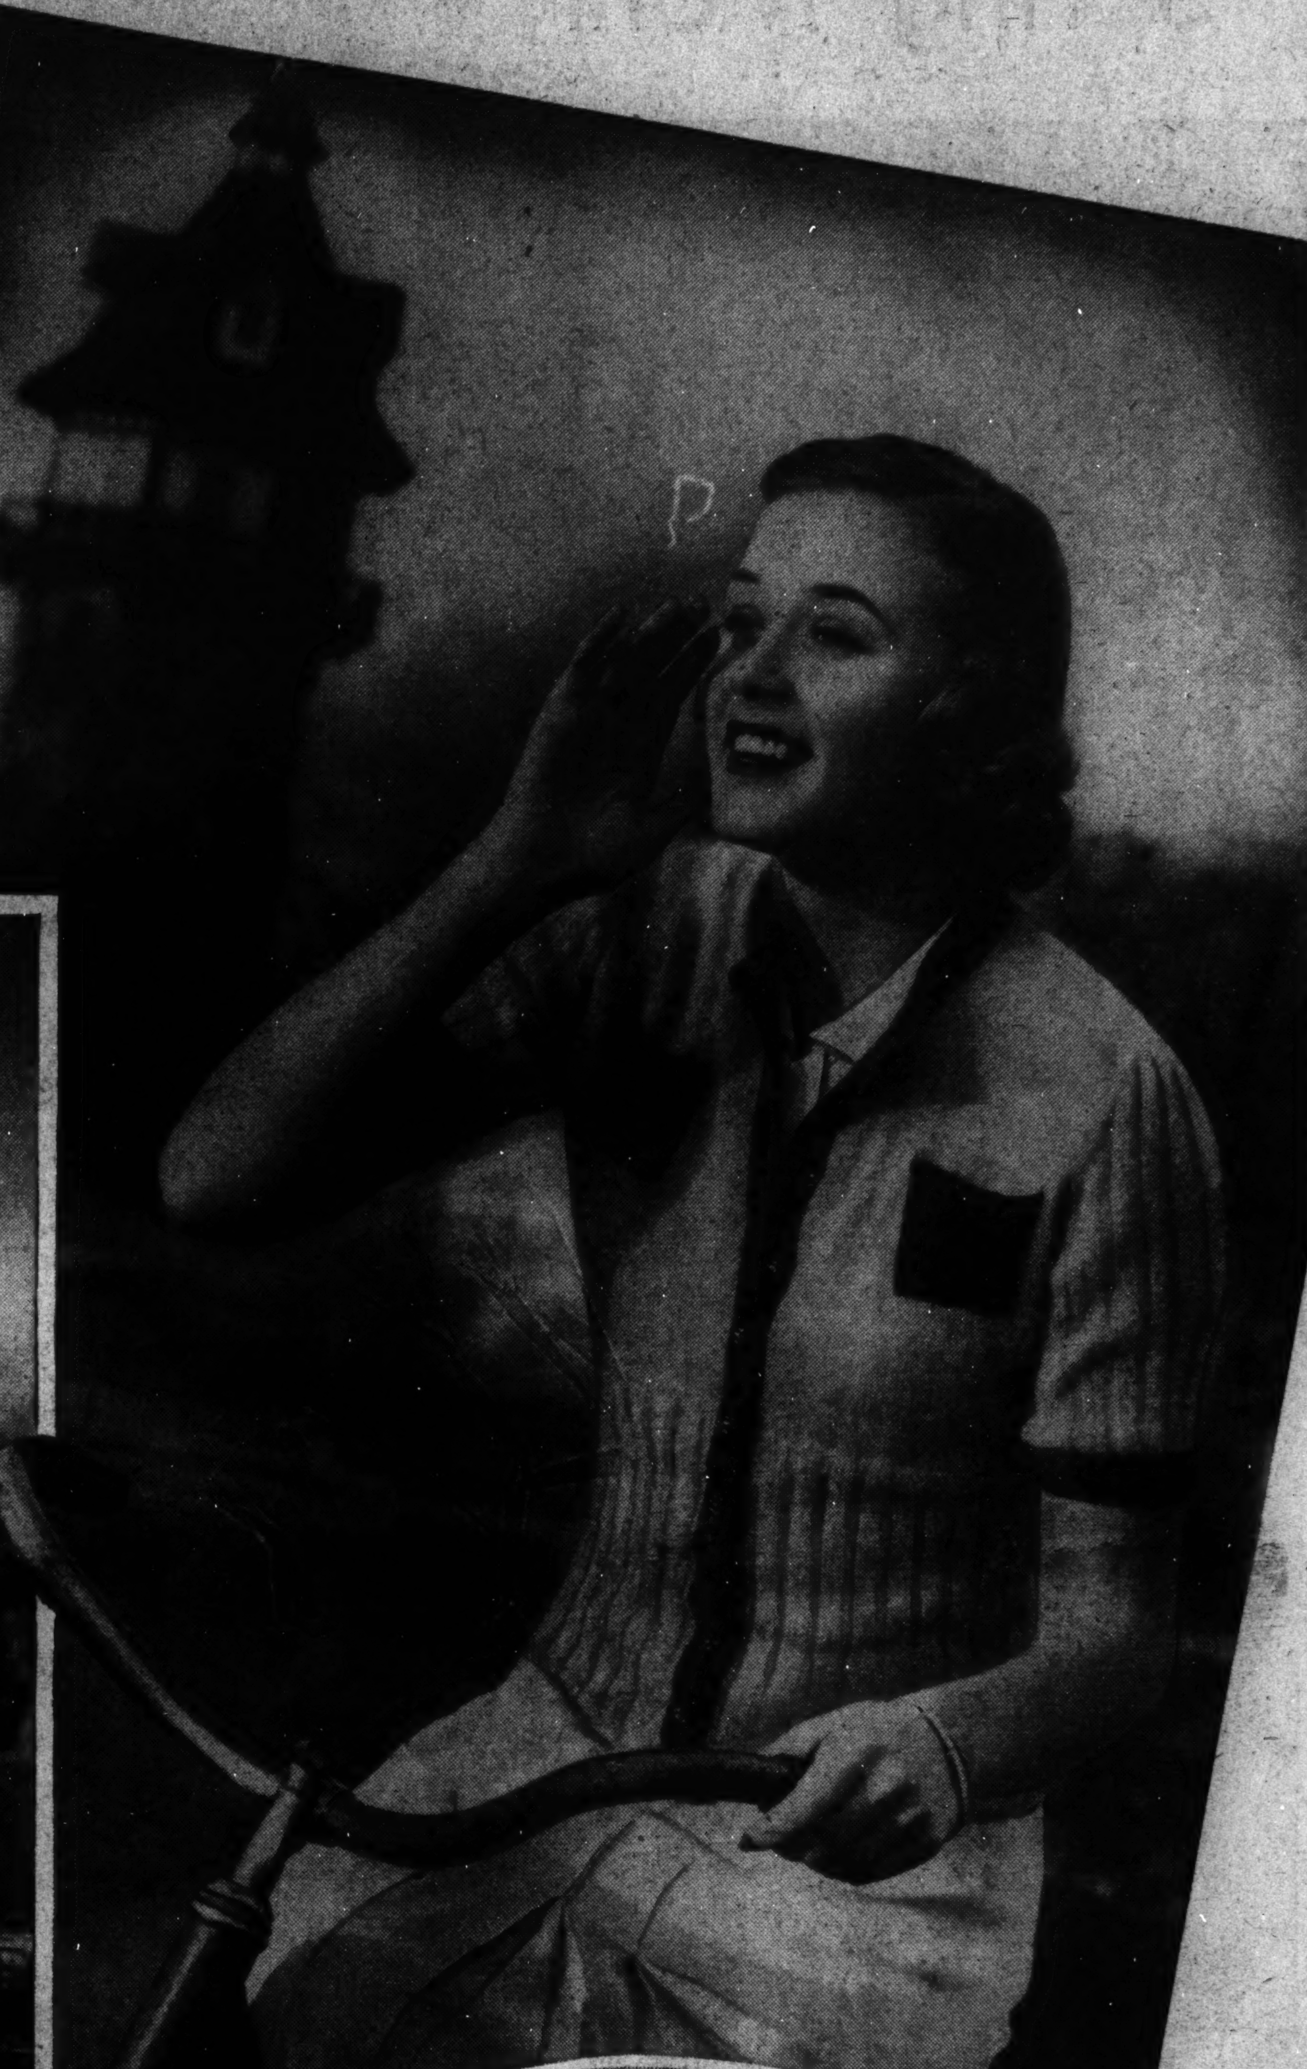
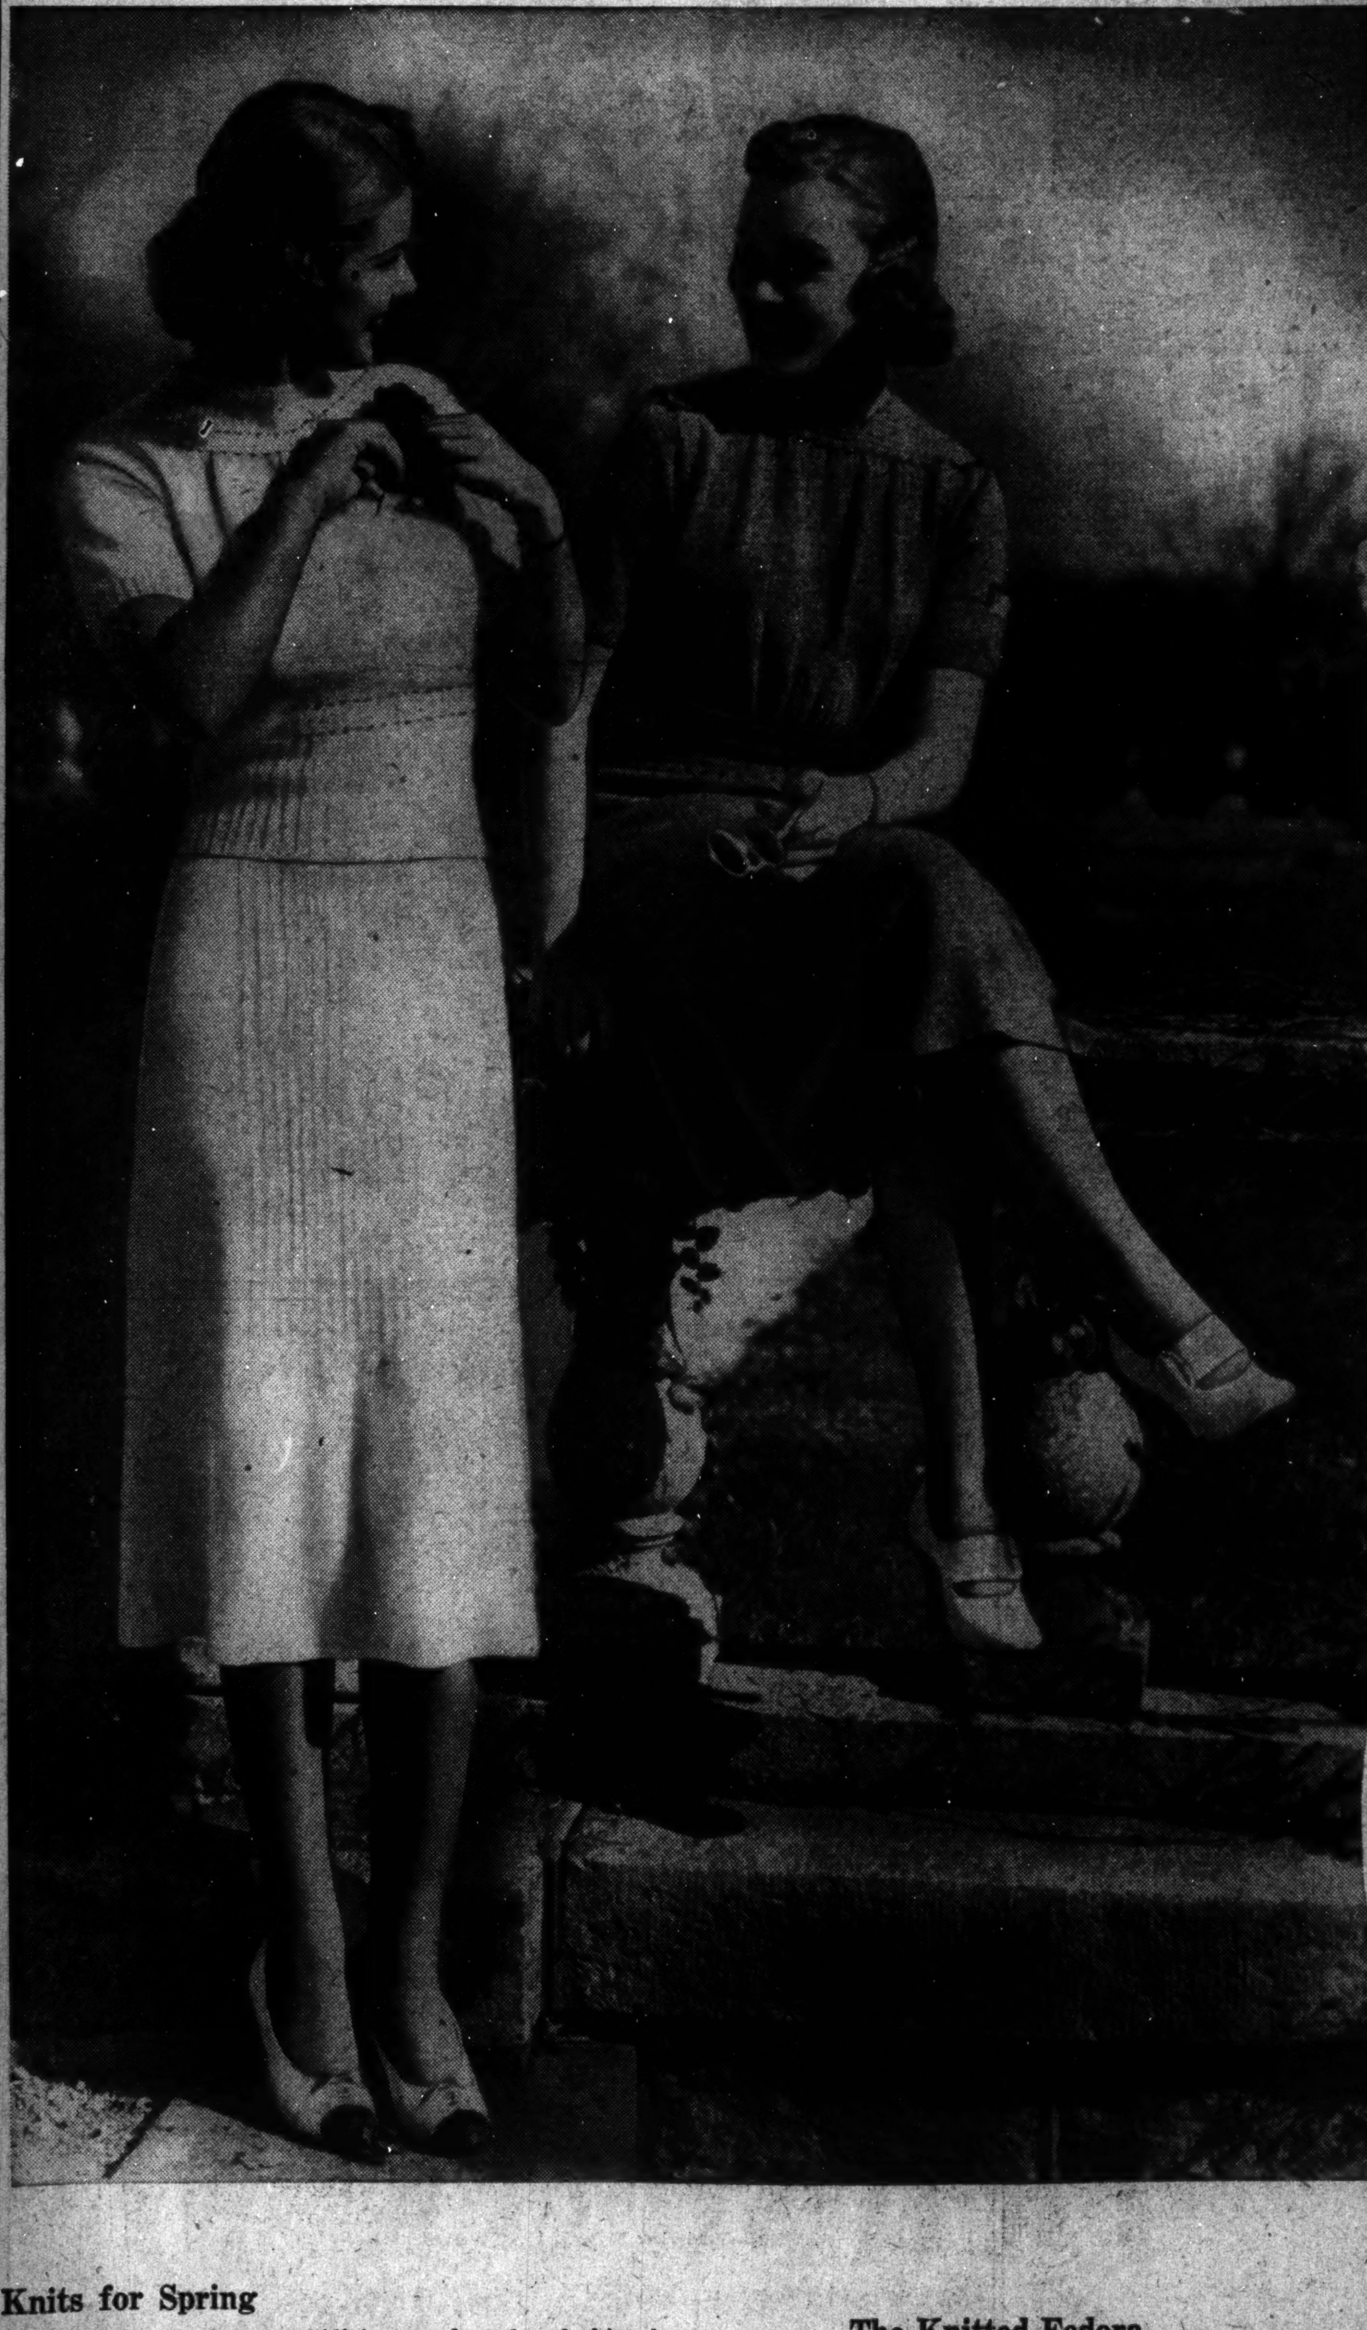
A SUPPLEMENT OF Fashion

From the vast array of spring fashions originated in the style centers of the world, Fashion gives you each week the best interpretations of the current modes and vagaries; to help you plan your spring wardrobe. Numerous suggestions are also given for co-ordinating costumes and accessories; especially interesting this season because of the unprecedented importance of accents. Clothes for all occasions and to suit all types of figures and personalities are pictured and grouped in Fashion each Thursday. Those who desire specific information regarding any of the items included in today's Fashion may secure it by writing Ethel Ehlen, editor of Fashion, The Washington Post.



New Molded Cardigan

A tri-color cardigan of sports angora, strikingly different in the amusing juggling of colors; ribbed neckband and cuffs are knitted half one color and half another. Tricky knitting methods give distinction to sleeves and waistband. No. 1343.



Knits for Spring

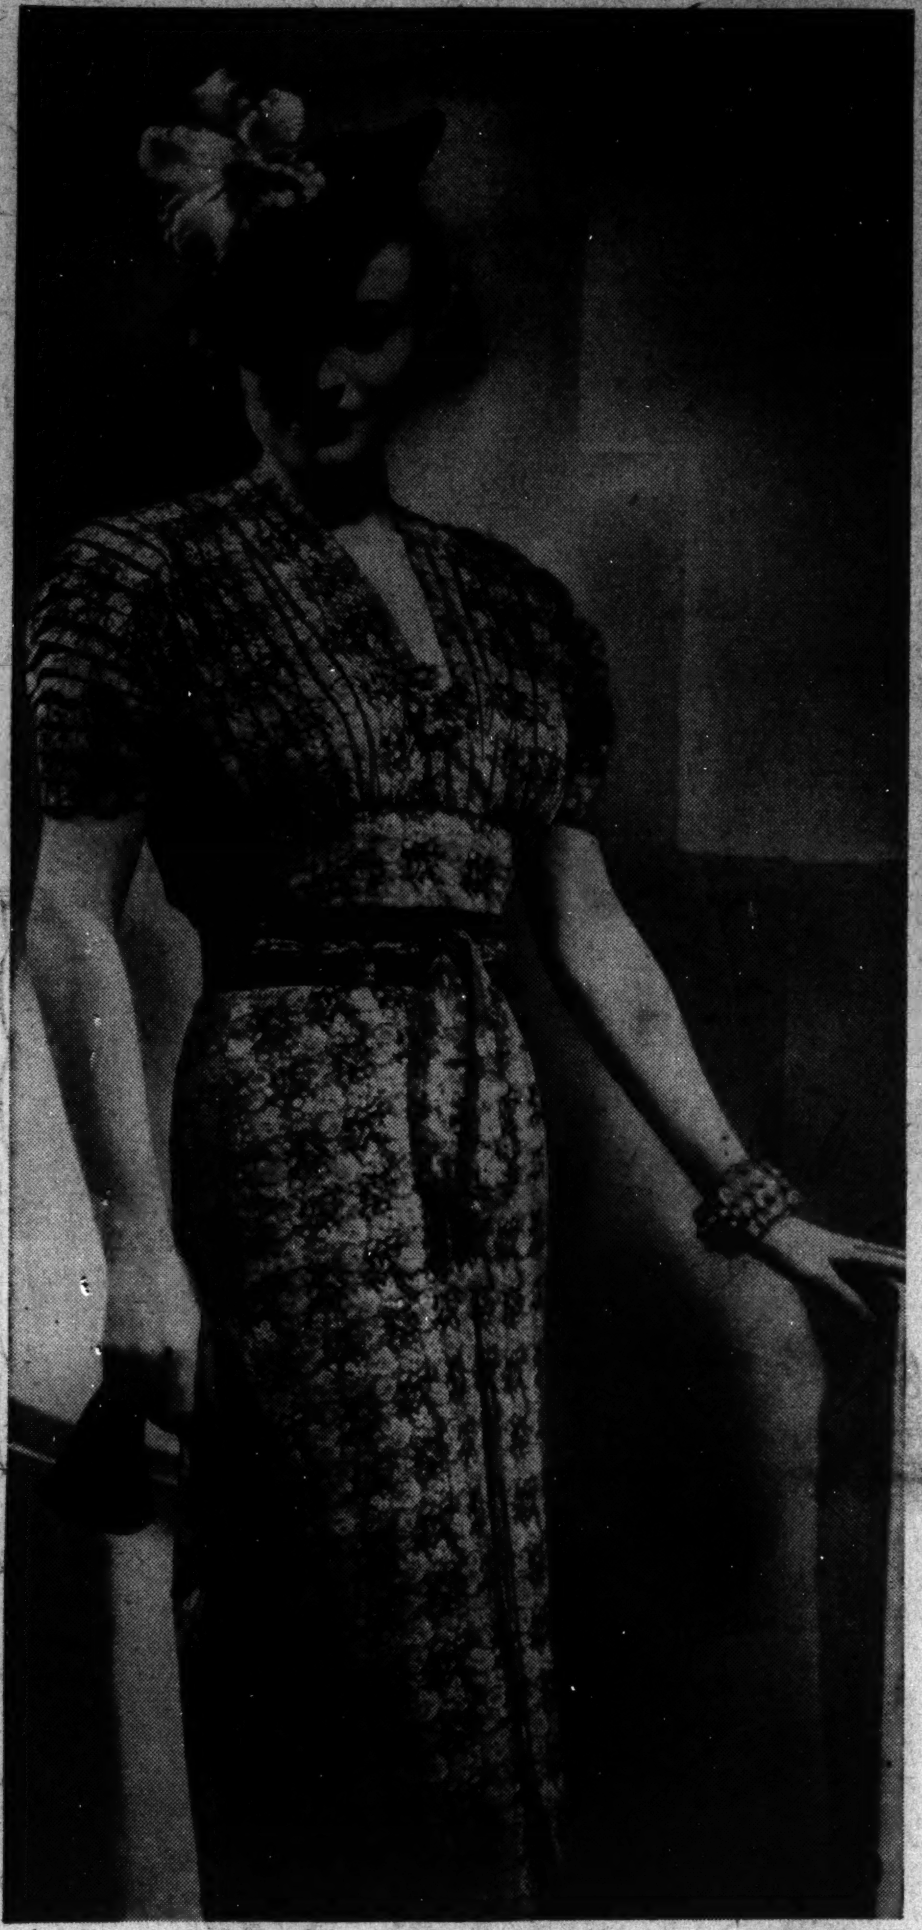
The Knitted Fedora

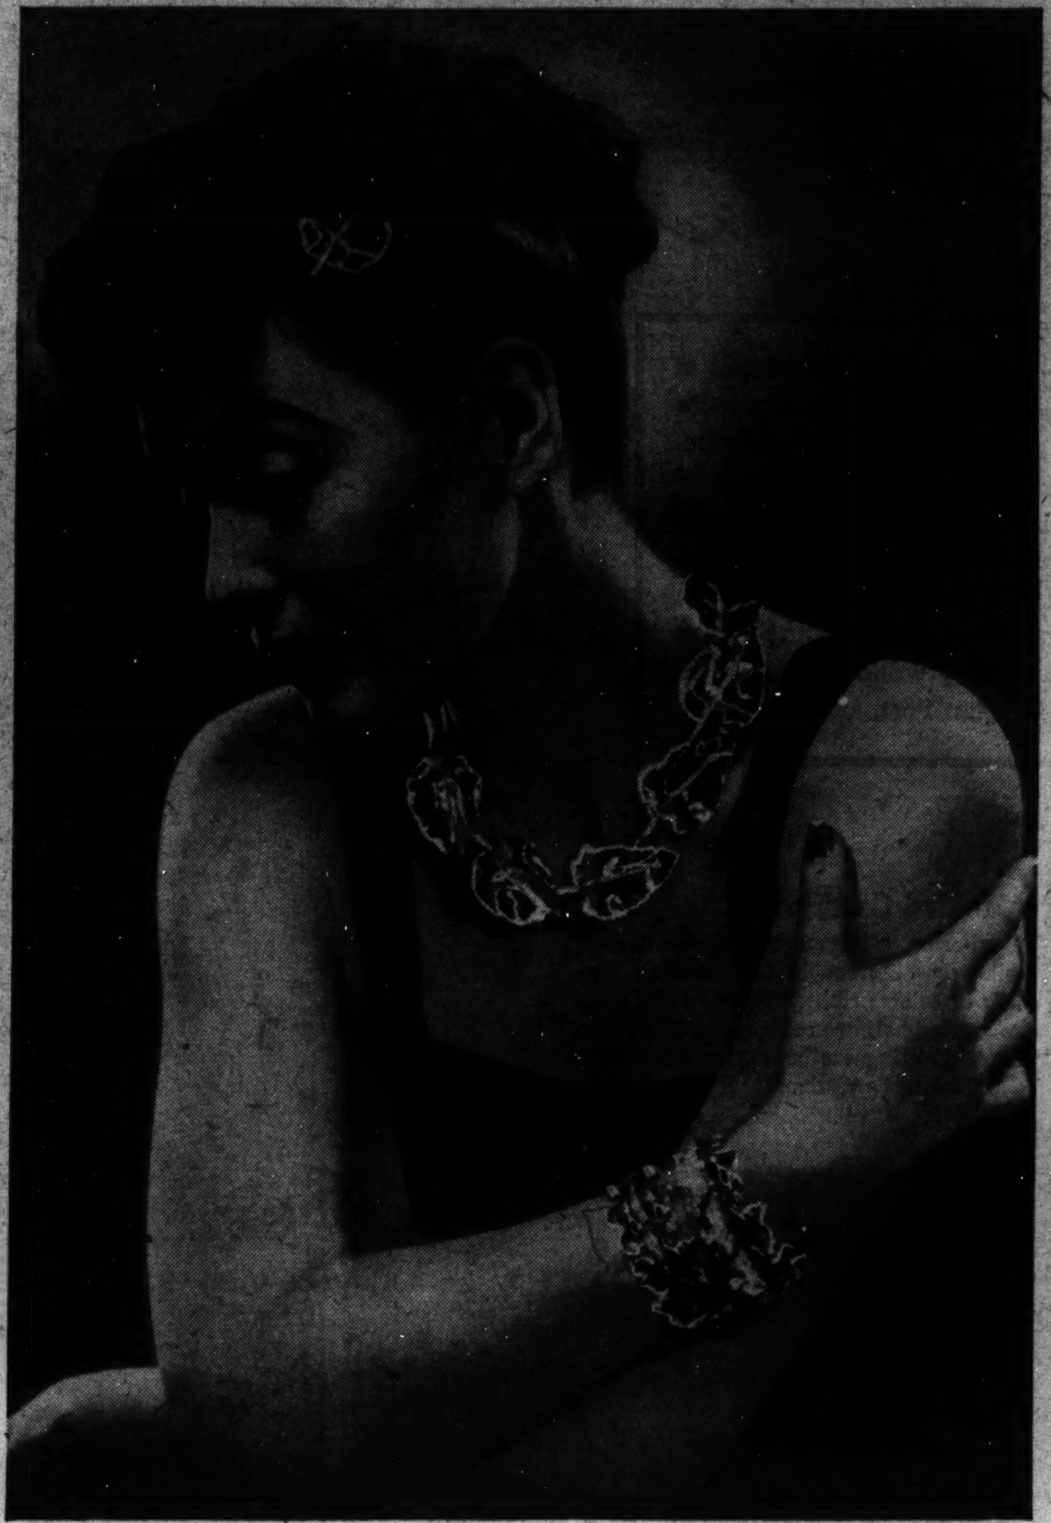
To accompany tailored suits, spectator sports costumes or knitted ensembles, this swagger hat is smart, practical and in keeping with the feminine trend in current fashions. No. 2205. Note chic crown treatment, rolled brim and effective trimming; made of cassimere yarn.

Flowers Popular Spring Motif



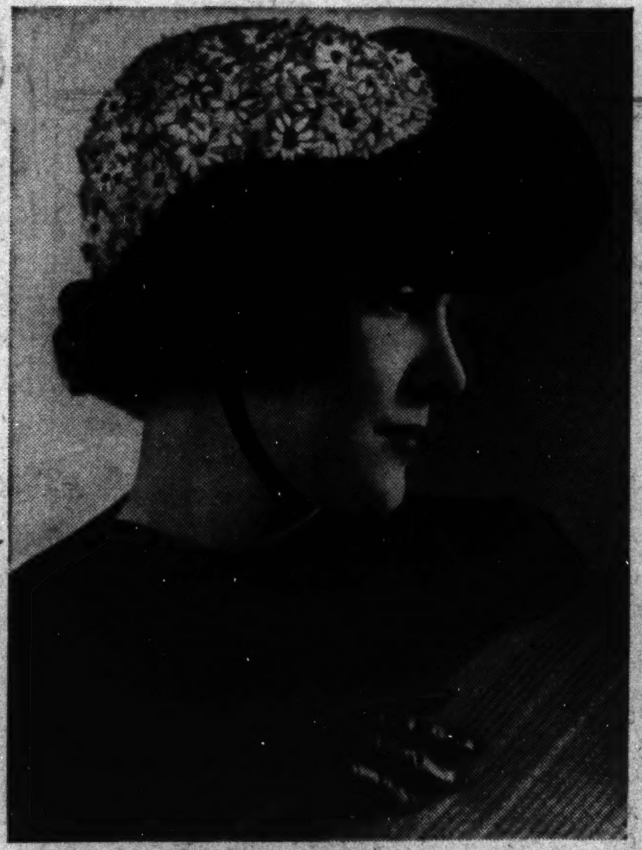
Smartly Styled Print

A silk print in unusual flower crossbar pattern for afternoon and informal evening occasions. The vogue for pleats is interpreted in a distinctive manner—pleated sleeves and bodice. Black patent leather belt interlaced with print; pink feather flower on black beret matches color tones of frock.



Leaves of Metal

For your throat, wrists and coiffure, designed by Leo Glass. With gowns going simple and unadorned, costume jewelry is having a dramatic revival. Distinctive pieces complement both formal and informal clothes.



Daisy-Crowned Bonnet

Jonquils and Mimosa

Like a Print

This two-toned lace dinner gown has much the appearance of a sheer print; a cleverly spaced motif on a black ground. The simplicity of the lines stress the delicacy and beauty of the lace.

Italian Tan

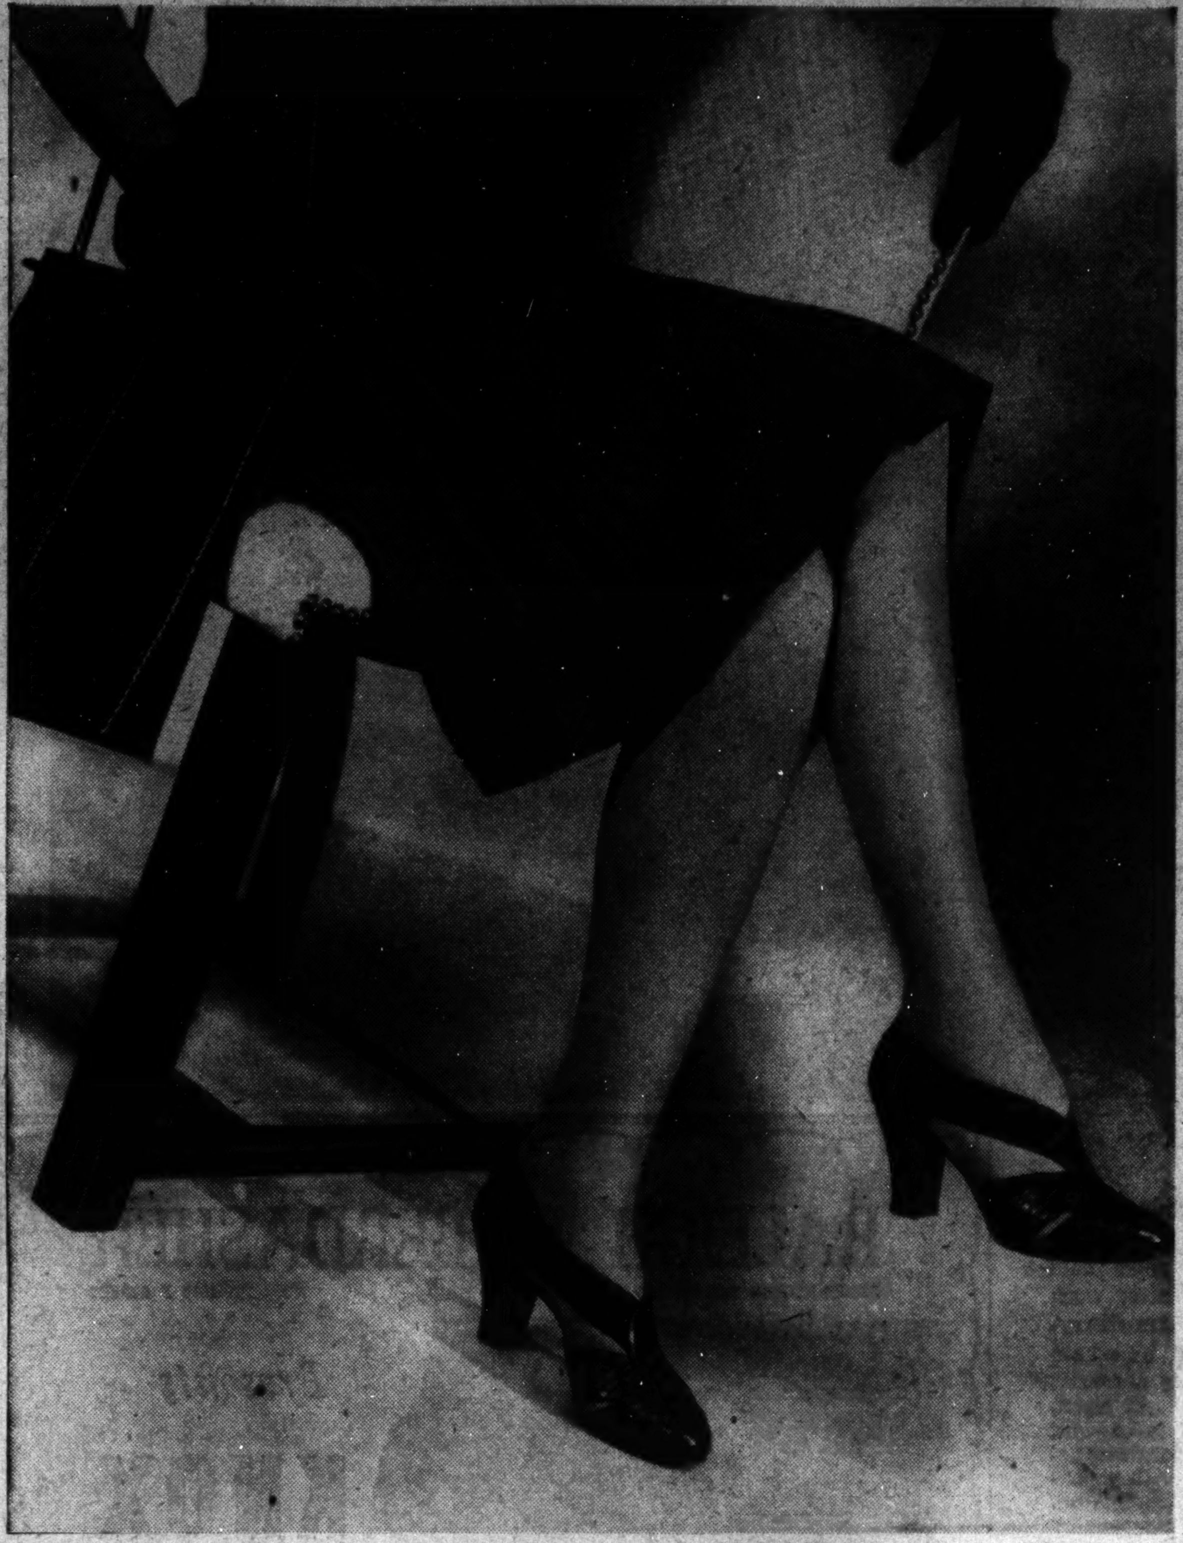
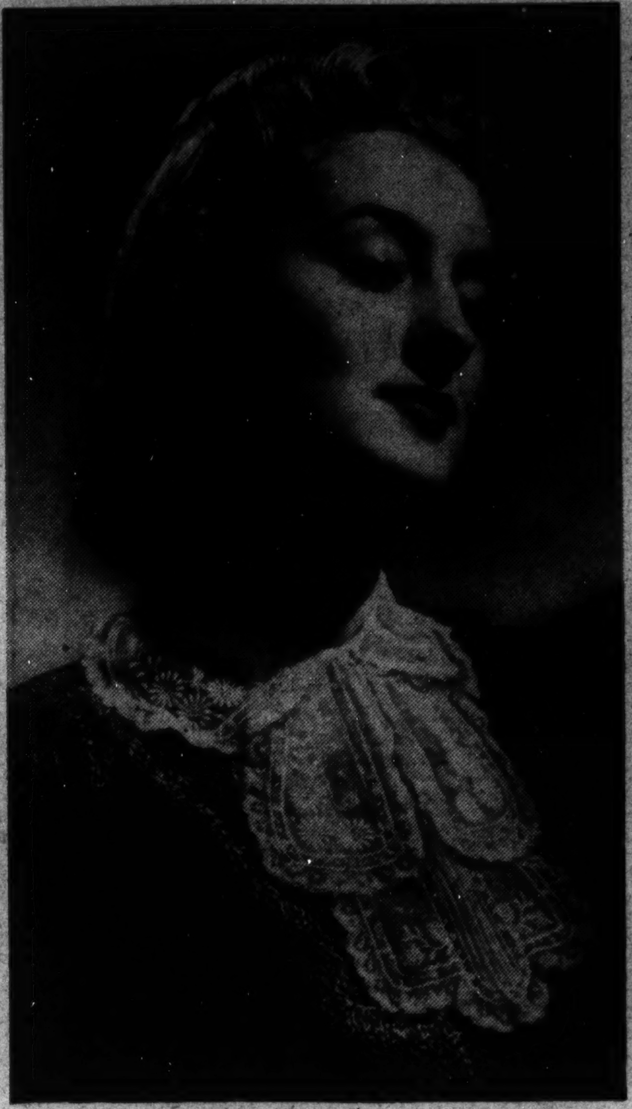
Tremendous Trifles



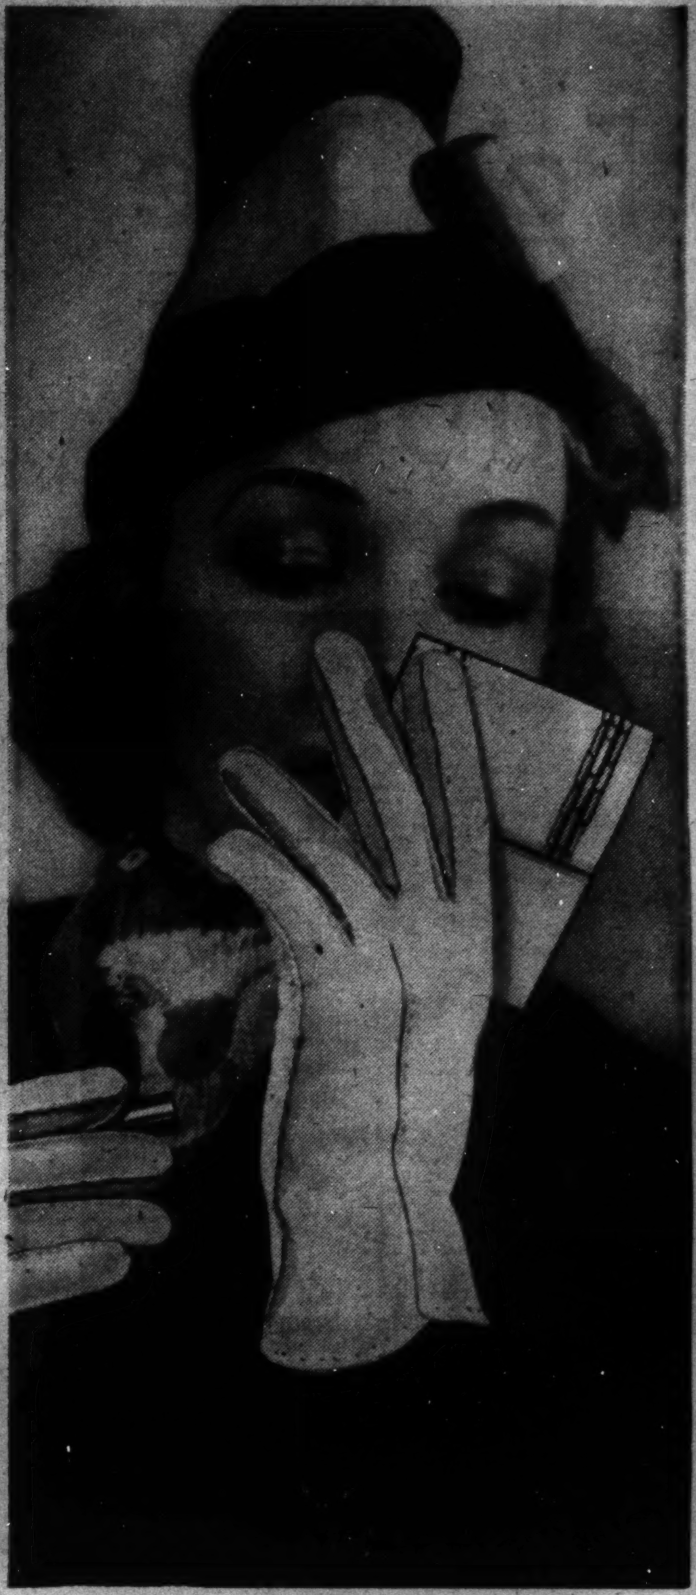
Alligator Accents

Reptile accessories to highlight dark and neutral-toned costumes as shown here in the alligator bag, shoes and belt of rich red are among the season's smart presentation. Note shoe detail and voluminous size of handbag.



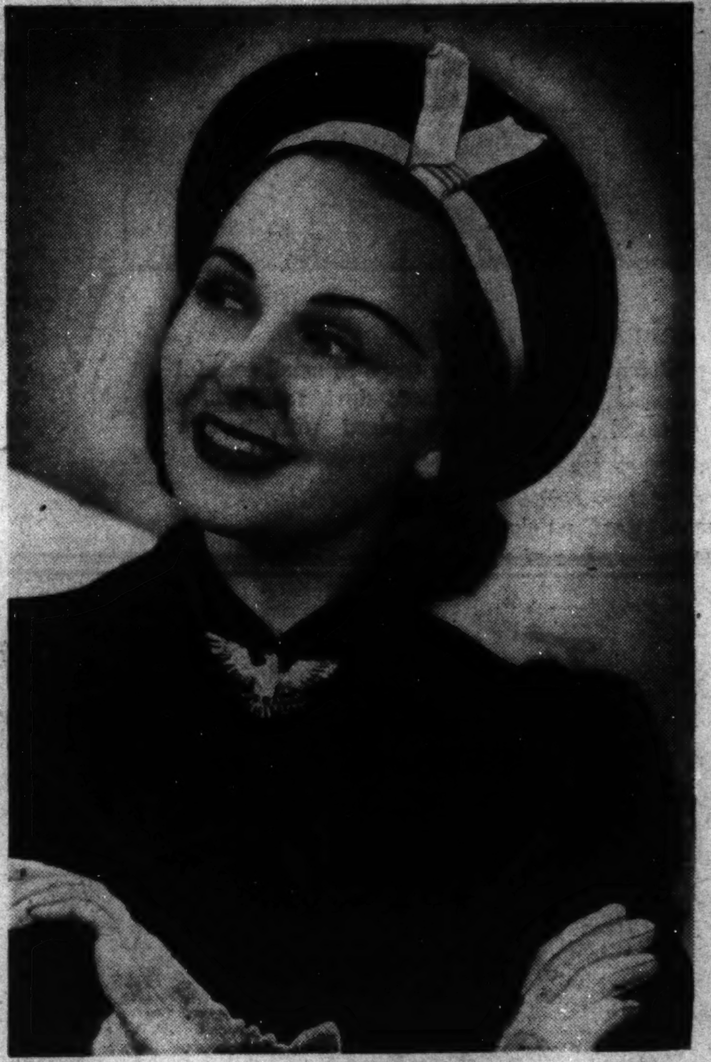
The Lingerie Touch

To feminize your sheer wool or silk crepe frock of simple lines, this lovely jabot made of embroidered batiste and val lace is an excellent choice. This is just one of many smart variations offered for spring.



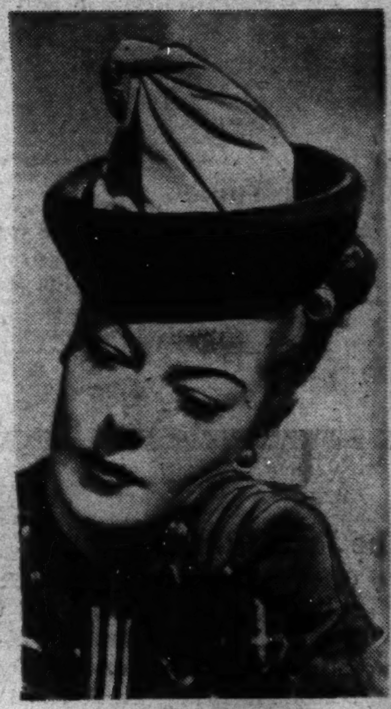
Washable Doeskin

Center hand stitching lends character to these smart slip-on gloves of washable doeskin by Kislav, of Paris. They accompany suits and frocks with equal fashion assurance—in creme, white, clair beige and bisque.



Yankee Doodle Jewelry

A spreading eagle of metal and rhinestones for your lapel or under your chin is a new fashion whim in the realm of costume jewelry. Other patriotic motifs are included in this collection designed by Lester Gaba.



Dwarf's Cap Sailor

Draped Handbag

To complement the popular turban, handbags are going feminine with such details as intricate draping, soft materials and "millinery" silhouettes. The model above is an outstanding example of this trend.

Reversing the usual order, accessories take the fashion spotlight this spring, and are considered of more importance than the costumes. This is due to two causes: first, the mad vogue for femininity and romance in clothes; second, because dresses and suits are so simple in styling, they need accents to give them a chic air. Flowers on hats and in the coiffure; jeweled clips on suit and coat lapels; veils on all hats; necklaces of gold or silver-colored metal; numerous bracelets; tinted gloves; exotic handbags are some of the "tremendous trifles" which give smartness this season.

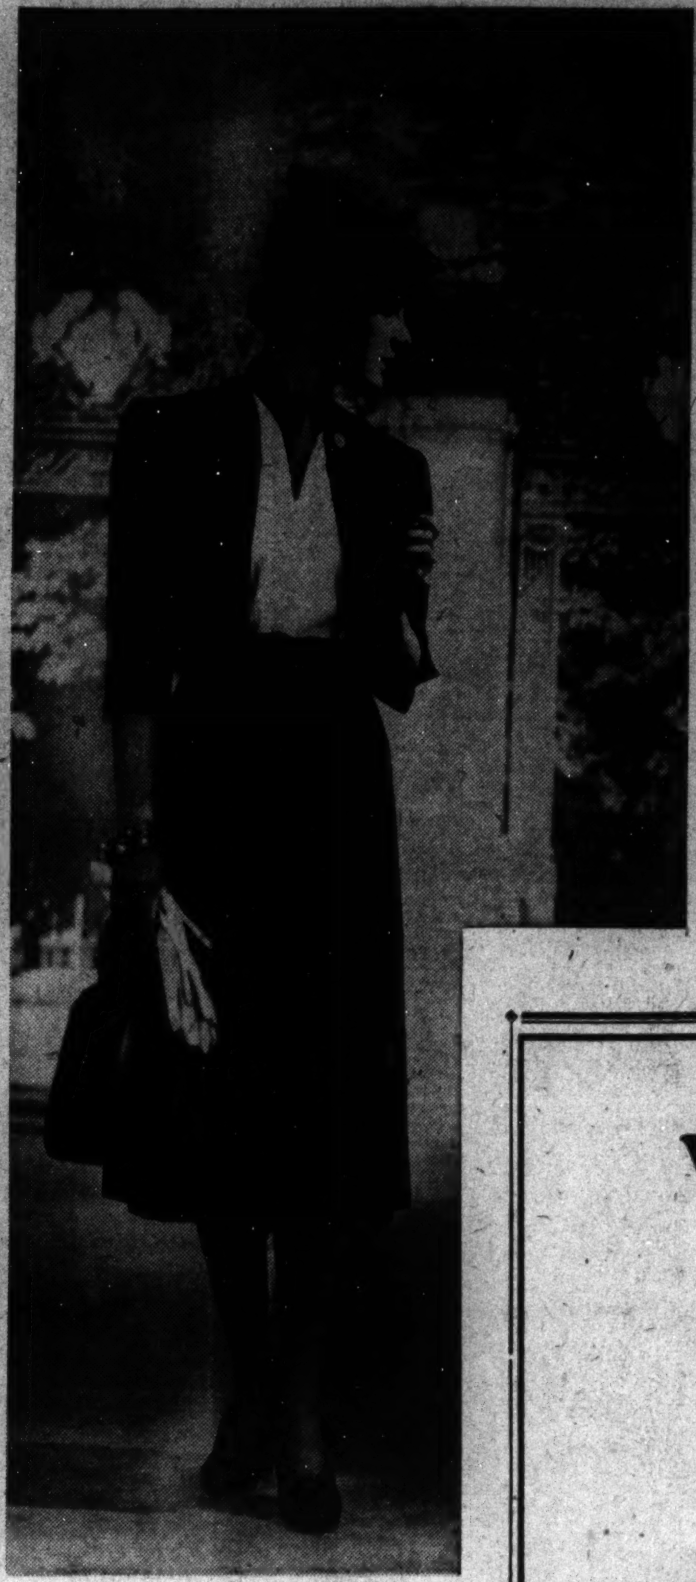
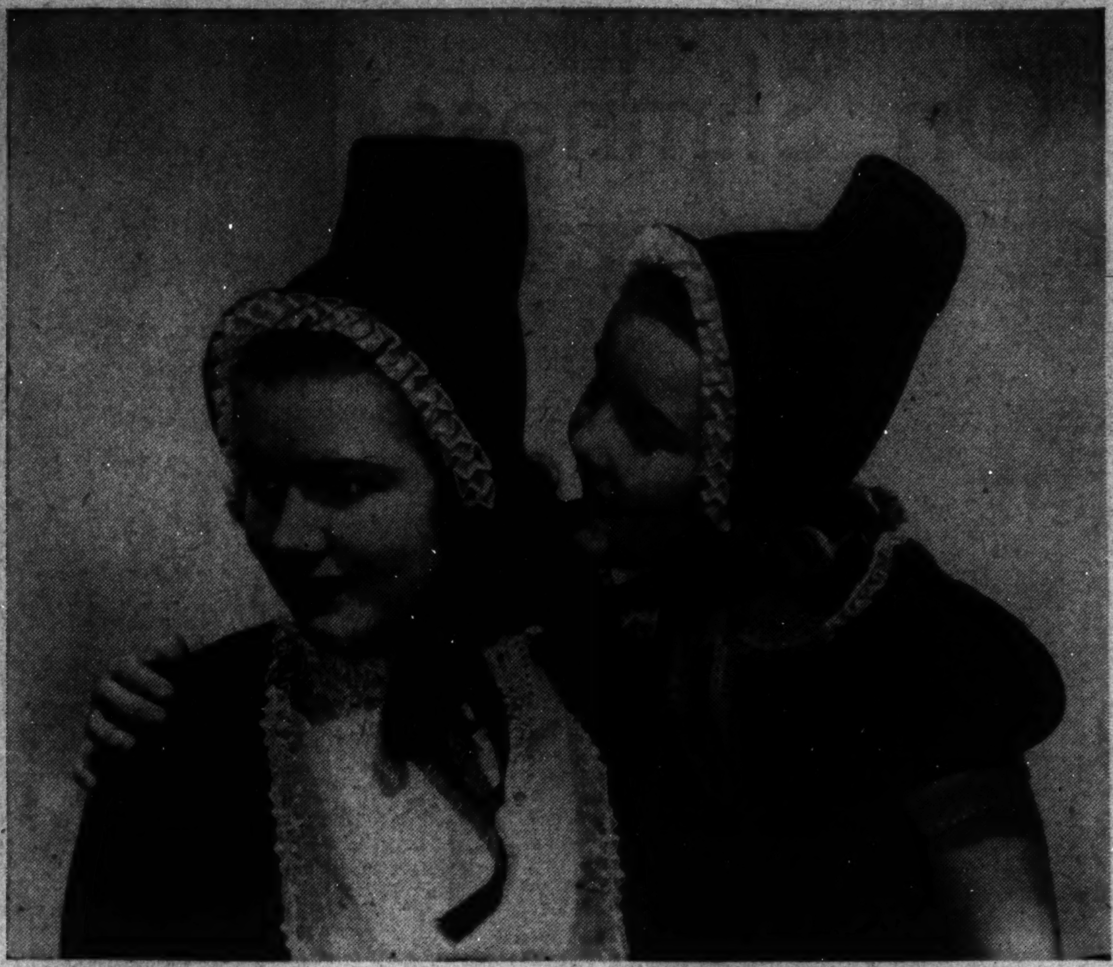
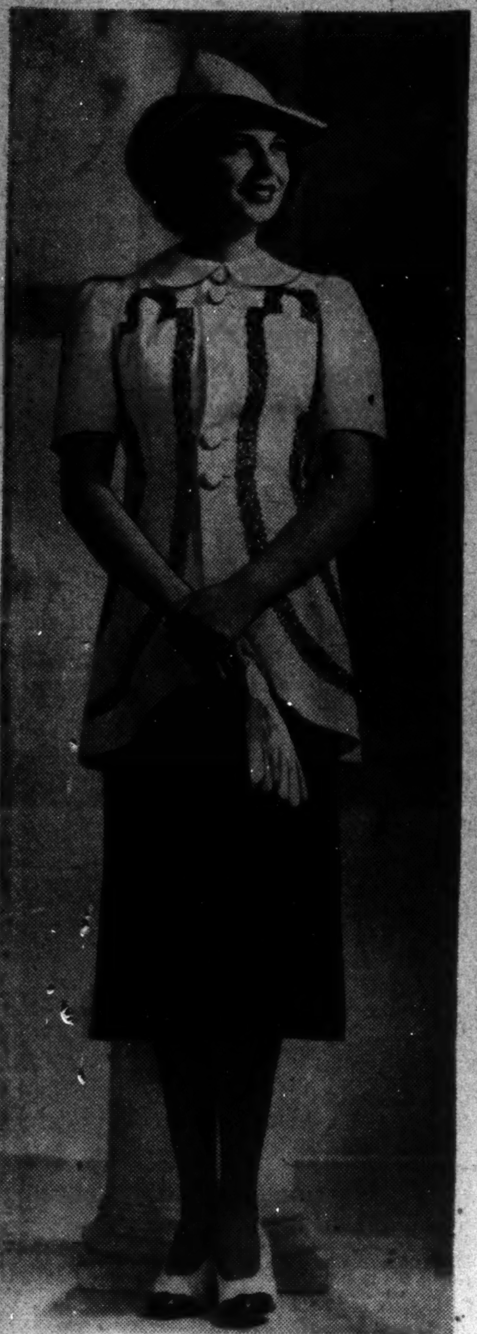
Black And White





Baby Bonnets

Mother and daughter styles are smart fashion news this spring, particularly in millinery. These quaintly smart "baby bonnets" designed by Sally Victor are made of black felt outlined with white ruching, equally charming for either and doubly effective when worn simultaneously.



Flared Tunic

The Bolero Suit

Lace and Georgette

An afternoon ensemble by Rosevienne, cleverly combining georgette and silk lace. Corsage and belt with a touch of white give interesting accent. The puffed bracelet-sleeves of coat are distinguishing features. Chic, wide-brimmed chapeau by Violette Marsau.

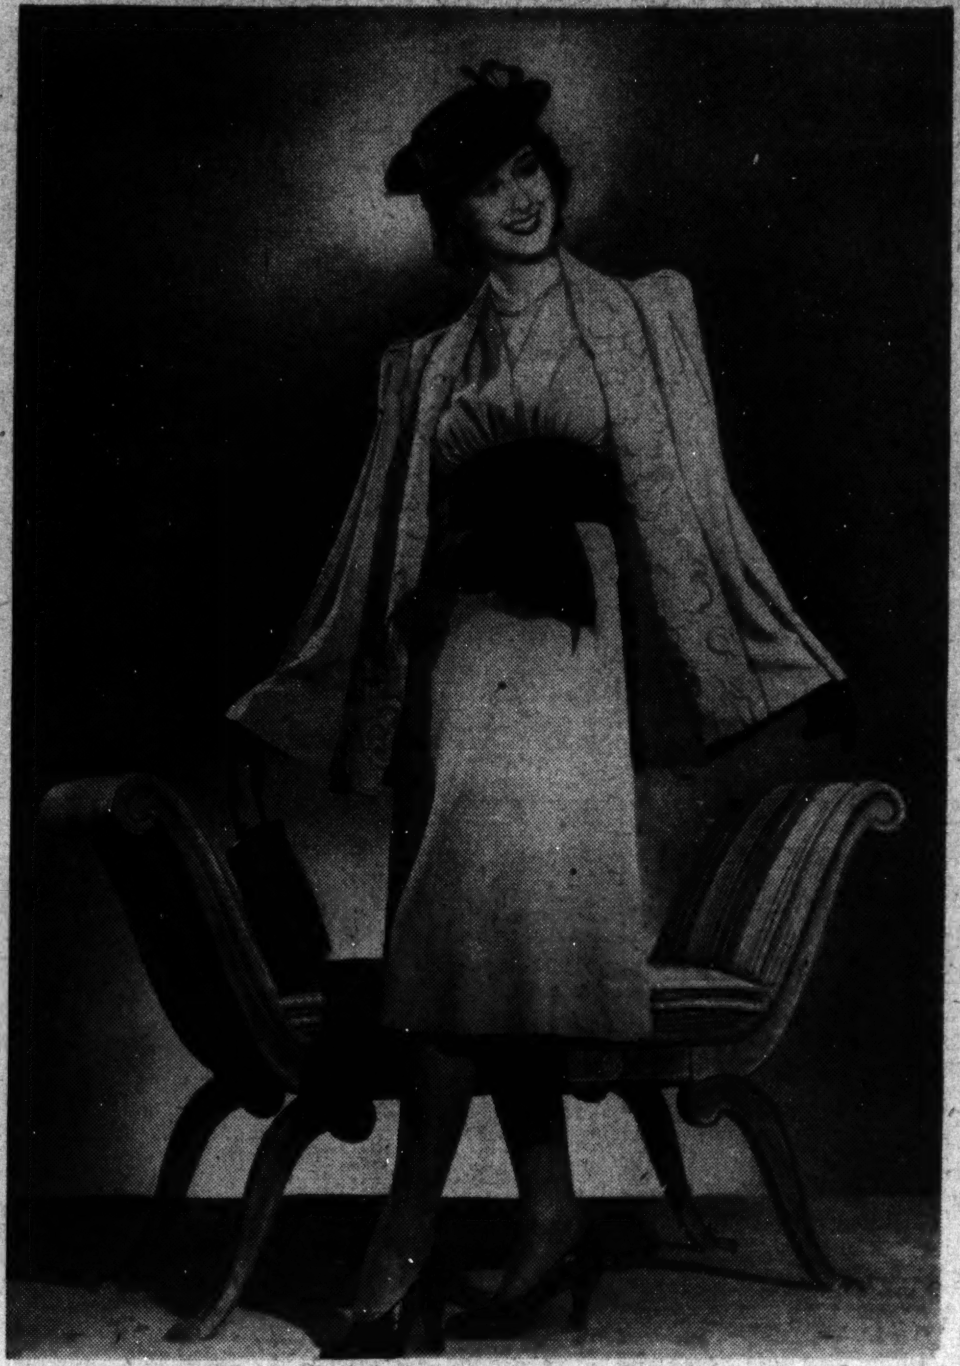
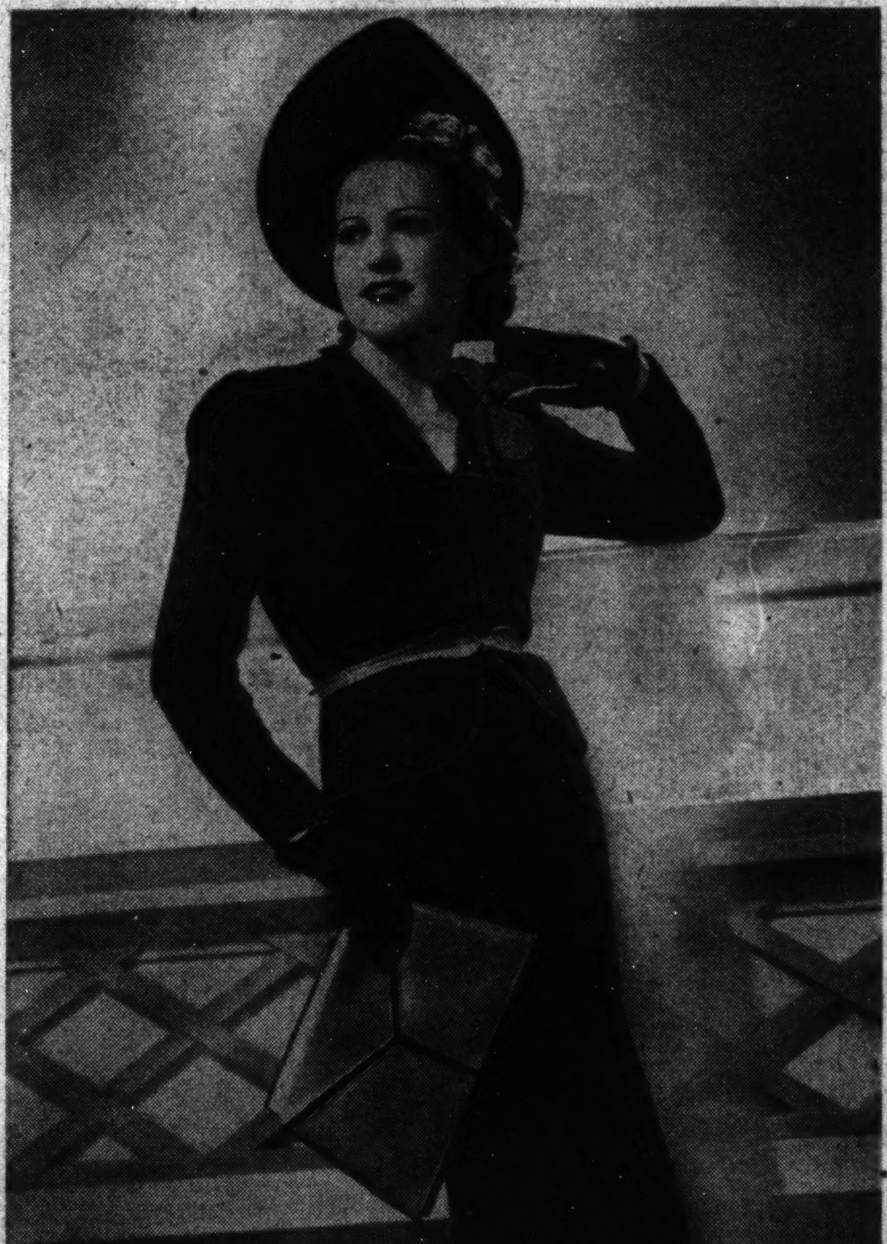
Accent On Slimness



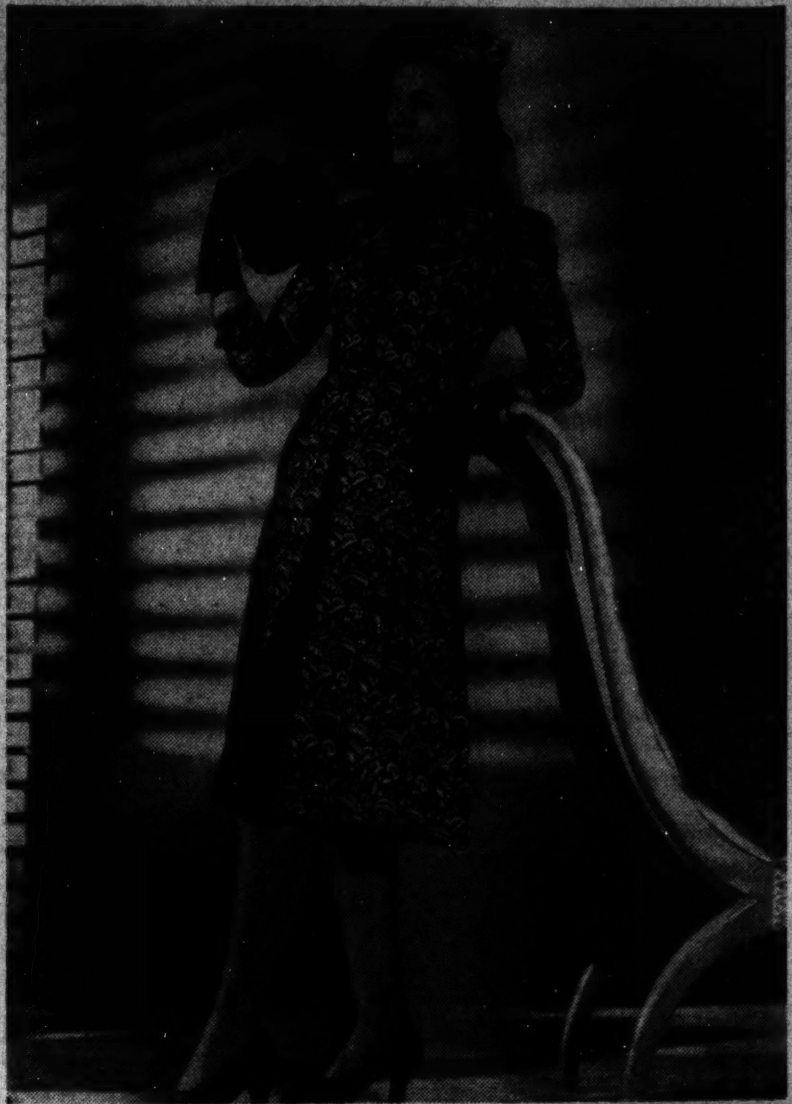
String Beige Sheer

A wrap-around sash of black taffeta gives a slimming effect to this cape-dress of beige sheer. Both tuxedo collar of hip-length cape and short sleeves of dress are quilted. The draped bodice with low V-neckline is in keeping with current feminine trends.



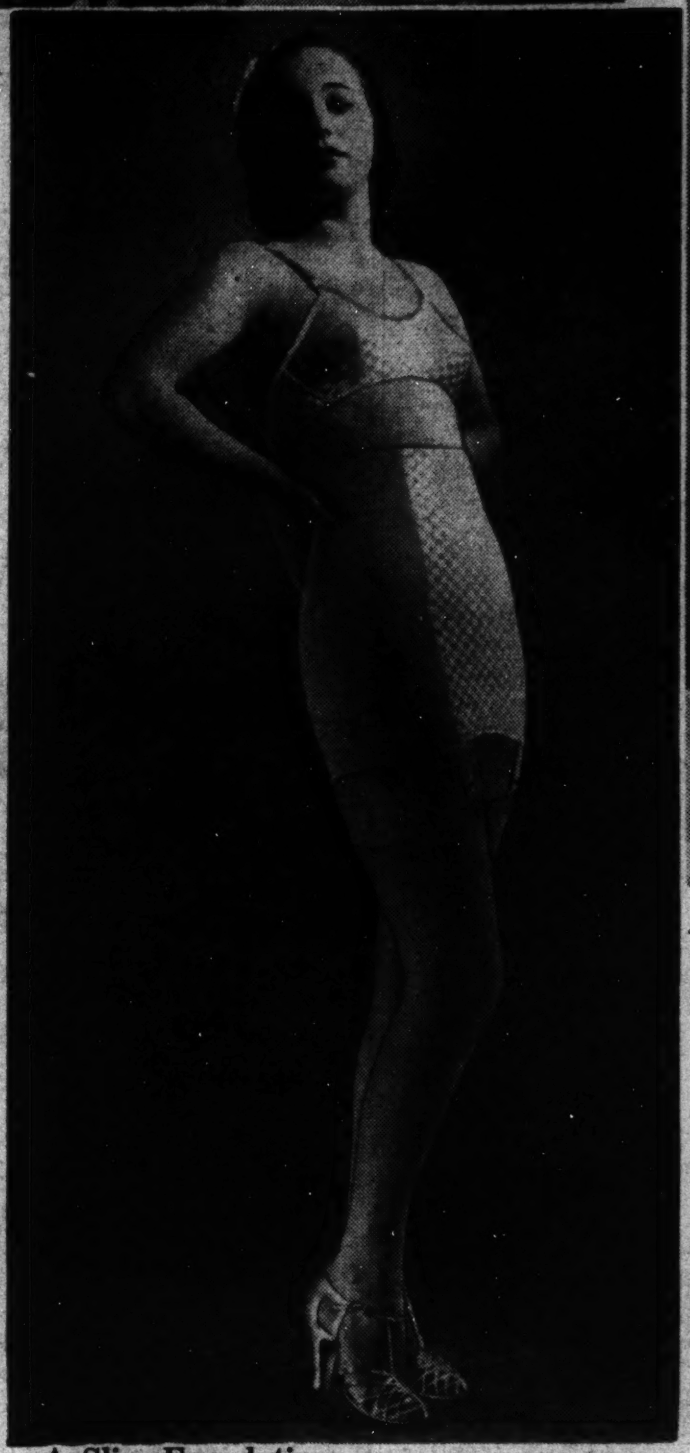
Black Wool Lace

A jacket-dress of French inspiration, with black wool lace as the medium for the slim-lined designing. The peplum, miniature revers outlining neckline and odd-shaped pockets are outstanding characteristics. Bag and belt are Italian tan calfskin — a smart accent for black.



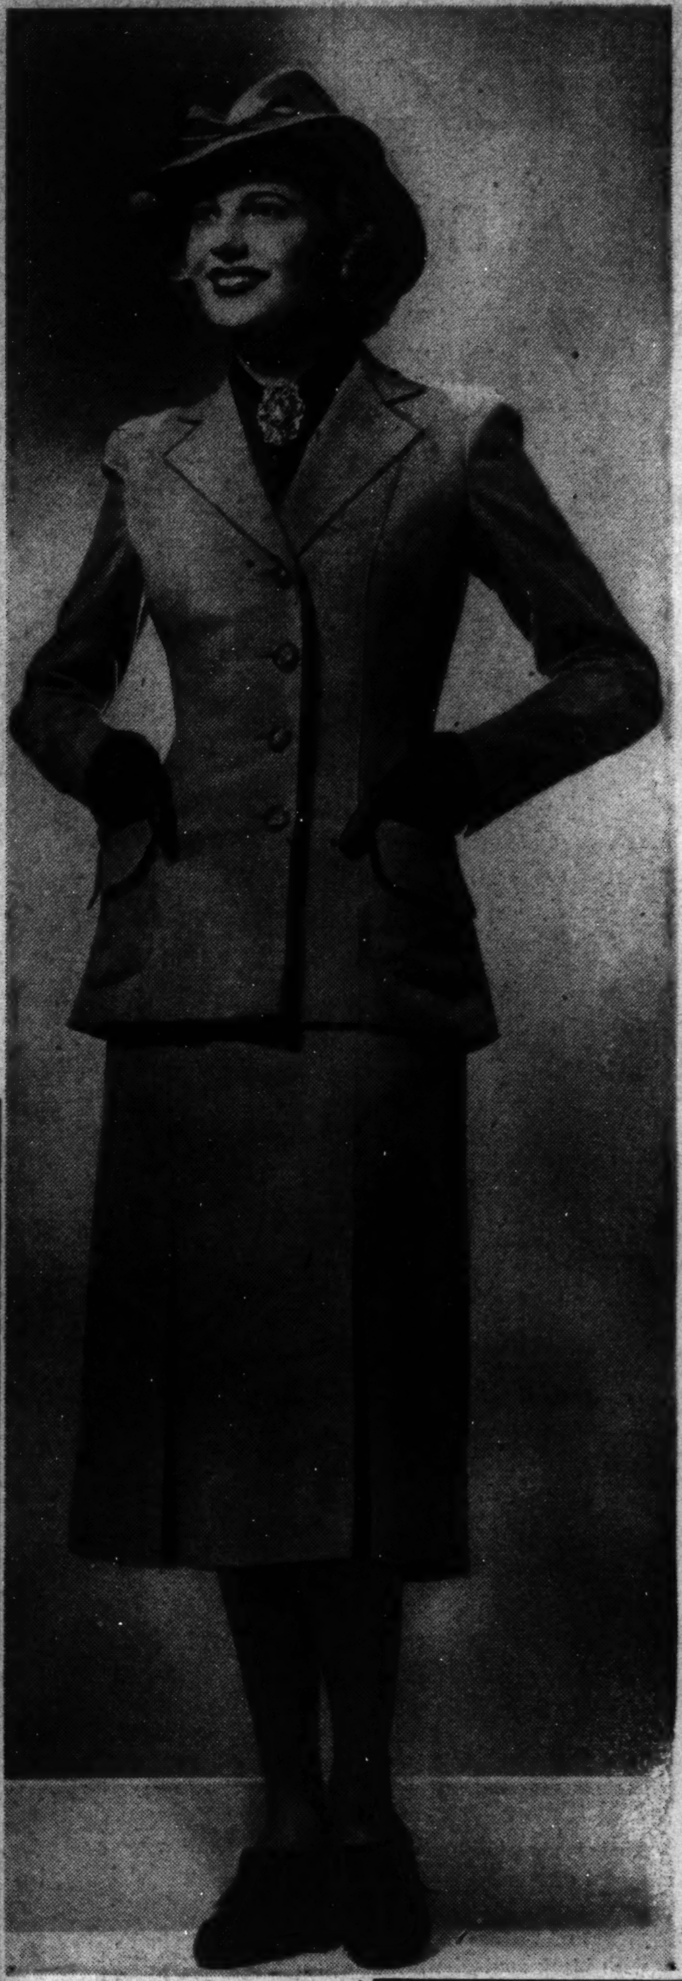
Fitted Print Coat

A smart variation of the coat and dress ensemble for daytime. Persian print coat over solid color dress. Deviating from the usual procedure, coat has three-quarter length sleeves.



A Slim Foundation

You can't expect your new spring costumes to have the wanted chic and fitted lines if you don't wear the proper foundation garments. Both the one-piece affairs and girdle and bra combinations have appeared in the spring style picture, the choice depending upon your individual figure. The girdle above is made on the new high lines to promote a slim midriff, with back and front panels to give a flat effect.



New Longer Jacket

Many of the new tailleurs flaunt longer jackets this season in keeping with soft tailoring and femininity in the styling design trends. This suit, adaptable to almost any figure, is made of celanese rayon and wool suiting. Would be smart in black, navy, gray or brown.

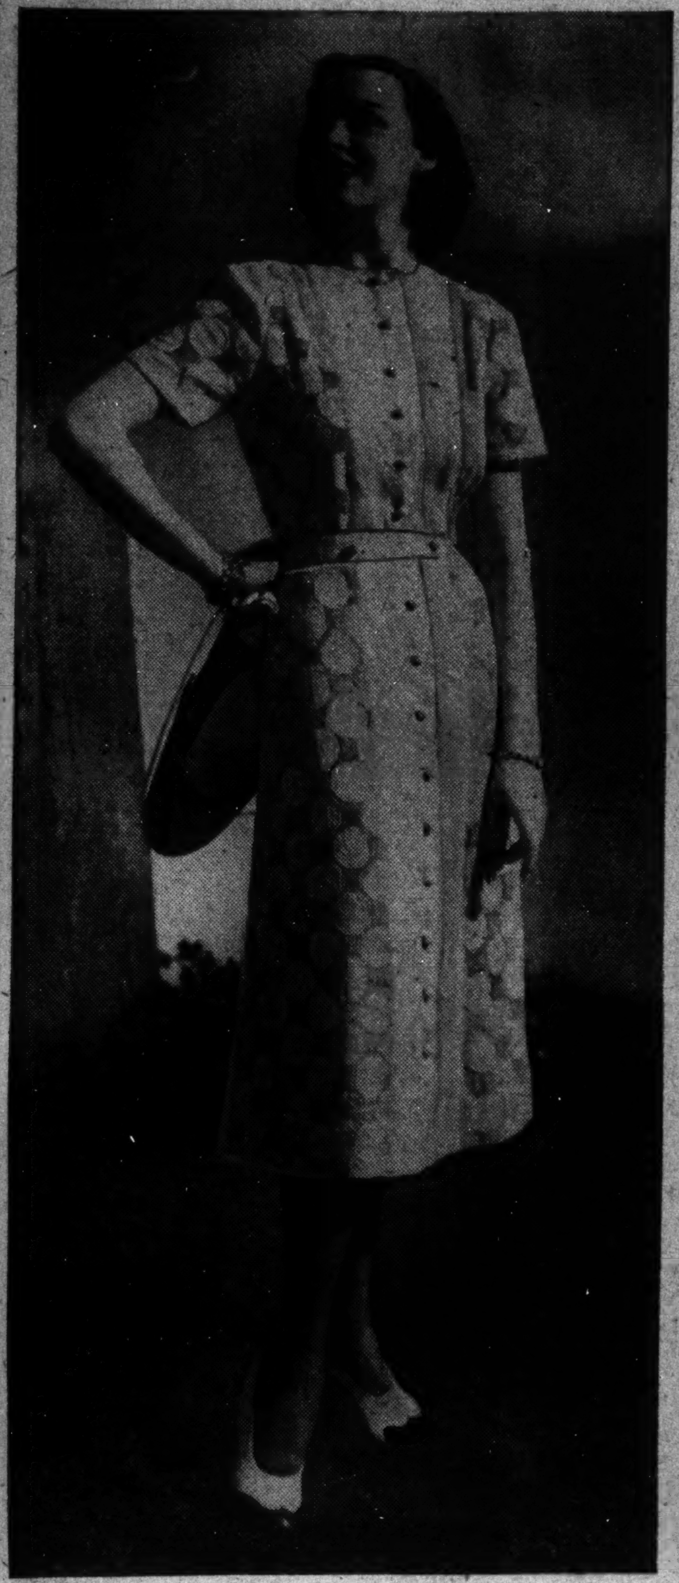
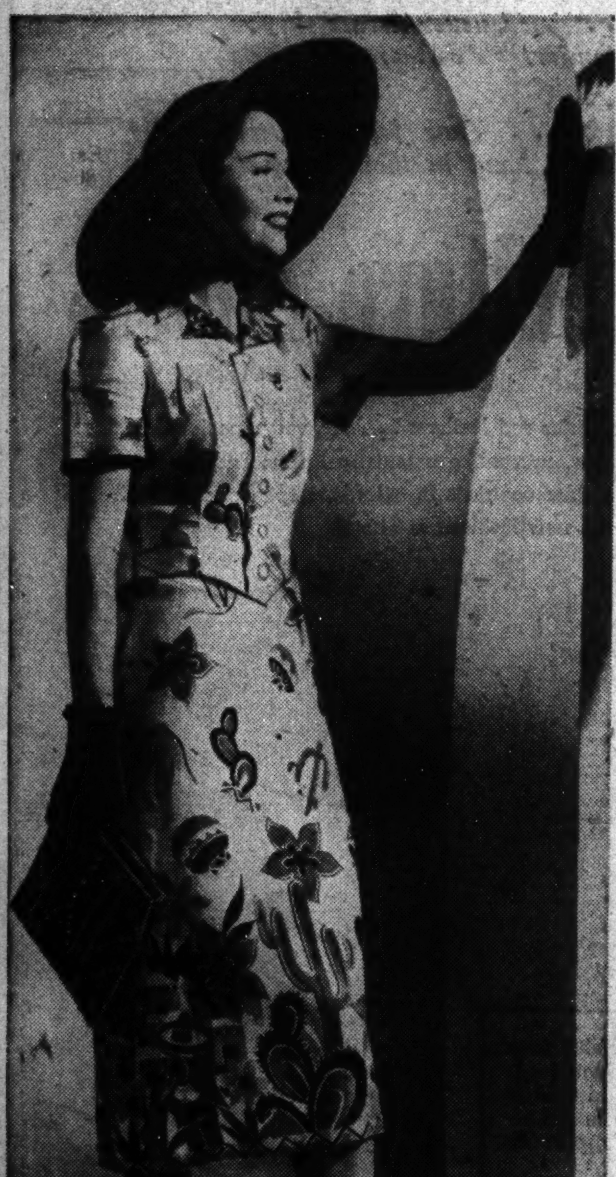
Looking Toward Summer

FASHION, the newest and smartest of the style magazines, will appear as a regular supplement to the Thursday Washington Post until Easter. While spring merchandise is now available in the local stores, it is being constantly replenished by the new arrivals from the markets. Each Thursday you will find in FASHION a comprehensive picture of all that is smart and distinctive—a helpful guide to style-correct buying.



Linen and Cotton

Lace in a perfect combination for summer, or for resort wear now; in a one-piece frock of classic lines. The lace texture resembles a homespun weave. Particularly smart are the square collarless neckline and panel decorated with buttons.



Gay and Colorful

Mexican Influence

Indian Print

Copies of rare old Hindu motifs gathered together in an unusual pattern for this beach (or house) coat with matching bandana. Note the slim lines, effective border treatment, tiny collar and miniature sleeves. If you are ensemble-minded, there are shorts and a halter to match.

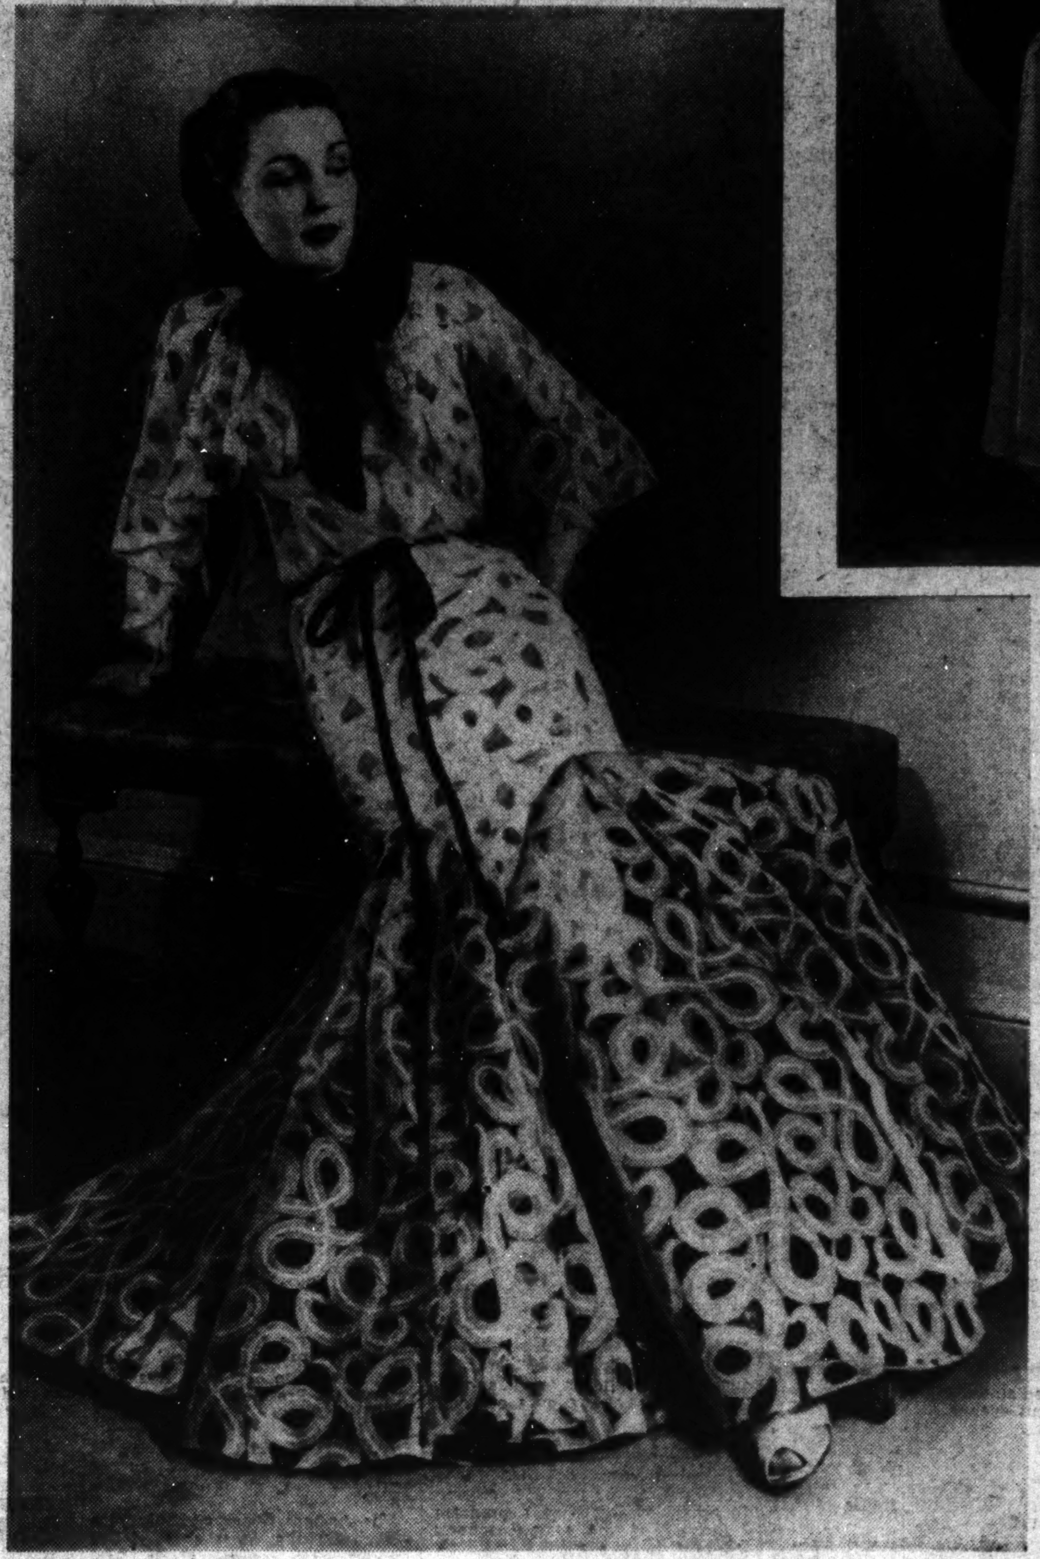
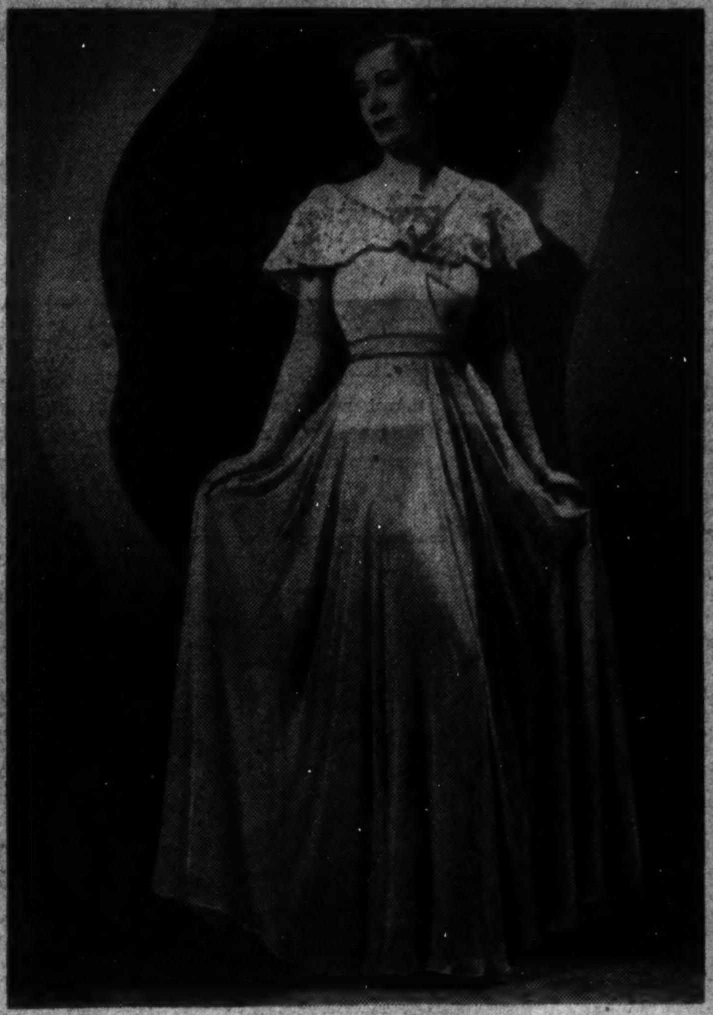
Black and Green Lace

A ribbon-like pattern of bright green on a black background is the medium for this lovely lace model by Paquin. A new treatment in off-the-shoulder decolletage adds distinction. Slim-fitting skirt with bouffant hemline gives graceful contours. This is an evening gown appropriate for wear now and all through the year. Distinctive in styling and fabric—an outstanding presentation of the spring season.



Romantic Styling

Black and pink lace in an unusual scroll design. The waist-length cape ties with a wide bow of black velvet; narrow velvet fashions the sash, which descends from back in halter line. Designed by Jean Desses.



Tones of Blue

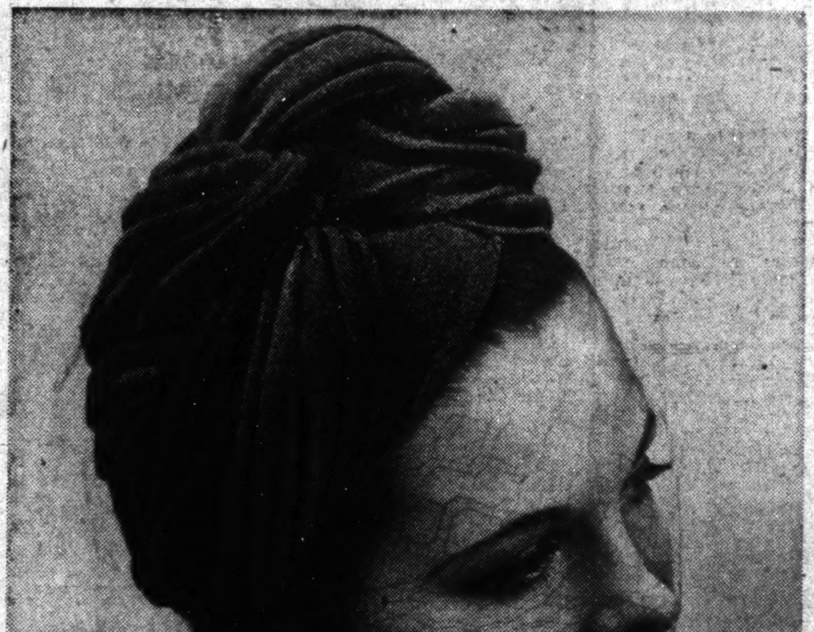
Versatile and Chic

With the bolero, a smart dinner and theater ensemble; without, a formal evening gown. The material is acele crepe and available in such alluring colors as miami blue, chartreuse, blush pink. Bolero is entirely braided.



East Indian Influence

Is cleverly expressed in this turban of deep rich pile rayon fabric shot through with threads of cellophane to give a scintillating appearance. Executed in such color mergers as deep violet and red.

*XX THE WASHINGTON POST: THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1938

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, Feb. 17.

When the swanky First City Troop of Philadelphia's National Guard—originally organized during the Revolution—came down to see some fancy didoes with the horses at Fort Myer, the Army announcer seemed to be carried away by their handsome comic opera uniforms and lofty fur plumes.

Col. Wainwright. . . . eyebrows up.

* * * *

Col. Jonathan Wainwright, commander of the Army post across the Potomac, raised his eyebrows almost an eighth of an inch.

* * * *

Her colleagues are slightly agog at Madame Perkins' invitations for the marriage of her daughter. They read from "The Secretary of Labor," without any mention of her husband, semi-invisible Paul Wilson, father of the bride; at least the invitations received by other Cabinet families read that way.

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES:

Credit for a perfect piece of timing goes to Hans Dieckhoff, the astute, moon-faced German Ambassador . . . Hitler's command to German citizens in America to refrain from joining the pro-Nazi Bund was announced here the day after the arrest of three German spies was revealed in New York.

"—gentlemen of affluence."

It's inevitable that Washington should be comparing Paul McNutt, the early-bird candidate, with President Roosevelt . . . Both are big, magnetic, handsome, dominant . . . But Washington observers agree that Roosevelt is far more erudite, urbane, steeped in tradition, gifted with hair-trigger resourcefulness.

* * * *

McNutt's stepladder comments on the Philippines since he hit the Capital have rung with idealism and a mildly bellicose patriotism, but sounded a trifle brash and sophomoric alongside the delicate walking-on-eggs of the President and Secretary Hull when alluding to the Far East.

His prose and enunciation (an advantage) are rough-and-ready Hoosier rather than polished Harvardian. The verdict is that McNutt must gather more finesse before he gathers electoral votes.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR:

A vigorous New Dealer can keep three stenographers exhausted most of the time . . . Tommy Corcoran, the White House prose stylist, often takes two secretaries along when he travels . . . Jimmy Roosevelt's crack stenographer (Margaret Durand) is the only one at the White House who wears her specs when posing for her picture.

* * * *

In a burst of generosity Congress once gave Mrs. Coolidge the right to frank her letters . . . By writing her name in the upper right hand corner of the envelope she could dispense with postage stamps . . . But she discovered that many of her letters were not reaching their destination; people were pinching them for collections . . . So she finally decided it would be cheaper in the long run to stick on the postage.

"—F. D. R. in an eyeshade."

The mental image of Franklin Roosevelt as a newspaper editor is a fascinating one . . . The Hearst papers, for example, might welcome him as editor-in-chief of the entire chain after 1940 . . . On the side he might write an even better column than Arthur Brisbane's.

* * * *

With a green eyeshade, he could set other editors an excellent example by supporting the next Administration in all its enterprises . . . And to any newspaper lucky enough to get his services he could add a much-needed religious note by printing a psalm occasionally on the front page.

* * * *

If you stand behind the Treasury Buildings about sundown and look across the Ellipse south of the White House toward the Potomac and the setting sun, the scene is apt to remind you a little of the Place de la Concorde in Paris. This is especially apt to happen if your first memory of the Place de la Concorde dates back to the war days, when you were very young and sentimental . . . The vista dotted with statues and monuments, the soft tracery of the bare trees against the pink western glow, the hint of the river in the distance, the sense of history in the making in the great stone buildings, all blend to create a half-familiar beauty.

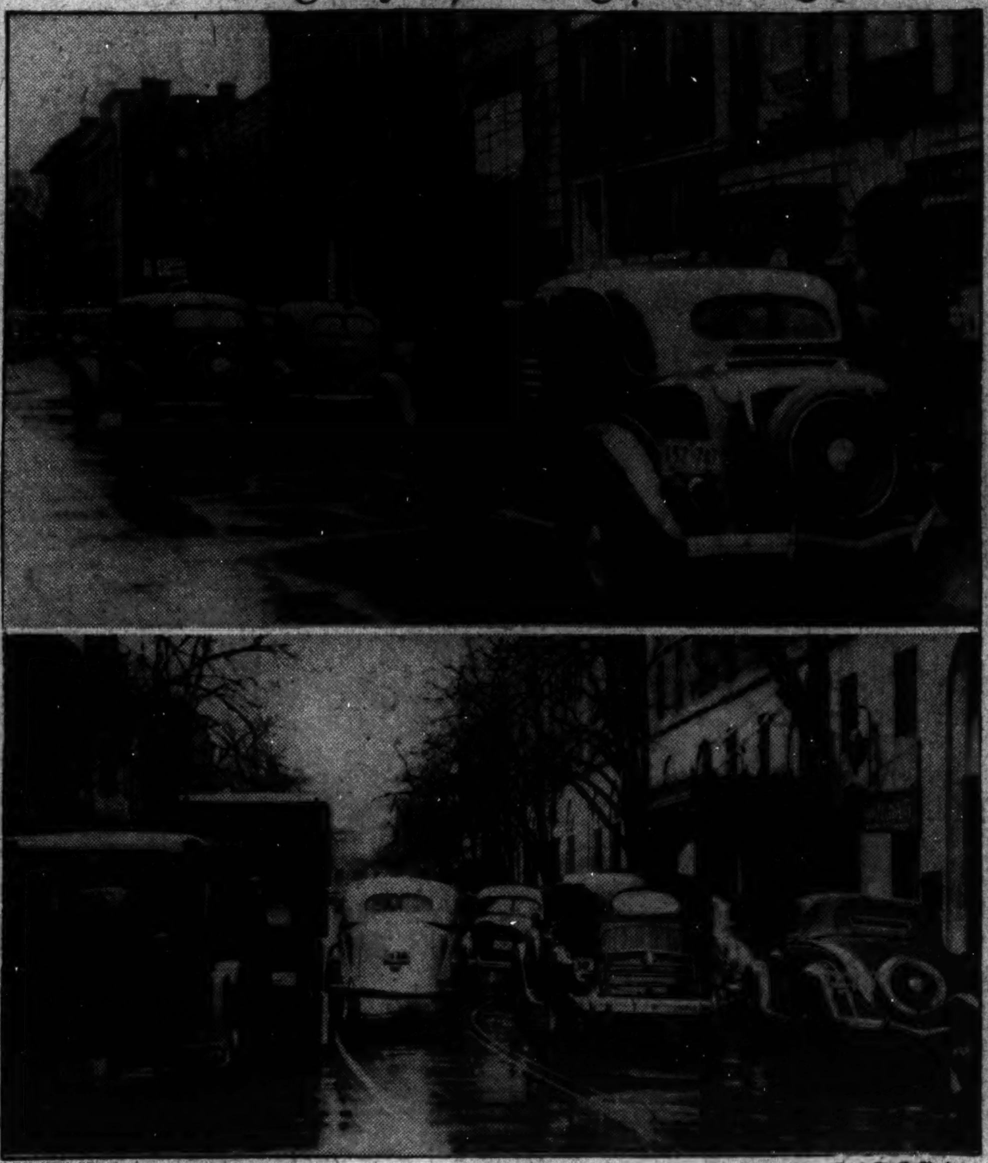
Harmon Trophy Given to Merrill

Henry T. (Dick) Merrill yesterday received the Harmon Trophy from President Roosevelt in recognition of his outstanding aviation accomplishments last year.

The flier was given the award for his two-way flight across the Atlantic, completed May 14 in the fastest time ever made. On the return flight to New York the first pictures of the coronation of King Edward VI were brought to the United States.

Double-Parkers Enjoy Field Day on Streets Here Illegally Menacing, Blocking Traffic



Post Staff Photos.

The law forbidding double parking was ignored yesterday on DeSales street (lower) at the Mayflower Hotel and on Connecticut avenue above Dupont Circle (upper), The Post's traffic reporter observed.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(How well are District traffic regulations observed by the average motorist? How well are the regulations enforced by police? To answer these questions, The Post sent its traffic reporter on a cruising observation assignment. In today's story—the first of a series—stress is laid on the law pertaining to double parking.—Editor's note.)

It was "business as usual" for Washington legion of double-parkers yesterday—in spite of additional rainy-day traffic hazards, slippery streets and obscured visions.

Downtown and uptown, passenger and commercial vehicles lined congested throughfares in apparent disregard for rules of safety and the rights of others. In one instance—near the Mayflower Hotel—several double-parked cars remained unmolested by a passing policeman.

The problem of double parking has long been a sore spot in the District's administration of traffic laws. A source of danger to pedestrians and motorists alike, the evil continues, unchecked by enforcement and appeals for driver co-operation.

With adequate space available at the curb, numerous cars were observed yesterday standing virtually in the center of traffic lanes, forcing other vehicles to swerve and frequently causing drivers to stop suddenly to avoid accidents.

The law permits passenger cars to stop abreast only long enough to load or unload riders. Commercial vehicles may park double only to load or unload merchandise. The law further states:

"Provided that such vehicles while so parked will not unreasonably impede or interfere with orderly two-way traffic."

Repeatedly, local traffic officials have stressed dangers to pedestrians who step in front of double-parked cars into moving traffic. They have also warned of the hazards to other cars attempting to weave in and out of a double-parked line.

For nearly half-an-hour, an ice truck remained double-parked yesterday within 50 feet of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. There was ample space at the curb when the driver alighted and left his vehicle standing in the street. Another motorist at the curb was blocked when he tried to drive away. A policeman finally moved the truck and entered a restaurant to locate the driver. This occurred during the noon lunch-hour.

On K street near Connecticut avenue, a chauffeur stood idly by a double-parked limousine with "low number" license plates, parked directly on a heavily-traversed bus route. Large buses were forced into the center of the street. No amount of horn-blowing by angered motorists would move the offending machine.

De Sales street, between Connecticut avenue and Eighteenth street northwest, was almost blocked by double-parked cars and trucks. At one time, the jam of vehicles attempting to pass through the clogged street was backed into Connecticut avenue.

One double-parker ran afoul of a Third Precinct police car near Dupont Circle. He had left his machine unattended. A policeman escorted him to the Station House to post collateral.

Along downtown Seventh street—one of the city's most congested traffic centers—the parked-double offenders held a "field day." Between E. and F streets, the "orderly movement of two-way traffic" was impossible. One driver explained he was "waiting for someone."

And as traffic moved at a snail's pace up Pennsylvania avenue northwest, several large sightseeing cars near Fourteenth street occupied a traffic lane intended for moving vehicles. The drivers made no effort to move—even though the line of stalled cars stretched nearly a block.

Rapid Growth Of Playgrounds In D. C. Hailed

Southwest Citizens Told by Mrs. Peeples of Added Use of Schools.

Growth and development of recreational work in Southwest Washington was discussed by officials and civic leaders at a meeting of the Southwest Citizens Association last night.

Plans for development of Hoover Playground were discussed by Miss Sybil Baker, of the Playground Department. She urged the citizens to back her in efforts to obtain needed funds.

With the immediate prospect of a new Jefferson Junior High School, there will be adequate facilities to carry on an even larger program for boys and girls, Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, said as she outlined progress made in use of the school by young people of the neighborhood.

Other speakers included Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police and Miss Merrill, of the Barney Neighborhood House.

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, reported the appropriation for land on which to re-erect the new school was assured. A resolution of thanks to the Woman's Association of the District Motor Club for the aid it has given in obtaining the new building was adopted.

Kitt Studio Recital.

Sylvia Kaplowitz, of the Homer L. Kitt Studios of Music, will present a group of advanced students in an accordian and piano recital tomorrow evening at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Handcuffs on Flag for D. C. Favored by Suffrage Leader

A proposed District flag with a yellow background representing a lemon, a pair of handcuffs in one corner showing the extent of the city's freedom and a double cross, "which is self-explanatory," was exhibited to members of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association last night by Jesse C. Sutter, of the District Suffrage Association.

The flag was outlined by a black border indicating that the city "has and is, for all intents and purposes, dead."

Outlining the need for District representation in Congress, Sutter and Paul E. Lesh urged members of the association to go on record as favoring a voice in the National Government.

Postponing action on the recommendation of the speakers, the organizatoin voted to refer the question to the suffrage committee before taking definite action.

Earlier in the day, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, wished the District Suffrage Association success in its meeting scheduled for tomorrow in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

"There is every reason why the right of suffrage should be extended to residents of the District," Green said. He added:

"I am confident I speak for members of the entire A. F. of L. organization as well as millions of friends, when I extend to the conference on District suffrage best wishes for its success in all the efforts it puts forth to obtain its objectives."

American Boys Still Patriotic, Hines Declares

American principles of free speech protect young men who openly declare they would not fight to protect their country, but "in other lands such statements might will lead to the firing squad," Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, last night told a meeting of the District Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution in the Mayflower Hotel.

Recalling President Roosevelt's appeal to Congress to bolster the Nation's defenses, Gen. Hines declared:

"There have been times when to keep the peace has been ignoble, and you therefore revere those who dared and fought.

"In the days of ancient Greece it was said that Sparta's walls were Sparta's men. In spite of the exceptions to which I have referred, I believe firmly that the young men of America are as patriotic today as their ancestors were in the past . . . that America's walls also would prove to be America's men."

Play System Co-ordination Need Stressed

School Board Told Use of Grounds Not Loss of Jurisdiction.

Effective co-ordination of the District's far-flung recreational facilities is both highly desirable and essential to efficient operation, school and municipal recreation heads told members of the Board of Education yesterday.

The school trustees opened a series of "fact-finding" conferences in the Franklin Building. In the two-hour meeting, Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, director of the Community Center Department; Miss Sybil Baker, director of municipal playgronds; Birch E. Bayh, director of health and physical education in public schools for white pupils, and Dr. E. B. Henderson, health and physical education director for the colored schools, all outlined the activities and program objectives of the agencies they superintend.

Finnan, Barrett Attend.

Other recreation heads, including C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and Lewis Barrett, District recreational co-ordinator, also attended the session. But their reports were postponed until the second conference, scheduled March 30.

Miss Baker, who supervises activities, part of which are conducted on school playgrounds, assured board members they need not lose jurisdiction over school grounds by permitting them to be used by outside agencies participating in the co-ordination program.

"The municipal playgrounds," she pointed out, "have conducted programs on grounds loaned to us by the schools and the national parks. We have many years of experience in that kind of co-ordination. And our experience indicates it is altogether possible to use borrowed facilities."

Miss Baker explained that since 1925 no land has been acquired by the District Commissioners for playground purposes. Instead all grounds have been acquired by the National Capital Parks, then loaned to the municipal playgrounds for their use.

Co-operation Pursued.

Mrs. Peeples, in an extensive report of recreational facilities offered by the Community Center department which is under direct supervision of the Board of Education, told board members that approximately half of its program is participated in by adults; one-quarter by children, and another quarter by boys and girls of youth age.

She said the close relationship existing between the public schools and the Community Center was an important factor in the efficient operation of the latter's program. Principals of the several schools, she said, have been extremely cooperative in Community Center activities.

The pending Senate bill that would set up a recreation board to govern all recreational agencies in the District was not discussed, but board members indicated they would ask the several agency representatives for their opinions of the bill at the next meeting.

Rains Draw Gulls In Greatest Horde Over Washington

Rains of the last few days were held responsible yesterday for the greatest influx of gulls the District ever has seen.

"Rain brings earthworms out of the ground, to their misfortune but to the gulls' satisfaction," explained Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the Smithsonian Institution.

The mild winter has resulted in the birds remaining in this vicinity instead of flying southward, he said. Dr. Bartsch estimated there are as many as 4,000 herring, ringbill and Bonaparte gulls between Washington and Mount Vernon.

"Their residence, as well as that of other wild fowl, should be encouraged by prohibiting gun blinds and shooting at any time of year between Washington and Alexandria, along both sides of the Potomac," he said.

Parran Urges Program of Public Health

Says Preventable Ills Need Care on a Big Scale.

In a statement to the Senate Unemployment Committee resembling a doctor's message on the state of the Union, Surgeon General Thomas Parran yesterday plead for a national health program.

The head of the United States Health Service painted a vivid picture of ravages of preventable disease, not only among unemployed but among the independent citizenry, concluding:

"A national program of health is essential to any national plan of rehabilitation. It will pay dividends in dollars no less than in human lives.

"Savings to the Nation's economy will be apparent immediately. Savings over the next decade will easily amortize every dollar spent."

Dr. Parran's statement probably was the most comprehensive he has delivered to a Congressional body since he became Surgeon General in April, 1936. He struck forcefully against death and illness tolls of tuberculosis, syphilis, pneumonia and cancer, especially among needy and unemployed.

He told the committee that among relief families there is 12 times the amount of permanent disablement of family heads than among those in comfortable circumstances; that disabling illness strikes the jobless with 43 per cent more frequency than the employed.

Dr. Parran asserted that tuberculosis deaths can be cut in half, syphilis stamped out, pneumonia mortality appreciably reduced, cancer cases lessened and various other diseases brought under control if the health problem is attacked on a national scale.

Rep. Collins Tells Of Library Plans

In a world filled with wars and the menace of wars, it is heartening that Americans are able to plan for the noble life of learning and culture, Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, told the District Library Association at a meeting in the Archives Building last night.

"The future of the cultured world does not lie with cannon and soldiers and bombs and airplanes and implements of destruction," said Collins, who is author of the $50,000,000 library bill now pending before the House Library Committee.

"Give the children fine books to read," he added.

Collins explained the plan, which calls for the establishment of five regional national libraries throughout the country, to be erected at a cost of $10,000,000 each.

Seven Games Will Open Post-A. A. U. Court Tourney Tonight

Outdoors

With

Bill Ackerman.
The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

There is every indication, from the letters and calls—where to go—that local anglers this year are taking their Maryland pike fishing far more seriously than ever before.

ACKERMAN.

First, to straighten out for many, the Maryland law that makes no direct season for the pike beyond "all other fresh water game fish above tidewater," and so for stream and pond fishing, makes the season the same as that for the black bass—July 1 to November 30. But in tidewater, there is no restriction whatsoever, except as to size. The minimum is 14 inches.

The places to go are almost too numerous to set down, for the headwaters of every river, as well as most of the deep coves in them, from West River to the Susquehanna have their full quota of this fine fish that teams up with the yellow perch to make a fishing trip through the winter months worthwhile. Both are found together, and are taken, even through the ice, if the State law in which you are fishing doesn't prohibit such practice.

There is fine pike fishing, particularly in North and South rivers, the Severn, the Patuxtent and the Mogothy. All of them less than 30 miles and only an hour's drive.

Few Boats Ready.

There are few boats obtainable in South River close to the best fishing, which is just below and in plain sight of the Defense highway to Annapolis. It may, after a fashion, be done from the low marshy banks, but it isn't to be recommended. At Riverview, which is at the east end of the upper bridge, there are several boats to be had, but without an outboard it is a pull of 3 miles. If you get your boat at Edgewater, at the end of the new concrete bridge on the Marlboro pike, it is still farther.

The Severn River, from above Herald Harbor up to Severn Run, is again in fine shape with the regrowth of the grass that almost died out several years ago.

Whitney's Landing, reached by reached by Defense highway to the Pidgeon House, 9 miles on No. 3 to Benfield and turn right on a country road 3 miles to the landing. Boats are available.

More Places!

At Indian Creek Landing, directly across the Severn, and reached by taking the road that turns left just before you get to Herald Harbor. This is on private club property. Inquire the way to the home of a Negro by the name of Jacobs. He has ten boats for hire at the prevailing rate, $1 per day, and will in addition tell you the best places to fish. Although that is hardly necessary, for the grassy banks and every cove up to the Run are productive. The point above Sunken Island is particularly good.

Bill Ackerman's column appears three times a week: Tuesday, Friday and Sunday.

Pigs Point, near Leon Postoffice, on the Patuxent is reached by turning right on the gravel road just one mile after turning into the new Solomon's Island road. Another mile and a right turn at the crossroads will take you to the houses of the Negro rail bird hunters, where boats, and guides if necessary, may be had.

Huntinghom Dies.

The many friends L. B. Huntingdon made during his years of cruising on Chesapeake waters will regret to hear of his death off Fort Lauderdale this week as the result of a collision between his sportfishing cruiser and a tramp steamer.

He was the designer and manufacturer of the Huntingdon Drone, the spoon that was made to fit the conditions, found in our bay waters, for rock and bluefish trolling, and which filled the need, better than any other spoon on the market.

Can't Stop Weir.

Frances Weir, the fair young angler from Steubenville, Ohio, who has been fishing Miami waters for the last two months has probably received more awards, prizes and citations than any deep-sea fisherman, man or woman, in the modern history of the sport.

For weeks she was leading in the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament with her catch of a 450-pound blue marlin on 24-thread line. The feat created a new world's record for women, as well as a new Atlantic coastal record for men and women for this size line.

For it she received from the New York Rod and Gun Editors Association, the plaque for the outstanding achievement of the year. The Miami tournament officials presented her with a citation, as did the Miami Rod and Reel Club.

And would have received the $1,000 Coxe-Tycoon-Ashaway heavy tackle outfit that will be first prize for the heaviest marlin entered, had not Antonio Tarafa, of Havana, turned in a blue marlin this week that topped Miss Weir's by 2 pounds.

If she is beaten in the final standing on April 17, it will be taken standing up, for she is back at Cat Cay to stay until she wins the prize, or as she says, "give up fishing and rest on the laurels she has accumulated."

Dizzy Is Sent to Bed By Sinus Infection

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Dizzy Dean still is in bed.

The St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, ordered to bed when sinus infection developed from a cold, is following doctor's orders—under protest.

"There's nothing wrong with me," Dean said today as he tossed about his hotel bed, but he'll remain confined for another 24 hours at least.

F. B. I. Five Plays K. of C. In Tech Gym

Opening Games Slated at 6:15 o'Clock in Big Meet.

By Jack Munhall.

Washington youth parades.

Of all ages, sizes, ambitions and ideals, some 250 of the finest girl and boy athletes in this sector, tonight are motivated by a common desire as the eleventh annual Post-A. A. U. basketball championships open on three floors.

Representing the strongest field ever assembled for the event, these lads and lassies are prepared to seek city titles in seven weight classes as Washington's greatest indoor amateur event is launched at 7:30 o'clock at Tech Gym.

Seven games are listed on the opening night schedule but only the boys are slated to see action. Since there are but eight girl teams entered, all in the unlimited class, the "weaker sex" will not begin play until March 24.

Ceremonies at Tech.

Although three lighter-class encounters precede them in chronological order, the honor of officially launching the program has been accorded the F. B. I. and K. of C. teams. The G-Man, one of four seeded unlimited teams, will be a decided favorite in the game which will begin after Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, tosses the first ball.

The feature of the evening promises to be the Lubeseal-Intellects Club contest, which is scheduled for 9:30 p. m. At first glance Lubeseal was rated an odds-on favorite, but after a check-up of the Intellect club roster, opinion has been altered to a marked degree.

Headed by Hugo Schulze Sanford Hickey, Billy Rogers and George Brown, all former American University stars, the Intellects have gathered together a formidable team and a first round upset would not be totally unexpected.

Lubeseal, with Bobby Lucas, Bill Noonan, Chick Hollidge, Buddy Nau, Ollie Tipton and other well known stars in its line-up, however, will rule a slight favorite.

G-Men Are Favored.

The strong F. B. I. runner-up to Regal Clothiers in the Heurich Cup League, will be a decided choice to take the K. of C. The G-Men will recruit their first five from Lavella Dean, Jim and Herb Thompson, Forrest Burgess, Chester Airhart, Berne Jones, Mac McCartee and Ace Colley.

K. of C. has few stars, but a group of hard-working, spirited lads who rely principally on team work. On the squad are Ed Murphy, R. J. Rosenbaum, Dick Hallett, Morris Crimmen, L. J. Caillavet, C. Murphy, R. J. Rafterry and George Caspar.

Scheduled between the unlimited contests, the Boys Club of Washington quintet will meet the strong Goode Cleaners in a 145-pound class clash at 8:30.

Merrick Boys Club and the Boys Club of Washington have drawn the honor to play the first game ever held in the new 85-pound class. The teams meet at the Boys Club of Washington at 6:15 p. m. At the same gym, one-hour later, Boys Club of Washington, northeast branch, and Northeast Boys Club face in a 100-pound game.

Club Teams Active.

Two contests are also scheduled for the Merrick gym. At 6:15, in a 100-pound encounter, Y. M. C. A. clashes with the Boys Club of Washington, central branch, and at 7:15, Boys Club of Washington meets Roosevelt C. C. Boys Club in a 115-pound affair.

All teams must weigh in a half-hour before scheduled game time. Failure to meet this obligation will result in the banishment of defaulting players.

All bearers of A. A. U. cards will be admitted free of charge tonight only. Otherwise, admission is 25 cents.

Ky Laffoon, Metz Victors In 4-Ball Play

Defeat Goggin, Hogan, 6-5, in Finals of $4,000 Event.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 16.—Dapper Dick Metz, the hard luck kid, and Ky Laffoon blazed to victory in the fifteenth annual $4,000 International Four-Ball Golf Tournament today with a convincing 6-and-5 conquest of Willie Goggin and Ben Hogan in the 36-hole final.

It was Metz, hampered by injuries for almost a year, who made the match a rout after his Chicago team had been held to a one-hole lead in the morning. His short game deadly accurate, Metz clicked off six birdies on the first afternoon nine and his team made the 27-hole turn 6 up with a best-ball 30, 6 under par.

Laffoon and Metz forged 7 up at the twenty-eighth, where they won with a par as Hogan missed a 6-foot putt. After the twenty-ninth was halved in par Goggin and Hoogan kept the match alive by taking the thirtieth. Both Goggin and Hogan missed 6-foot putts for birdies on the thirty-first and Metz dropped a 10-foot putt for the half that closed the match.

Metz said one physician had advised him to stop playing as soon as possible to allow a pulled ligament near a rib in his back to heal. He said if X-ray pictures bore out a preliminary investigation his right arm might be strapped to his side for six weeks.

"It would be stupid for me to continue playing," he said, "if the ligament won't heal without rest."

Metz injured his back while playing in California a couple of months ago, shortly after he had returned to action following an automobile accident last spring.

Goggin and Hogan, the tournament's surprise team, made the match a battle throughout the first 18 holes but were unable to match Metz's magnificent pace down the homestretch.

On their way to the finals Metz and Laffoon downed Ray Mangrom and Ed Oliver, Craig Wood and Bill Burke, and Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

Aiken, S. C., March 16 (U.P.).—Patty Berg, Minneapolis, and Jane Cothran Jameson, West Palm Beach, playing in a driving rain, today defeated Alice Rutherford, Allamuchy, N. J., and Marion MacDougall, Portland, Oreg., 5 and 4, in the opening match of the Aiken Invitation Round-Robin Women's Golf Championship.

Barbara Bourne, New York, and Isabel Ogilivie, Cleveland, Ohio, easily bettered Mrs. W. W. Curtis, Sandusky, Ohio, and Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, New Rochelle, N. Y., 8 and 7.

Each winning team made 2 points toward the championship.

Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., and Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., halved an 18-hole match with Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., and Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, N. Y. They were all even at the end of the 18 and split the 2 points.

The latter match was delayed several hours when Miss Miley sprained an ankle on the seventh tee. She resumed play after resting.

Olympic Date Change Threatens To Cripple U. S. Team in 1940

Games Set for Sept. 21 to Oct. 6—Dates Will Keep American College Athletes Out of Event.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, March 16.—Defeating opposition from China on the one hand and the United States, Great Britain and France on the other, the International Olympic Committee today confirmed Tokyo as site of the 1940 Olympic Games and changed the dates to September 21 to October 6.

Japan's right to uphold the games was upheld despite a proposal by the Chinese delegate, Dr. C. T. Wang, that the games not be held in any country at war.

A communique from the I. O. C., said the proposal did not come to a vote. The communique stated that in view of the Olympic charter and assurances Tokyo was able to prepare for the games, the I. O. C. was "unable to consider" the request to hold the games elsewhere.

The change in the dates, originally set for August 25 to September 8, was regarded as a serious blow to the United States by Avery Brundage, of Chicago, one of the American delegates.

"The United States will be affected especially by the change," said Brundage, "since American college athletes now will be unable to compete." The new dates conflict with the opening of college terms.

The I. O. C., however, despite votes against the alteration by the United States, Great Britain and France, accepted Japan's suggestion that the change be made in view of the heat prevalent at the end of August. Germany and Italy supported the Japanese proposal.

While also confirming Sapporo, Japan, as the site for the winter games, the I. O. C. ruled out skiing events. The committee took this means of meeting the International Ski Federation's demands the I. O. C. accept the federation's definition of an amateur. Under federation rules, coaches and instructors are permitted to compete in amateur events.

No dates were announced for the winter games.

Daniel J. Ferris, national secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, in confirming Brundage's view that the later dates would be a blow to the United States team, pointed to the large number of undergraduates or recently graduated athletes who scored for the United States in the 1936 track and field events at Berlin.

Most prominent was Jesse Owens, winner of the 100-meter and 200-meter sprints and the broad jump and member of the winning 400-meter relay team. Others were John Woodruff, 800-meter champion; Archie Williams, 400 meters; Forrest (Spec) Towns and Glenn Hardin, 110-meter and 400-meter hurdles, respectively; Cornelius Johnson, high jump, and Earle Meadows, pole vault.

"Our track and field teams always have had a strong proportion of college men," said Ferris, "and it's probable that a large number of them will qualify for the 1940 squad. Though the better ones might be given leaves of absence by their college officials, they still would be risking the loss of half a year or even a full year of school.

"We know that our delegates tried hard to have the I. O. C. refrain from the action it took, but obviously their efforts were to no avail."

D'Vys, a Somerville sandlotter 50 years ago, is watching the warming weather that will bring over the radio the umpire's "Play Ball," for he retains his keen interest in the game, played so differently from what it was in his youth.

D'Vys recalls the incident that caused him to compose the poem, first printed anonymously because, as he says, "my father was a retired sea captain and poetry did not particularly appeal to him."

Baugh Is Due 'Farm' Berth

Cards' Regulars Doubt That He Can Hit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—Manager Frankie Frisch led his St. Louis Cardinals into Orlando today, but "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh was not among them. And "Slingin' Sammy" will not be among them when the National League race starts, is the prevalent impression.

Baugh, with 30-odd other Cardinals, remained at the St. Petersburg headquarters of the St. Louis club today. Manager Frisch stated that "the work in camp will do Baugh good."

He had many nice things to say about the Redskins football star, but spoke mostly in kind generalities. "He's a good boy, is learning fast and will come along all right," said Frisch, but he said nothing to indicate that he was counting on Baugh in any degree.

Despite the lack of capable infielders on the Cardinals, Baugh is destined for release to one of the St. Louis chain clubs according to newspapermen with the club.

"He's a better than fair fielder right now," said one, "but they doubt if he ever will hit big league pitching. He slaps at the ball. Doesn't get much power behind his stroke and doesn't look very impressive up there.

"There's nothing wrong with his fielding, though, or his arm, either. He's flashy around third base and apparently can throw from any angle. But Frisch will probably farm him out to the Houston club, of the Texas League. If Baugh makes a better impression in the next three weeks, he may be sent to Columbus in the American Association."

Baugh has told St. Louis newspapermen that when and if he wins a regular job with the Cardinals he will quit professional football. He has his choice of several football coaching offers that will not interfere with his baseball.

Shows Faith in Friend.

Frederick, Md., March 16 (AP).—William F. Kintz had faith in his friend, Grayson H. Mercer. Kintz's will named Mercer executor of his $3,000 estate and instructed him to dispose of it "as he feels best."

Mel Almada, Owen Battle Before 1,500

Players and Fans Enjoy Scrap; Quinn, Cops Halt Fight.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—Fists were flung and bats were swung in a hot medley of slugging this afternoon as the Nats opened their exhibition schedule with a 15-to-13 victory over St. Louis' Gas House gang.

It wasn't much of a ball game, but it was a stirring bit of fisticuffs. As an unadvertised feature of the program, which drew 1,500 of the local citizenry to Tinker Field, Outfielder Mel Almada, of the Nats, and Catcher Mickey Owen, of the Cardinals, clashed in front of the Washington dugout.

In the sixth inning they had words and then they went at each other. For several minutes they battled as other players of both clubs, willing to see the fight continue on a fair basis, made no move to interfere. They formed a circle about the Mexican lad and the chunky Cardinal catcher, and the battling moved at a rapid pace.

Umpire-in-chief John Quinn finally burst through the mob of players, and, with the aid of a lone policeman, pulled the pair apart. He banished both from the game.

Almada and young Owen were no strangers. They played together on the Los Angeles sandlots, Almada beating the catcher into the majors by two years.

Almada's anger was aroused by what he believed to be "bean balls" that Owen had ordered from Bob Weiland, Cardinal pitcher. From the Nats' bench he indulged in a bit of name-calling when suddenly Owen flung off his mask and advanced toward the Washington player.

Only Mark of Battle.

Almada leaped from the bench and rushed out to meet Owen halfway, launching a long right-hand punch as they neared each other. For a full minute it was a stand-up battle until Owen wrestled the Mexican to the ground. As the other players made no move to halt the festivities, Owen and Almada climbed to their feet and resumed punching. Finally, Umpire Quinn and the cops dragged the pair apart.

The only mark of the battle was borne by Almada, who emerged with a long scratch on the left side of his head, where Owen's finger nails had left their mark. Owen was hustled to the clubhouse, while Almada was restrained on the Washington bench while the catcher dressed and left the park.

"Sure, I called him names," Almada admitted, "but look what he was trying to do to me. The first time Weiland pitched at my head I thought it was an accident, but Owen called for that same pitch again, and that wasn't any accident. That's time time to fight."

Almada Gets Homer.

Summed up, Almada emerged with a fair share of the honors for the day. He hit the first ball pitched in the opening inning for a home run. That blow started a five-run assault by the Nats on the veteran Si Johnson.

It was a loose affair—the ball game. The Nats, who held a 5-to-0 lead for two innings, were trailing 8 to 6, in the fourth. They came along in the fifth to tie the score at 9 to 9 against the left-handed Weiland, and then fell behind, 11 to 9. They were out in front again, 12 to 11, at the end of the seventh, and were ahead, 15 to 11, in the ninth, barely managing to stave off a last-inning rush by the Cardinals.

Al told, they made 18 hits, to 15 by the Cardinals, and profited from three St. Louis errors.

The important blow of the battle was struck by Almada's sub-

Scene of Post Cage Tourney Tonight to Be Different From Gas-Lit Days of the 'Little Potatoes'

By Walter Haight.

Nothing is too good for the boys and girls competing in The Post-District A. A. U. basketball championship tournament which opens tonight . . . the best gymnasiums, the best officials and the best equipment . . . This is as it should be in contrast to games of my "Little Potatoes" of 25 years ago . . . We played in band boxes, using our long underwear for uniforms and many times had our hair singed by the gas lights on either side of the baskets . . . The tourney will be quite an "undertaking" for the Greater Chambers Co. five . . . Joe DiMaggio, the Yankees' slugger, threatens to give up baseball and work in his father's fish business unless the club comes through with the salary he demands . . . the Yankees appear to be sitting tight, however, and have sent Joe an ultimatum that amounts to "put this in your fish house and smoke it" . . . I sort of like that note from one of my "Pals" which reads in part: "You couldn't catch a winner in a fish net but get me a badge for the Bowie meeting; I'll pay the service charge" . . . . Dorothy Snell, the youthful and beautiful girl figure-skater of whom I wrote some time ago, will be one of the featured skaters in the Ice Carnival tomorrow and Saturday night at Carlins' Arena in Baltimore . . . Dorothy finished second in the National Junior class . . . Her parents were pleased with that prize, considering that Dorothy moved up from the novice class this year . . . The girl who won the division spent several months in Europe perfecting her skating . . . while Dorothy's family had to drive her to Baltimore for her lessons . . . Next winter, with the Capital Garden available here, Miss Snell should go to town . . . or would you say skate to town? Johnny Tusick, who beats the publicity tom-toms for George Washington University, phoned to say that Bob Faris, of the Colonials, was picked by the Toledo U. five on its all-opponents' team . . . Toledo also named G. W. as the best club it met this year . . . Possibly swayed by the fact that it sunk the Colonials by 13 points . . . Incidentally, Toledo, which plays G. W. here next year (which accounts for Brother Busicks' interest), boasted one of the best collegiate players of the season in Chuck Chuckovits . . . He scored 388 points this season for a total of 740 . . . Since 200 points is far above the average for college players, Chuckovits is a standout . . . he scored 28 points against G. W. . . . It appears that Hans Kowsky, whom I dubbed "The Cloud," did fairly well with his prediction that there would be atmospheric disturbances on Tuesday night and Wednesday of this week . . . He clicked locally and I read of a tornado in the Middle West . . . however, Kowsky operates "continentally and intercontinentally" and I haven't received the reports from the outlying precincts as yet . . . By coincidence, Dick Tennyson, who threatens to become Kowsky's manager if the latter makes good predicting weather for sports events, was home yesterday nursing "atmospheric disturbances" in the form of a head cold . . .

Chief Chewaki, who imitates a cigar-store Indian loaded with TNT at the wrestling shows, tries to scalp Dean Detton tonight . . . Promoter Joe Turner is going to order him searched before he goes on the mat . . . there is a report that he has placed a machine-gun nest in his hair and is going to shoot his way out of the first tough spot . . . I'd like to see that movie, "Buck Gehrig Rides Again" . . . Understand George Marshall and Jack Espey would like to put my triple chin in the wringing machine for that "washtub" story . . . They should get off my neck and send The Post a check—for advertising . . . it was all in good, "clean" fun . . . chalk up another pun . . . if Hugh Miller, The Post photographer, keeps on pestering me, I'm going to trade him my nose guard and Dave Herman for his bicycle . . . Don't tell a soul, but I told that Senator who phoned me that he liked my column to write a letter to the editor . . . I'd like to see this Roberto Estalella make good with the Nats . . . he would change some of those late August games from "Love's Old Sweet Song" to "Swing Is Here to Stay" . . . Which reminds us that none of the writers with the Washington club have picked the Nats to win the pennant this year . . . Well, friends, I knew I could do it . . . Here I am at the end of my allotted space and I haven't mentioned the name of that certain horse!

Owls Beat Colorado to Win National College Cage 'World Series'

Temple Five Wins, 60-36; Violets Bow

By the United Press.

New York, March 16.—Temple University's towering harp-shooters won the first nnual National Invitation asketball tournament tonight, completely outclassing Colorado's Golden Buffaloes, 60 to 36, n the finals, before 14,499 spectaors at Madison Square Garden.

It was the worst defeat Colorado hampion of the Rocky Mountains ig Seven Conference, had suffered n a season of 14 games, and paraoxically, it was the greatest victory n 24 games for Temple, champions f the Eastern Conference and strong retenders to a mythical national rown for the 1937-38 season.

From the moment Temple forged nto a 6-to-0 lead in the first few inutes of play there never was any oubt about the outcome.

Colorado trailed, 33 to 18, at halfme, and during the second half the est it could do was to pull within points of tying the count.

Violets Beaten.

In the "consolation" game, Oklaoma A. and M., champion of the issouri Valley, outclassed New ork University, 37-24, to take third lace. N. Y. U. had fought Colorado to a 48-47 decision in Monday's mifinals and the terrific pace set in at game seemed to be reflected in e Buffalo's performance tonight. hey hardly looked like the same utfit.

Temple had too many guns and its rrific advantage in height and eadly accuracy in close and at long nge were the deciding factors.

The Owls paced themselves beaufully, time and again Colorado, d by "Whizzer" White and Swisher" Schwartz, went on scorg sprees, clicking for as many as points in a row.

Deadly Shots.

Most deadly of the Temple shotakers were Don Shields, who ropped in eight field goals for 16 oints; Howard Black and Ed Boyle ho had 7 each.

Jack Harvey was high man for olorado with three field goals and ve fouls for 11 points, White had ve goals for 10.

In the last 10 minutes of play, emple, with a 49-23 lead, sent in ost of its reserves who continued e rout. In the final session, Colorado scored only 18 points, of which were on field goals.

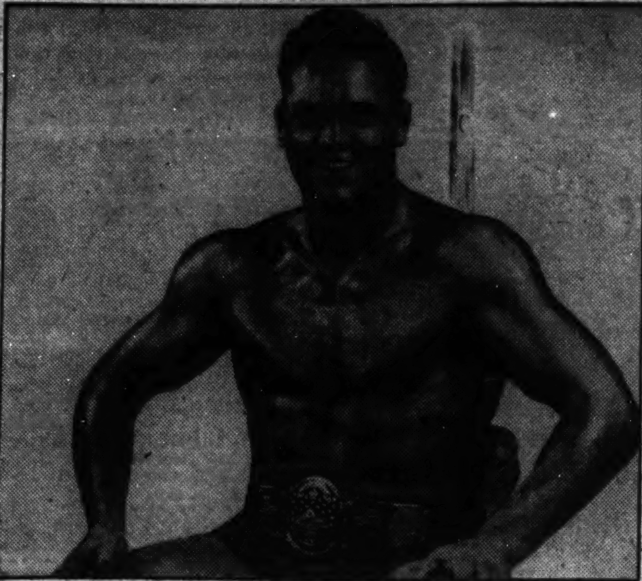
Mr. Dean Detton—And Belt!



The belt which Mr. Detton so proudly here displays is the same championship girdle he would like to win back from Minnesota's Bronko Nagurski. Mr. Detton meets an Indian "villain" in tonight's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Detton Set For Indian

Dean and Murphy Rate Top Arena Spots.

Two of the more dignified members of the wrestling fraternity—Dean Detton and Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy—will be pitted against a couple of "public enemies" of the mat on tonight's St. Patrick's show at Turner's Arena.

In the other half of the double windup, Dr. Murphy, of Boston's Irish wrestling colony, will face Pancho or Bronco (as you wish) Valdez, claimant of the Mexican title, and now running a close second to Chewaki for "villain" honors.

Also returning to familiar scenes for a 30-minute bout are Hans Steinke, one-time German machine gunner, who is from the old school of wrestling, and Ham Singh, the Hindu who sticks by the old-time style of catch-as-catch-can grappling.

Sammy Cohen, a Jewish star, faces Louis Bacigalupi, and Jose Rodriguez, of Spain, tangles with Joe Bonica, of Scranton, Pa.

Action begins ta 8:30.

Detton returns for his second match in as many weeks. The former Utah University athlete had quite a time last Thursday with Chief Thunderbird, the Vancouver Indian, before whipping him in 33 minutes.

Detton and Chewaki, by the way, are clashing in a rematch. Some weeks ago Detton won from the Oklahoman via disqualification in a rough match.

Murphy gained his mat fame on the strength of his dropkicking of rivals into defeat, though the trick availed him naught against either Londos or Jesse James.

University Shop Takes Pin Lead

The University Shop bowling team took undisputed possession of first place in the Recreation League last night by taking a 2-to-1 decision from Cooke Press. Dave Groth's 395 led the winning charge.

Allied Rofing Co., with Perce Wolfe rolling 402, dropped the TerrysAppliance team into a second-place deadlock with the Bregman's Wildcats one game back of the leaders, when the Roofing team took the odd tilt from the Terrymen.

Bregman's Wildcats, paced by Abe Beavers' brilliant 432 set, took a 2-to-1 decision from Blaydes.

In other matches Marvins Credit Co. took the odd game from Marlboro Hotel despite Brad Mandley's 378. Blankens Restaurant, led by Frank Donaldson's 391 and Perce Ellett's 383, took a 2-to-1 decision from Herzog's. Astor Clarke, with 387, and Harry High, with 371, were high for the losers.

stitute, chunky Taft Wright, who stepped to the plate with the bases full in the eighth and swatted a tremendous three-bagger into deep right field, the longest sock of the day. Those three runs clinched the contest for the Nats.

The man who was the Nats' batting leader, numerically, was Al Simmons, who delivered four clean singles in five times at bat and win the honor from Cecil Travis, who made three and Monte Weaver—no kidding—who collected a like number of hits.

Jimmy DeShong, Elon Hogsett and Monte Weaver divided the pitching for the Nats and Manager Harris had little to enthuse about in their performances. DeShong, gave up four hits and five runs in his three-inning turn, Hogsett was reached for five hits and four runs in three innings, and Weaver surrendered six hits and four runs.

Young Mickey Livingston caught the last five innings and earned Harris' admiration for his work behind the plate which included two superb catches of difficult pop fouls, but he failed to hit safely.

Commissioner Melvin Hazen, of the District of Columbia, was Clark Griffith's guest in a field box today.

Tomorrow the Nats move on to Daytona Beach for a game with the Minneapolis Club. Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas will be given their first outing on the mound.

Ed Browning Takes High Game Honors

Ed Browning, rolling for the Audicrats, won high individual game honors last night as the Dynamite Bowling League held their weekly meeting at the Arcadia Alleys. Jim Deal, of Faazers, had high set with 369; Faazers, high team game with 686 and high team set with 1,699.

In the Banker's League competition also held at the Arcadia, Chick Hollidge, of Rigg's Bankers, spilled the maples for 154 for high game; William Burnell, of American Securities & Trust No. 1, had high set with 380; American Securities & Trust No. 1, high team game and set with 604 and 1,726.

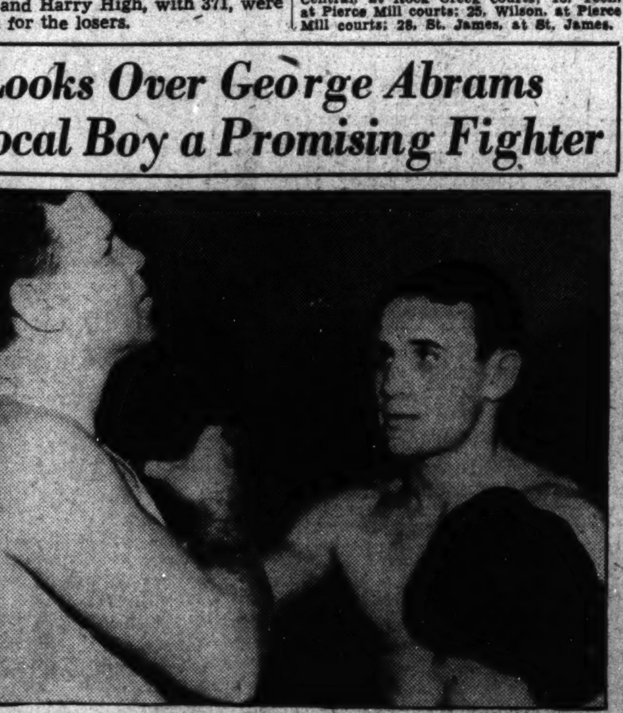
Mickey Walker Looks Over George Abrams And Finds Local Boy a Promising Fighter



WALKER (LEFT) GIVES ABRAMS LESSON.

The examination wasc onducted ackstage at Lake's Opera House, lias the Gayety Theater, in the soft low of floodlights. All around ere ladies of the chorus, some knitting (actually), some rehearsing ance steps, and others chewing um. They looked on in mold mazement as Walker and Abram osed for cameramen.

Abrams and Walker, stripped to e waist and Mickey aimed a ouple of shots at the lad who would ollow in his footsteps. Abrams romptly ducked to safety, covering icely. Mickey tried again—and the unch was blocked. Abrams tried couple with the same negative esults. As long as he has been way from the game, Walker demnstrated he stills knows how to andle himself.

"He throws a nice punch," Walker told the little athering of sportswriters, "and he has a good defense. His actions are good—here at least, and although 've never seen him fight he seems to know what he's oing. He's young and not fully developed, I can see hat, but I'd say he has the makings of a good midleweight."

Traveling with his own burlesque company, Walker egales his audience with tales of incidents during is fighting days, and he has them on the floor. He id yesterday afternoon, at least. He finishes the act ith a tap-dance number, which reveals that the old Toy Bulldog" is as light, and graceful as ever on his eet.

Walker's toughest fight, he said, was a losing battle ith Harry Greb, whom he classes second to Jack Dempsey on his list of all-time fistic greats. Benny Leonard is third.

Would he be willing to face Joe Louis, just as he fought Schmeling, Sharkey and the others in by-gone days?

"Sure," he replied, "I'd fight him in a minute—not that I think he's not tough and a hard puncher. But I'd fight him—for the right purse, of course."

"I had my choice of going into the movies for some shorts or into this, and I chose this. After all, time's aren't what they used to be in the movies, and why should I throw a lot of good men like Gable, Barrymore and McCrea out of work?"

He has something there! . . . ATCHISON.

Goose Goslin Set to Sign Nat Contract

Special Dispatch to The Post.

A free agent since his unconditional release by the Detroit Tigers last fall, Goslin arrived in Washington camp in time for dinner and then held a long conference with the Nats' owner.

"We'll see what kind of condition Goslin is in and then we may give him a contract," said Griffith. "He'll work out with the team starting tomorrow."

But Goslin, himself, didn't straddle the issue.

"We'll agree on terms all right and I'll sign the papers tomorrow, probably," said the Goose.

Goslin, at the age of 37, is attempting to start a third term with the Nats. To his credit is the fact that the Washington club has never won a pennant except when he was a regular member of the outfield. Coming to the Nats in 1911, he blossomed as a star in the pennant-winning years of 1924-25 and won the league batting title in 1928 with a .379 average.

GOOSE GOSLIN.

He was traded to the St. Louis Browns in 1930 and recalled in time to help the Nats win the 1933 pennant under Joe Cronin. Before the start of the 1934 season he was traded to Detroit, helping that club to two pennants and breaking up the 1935 World Series with his memorable seventh-game hit against the Cubs.

Griffith has long held an affection for the big-beaked outfielder who was his own discovery and for years represented the powerhouse hitting of the Washington club.

Goslin has been wintering at Miami, plyaing golf daily and tossing baseballs. He is eager to return to the Washington club and is willing to accept a salary cut to prove his fitness. The contract he may get may embrace a bonus clause, depending on his batting average.

Last year Goslin encountered the worst batting slump in his 17-year big league career, hitting only. 245. In the field, however, there was no complaint against his play.

The imminent signing of Goslin by the Nats presages the release of an outfielder now with the squad. Six outfielders are too many to carry, Manager Bucky Harris admits. Goslin will join young George Case in the battle for Al Simmons' left field berth, inasmuch as Mel Almada and Johny Stone are fixtures.

Utility Outfielder Taft Wright's job also is threatened.

Griffith refuses to be alarmed by the fact that Goslin's presence would ad one more left-handed hitter to a club that is already topheavy with southpaw swingers. "A good hitter is a good hitter, whether he's left or right handed," said Griffith. "Look at our record last year.. We had a better percentage against lefthanded pitchers than we did against righthanders. That left-handed business is the bunk." POVICH.

Sports Postscripts

Bob Garrison, Post Staff Writer

Many pages away from the sports section he loved—on the same Page One, where he hoped someday to firmly plant his byline—are the cold facts surrounding the accident that took Bob Garrison from us last night.

Fingers that have written many an obit, directed by tear-filled eyes, stab only half-heartedly at typewriter keys trying to mould mere words into a reflection of Bob.

Bob was all newspaper man. From earliest high school days, journalism was his goal. Later, when he came to us, it was his life. Bob kept his hat on as he wrote. His favorite writers did the same. Hours that were for play to most boys of his age, were hours to get nearer to writing perfection for Bob. He had most of the tools but he was sharpening them at George Washington University.

Bob took a demotion to be among us here in sports. He began in circulation but it was as copyboy that he first edged his way into city room and sports department. He chose sports after a fling at police reporting. Bob never was much of an athlete but he glowed with the events he covered.

Last night we put the paper to bed without him.

Two Upsets Feature Opening Round of A. A. U. Ring Event

Twenty-four senior amateur boxers advanced to the second round of the seventh annual tourney at Turner's Arena last night, with eight technical knock-outs, and one out-and-out K. O. enlivening the 4-hour program before 1,00 spectators.

Mittmen representing the Merrick Boys Club and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club garnered the team honors, each placing two men in the second round, with the National Guard next with four. Among the victims were Jim Koustenas of the Boys club and George Pickeral, National Guard battler, who were favored to reach the later rounds in the 125-pound class. Koustenas was floored twice by O. John L. Booher, a 145-pound scrapper from Fort Myer, scored the only knockout of the night when he threw too many lefts and rights for Theodore Yeggl, of neighboring Fort Washington, and the latter was counted out after 1 minute and 42 seconds of the initial round.

Brush Hook Breaks Record for American Mile and 60 Yards

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 16.—Mrs. Payne Whitney's 5-year-old Brush Hook scored a thrilling head victory over the Millsdale Stable's Infantry in the mile and 60 yards of the fifth race, best offering on today's program. The two horses were almost split choices, Infantry closing a very slight favorite. Six lengths behind the pair came Darby Farm's Francesco to earn the show. Brush Hook paid $5.80 for $2. Eddie Arcaro, leading Hialeah rider and fresh from a short vacation in Havana, was astride the Greentree gelding.

Brush Hook's time of 1:41 flat created a new American record for the odd distance. The previous mark of 1:42 2-5 was established by Watervale at Pimlico in 1911. However, so far as is known, this is the Donnoly track now using the distance. It was brought into existence here at the curren meeting and Pelter, a plater, recently made the track record of 1:44 1-5.

The race afforded urther line on probable candidates for the $10,000 added Tropical Handicap scheduled for closing day, April 9. Brush Hook is deemed a certain starter in the coming fixture.

Challenge Cup doubtless brought about the defeat of Infantry. This colt raced head and head with the Millsdale representative through the backstretch. He finally faltered around the bend, but Infantry then had to be hustled along to stave off the challenge of the stretch-running Brush Hook. The race was run to order for the latter and the big chestnut, after a hard duel, wore down Infantry in the run to the wire. Francesco beat Challenge Cup a half length for the show. Gyral, Chalphone and Couleedam brought up the rear.

Nemont Takes Opener.

Nemont, backed into $7.80-for-$2 favoritism, proved one of the standout "good things" of the meeting, in the first race here today. The gelded 4-year-old, saddled by Kirby Ramsey, outran the field of platers by a wide margin. Sterling Young hustled him to the front soon after a good start. His mount opened up a long lead and toyed with nine other sprinters, winning by a half-dozen lengths. Secret Chatter supplied what contention there was. The filly tired at the end, but saved the place by a half length from the fast-closing Taka Walk.

Count Maurice made good the paddock tip whispered about on his chances in the second race. With Irving Anderson up, the son of Reigh Count stuck it out in a hard drive and prevailed by a neck over Miney Myerson. The latter beat Chancery a length for the place, while the favored Milk tired after racing along with the winner. Count Maurice led to the top of the stretch, was temporarily headed by Milk and Miney Myerson, then came again on the inside and got up right at the end to return $17.10.

Pine Frills got home on time for the talent in the third contest. The filly lasted in a bitter stretch drive to register by a half length at odds of $5.50 for $2. Dohoev, a long shot ridden by the Havana rider, Beverly Hacker, was second by three lengths over Bailout. Pine Frills put Do It away early and stole into a three lengths advantage. Dohoev shot up to almost even terms with the winner turning for home, but the favorite gamely held her ground under Paul Ryan.

Sweet Patrice Winner.

Sweet Patrice won the half mile juvenile dash that was fourth on the card, thus giving Mrs. E. D. Jacobs two straight victories. Pine Frills, winner of the previous race, was the only other horse to represent the stable today. Both victors were saddled by A. J. Bedell, Trainer Hirsch Jacobs having departed for New York. Sweet Patrice won by three lengths in 0:47 2-5, fastest time of the meeting. Making it two in a row, the Halcyon filly was the shortest priced winner at the current session, paying $2.90 for $2.

Handiboy beat the field away but Sweet Patrice quickly sped to the front and won with little difficulty. Jack Horner outlasted Handiboy by a half length for second money. American Byrd, a well fancied newcomer, broke away from his rider at the post and galloped off for five furlongs before being caught.

Nicely rated behind the early leaders, Sun Phantom came along in the short stretch to win the sixth race of 6 furlongs by a length and a half under Johnny Longden. Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Colorbearer paid her backers $17.60 for fi2 and ran the distance in the sparkling time of 1:11 flat. Sorceress raced Time Signal into defeat and assumed a narrow lead entering the home lane, only to weaken when Sun Phantom made his bid. She saved the place by another length and a half from Mansco.

NEMONT, displaying keen speed, drew out into a long lead in the early running and won as his rider pleased. SECRET CHATTER, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, held on stoutly to outlast TAKAWALK. The latter broke in a tangle, gradually improved his position between the leaders and was going strongest of all except the winner at the finish.

COUNT MAURICE, away forwardly, forced a steady pace in the early running, raced MILK into defeat and, responding courageously when the final test came, outlasted MINEY MYERSON. The latter, reserved off the early pace, moved up menacingly on the outside entering the stretch, but then hung in the closing strides. CHANCERY, vigorously ridden the entire trip, came fast in the last sixteenth mile and disposed of MILK.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PINE FRILLS, $5.50, $4.00, $2.90; DOHOEV, $9.10, $5.00; BAIL OUT, $4.20.

PINE FRILLS, away forwardly, followed the leader under restraint in the opening half mile, took command when called upon and drew out into a command lead, but then faltered through the stretch and was under strong pressure to withstand DOHOEV'S bid. The latter gradually bettered position on the inside, came around the winner entering the stretch, but then hung in the last sixteenth mile. BAIL OUT, away slowly, worked her way up gradually on the outside and wore DARK MAY down in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. The Biscayne. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:57. Off 4:07. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' br. f. SWEET PATRICE, quickest to begin, opened up a long lead in the first furlong, was then taken in hand and steadied until straightened out into the stretch, then drew off at her leisure to win with something to spare. JACK HORNER, a forward contender, saved much ground entering the stretch and disposed of HANDIBOY in the last furlong. HANDIBOY moved up strongly on the outside of the winner rounding the turn, but faltered when the real issue came.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRUSH HOOK, $5.80, $3.10, $2.60; INFANTRY, $3.00, $2.80; FRANCESCO, $2.90.

BRUSH HOOK, racing in his best form, followed the leaders under stout restraint until leaving the backstretch, moved up determinedly on the outside and outlasted INFANTRY in the final drive. INFANTRY broke tardily, was rushed into contention while going wide rounding the first turn, forced a fast pace and raced CHALLENGE CUP into defeat. He continued gamely when placed to a drive, but Arcaro outrode Longden when it came to a finish. FRANCESCO closed gamely to punishment through the stretch and wore CHALLENGE CUP down in the final strides. CHALLENGE CUP, quickest to begin, set a swift early pace, but then faltered in the stretch run. GYRAL and CHALPHONE had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Second Philco Radio Dealers Purse. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:04. Off 5:05. Winner, Mrs. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNPHANTOM, $17.60, $8.10, $4.60; SORCERESS, $4.80, $3.50; MANSCO, $4.90.

SUNPHANTOM, running in much improved form, went prominently in the early running under steadying restraint, came around the leaders with a rush straightening out into the stretch, and drew out in the final furlong. SORCERESS, on the outside, forced a rapid pace and raced TIME SIGNAL into defeat in the first half mile, held on gamely when put to a drive, but was no match for the winner. MANSCO gradually worked his way up on the outside after leaving the backstretch, and finished with a belated rush. TIME SIGNAL displayed keen speed in the early stages, but stopped suddenly in the final sixteenth mile. BLIND PIG, hard urged, was unable to engage the leaders. JOYRIDE broke slowly and showed dull speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT, $5.50, $3.20, $2.70; FAUST, $4.00, $3.20; TUTTICURIO, $3.10.

LIGHT, hustled to the front going to the first turn, held the field safe for speed and, steadied in front, continued with determination when it came to a drive. FAUST saved ground rounding the first turn and went into contention rapidly, but was in tight quarters until the final furlong, when he moved up stoutly along the inner rail, but was unable to overtake the winner. TUTTICURIO, well up on the outside, made a game bid on the outside entering the stretch, but could not get up. MIDAS finished well under punishment. CONRAD MANN closed some ground in the final three furlongs. PERLETTE, prominent for a half mile, ceased to be a contender the remainder of the trip.

ANACREON broke alertly, went prominently all the way, and outlasted BERRY PATCH in the final drive. BERRY PATCH, keen contender all the way, faltered in the stretch run. MARIATO, slow to get going, closed a big gap while circling the field.

Racing Bill Referred To Judiciary Board

The House District Committee, which has previously refused to report favorably a bill to legalize horse racing in Washington, yesterday, referred the Sacks bill to the Judiciary sub-committe for hearings.

Members who led the opposition last year and forced the then committee chairman, Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, to recall the measure, said they are prepared to wage an equally fierce fight on the proposal this year.

DEAR AL:

I had a letter today from Frank Menke, who heads the publicity department for Churchill Downs. Here's a part of it which will be of interest to Kentucky Derby fans: "Col. Matt J. Winn says that there will be nine races on the Kentucky Derby Day program, May 7—the first to be run at noon—and that at least five, perhaps six or seven bands will exude harmony during the festivities. Derby Day is a holiday in Louisville and practically amounts to a State holiday throughout Kentucky. We open the gates at 6 a. m. and by 10 in the morning there will be at least 25,000 persons swirling through the grounds. Something should be done to keep them entertained, and the bands will help considerably. Still, the crowd, having come to see horse races, wants a sight of racing at the earliest possible moment. Therefore, we will run the first race at noon and space out the other eight so that the Derby itself will be run about the usual time, and the whole program completed long before twilight. The bands will alternate in drilling and playing during the morning, and also in the afternoon. They will all join in playing 'My Old Kentucky Home' and I believe there will be about 500 or more pieces in that mighty chorus. Bands will be here from the University of Louisville, the University of Kentucky, University of Indiana, and from two, three or four high schools."

BILL.

First race—Giboir may be the best of this group in the day's wind special for juveniles. This is a nice-looker that has worked well. Easter Thorn and Taut, a disappointment last out, to fill out the money circle.

Second race—Flickering turned in a fine effort recently and one that shows excellent form. Needs only the right ride to take down the major award. Big Play is the probable favorite and is the one to beat. Rafter to take care of the others.

Third race—Wise Fox is as good as that last and appears to be the best bet of the program. Gallant Friar has plenty of foot and is dangerous. State Witness may be in the show position.

Fourth race—Olomor appears well pleased in this event. Clocker Mike reports a good move on him and I'm forced to string along. Thursland will draw plenty of sheckels and is as fit as hands can make him. War Echoes may be the third one to the wire.

Fifth race—Gene Wagers seems headed for big things in this field and a win at fair odds would not surprise me. Double B. and Knowing are at the top of their form and will make the main pick step.

Sixth race—Stocks may stretch those legs long enough to take this gang into camp. Likes the rout and could win it with alert handling at the break. Buttermilk and Achieve seem to have something on the remainder of the field.

Seventh race—Happy Knot probably will be the choice in this field and should make good for the favorite players. Likes this track and is reported on edge. Mixwell and Rebekah to take care of the others.

Best bet—Wise Fox.

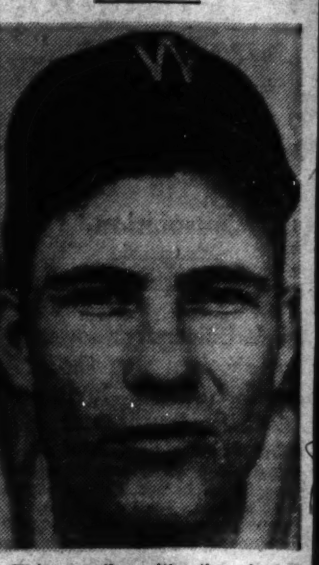
—New Nats, No. 4—

Livingston

Looks Like Griff's No. 2 Catcher.



This youth with the Archbishop-of-Canterbury name will be the Nats' No. 2 catcher this season or the Washington bosses will be a sadly disillusioned group of men . . . They like the 21-year-old lad's action behind the plate, his seriousness of purpose and his aggressiveness . . . Most of all they like his youth . . . And they think he will hit . . . The fellow is out of Newberry, S. C. The section that produced Van Lingle Mungo and Buck Newsom. Will answer readily to the name of "Mickey" . . . Came out of the textile mills a year ago and has been with four clubs in his brief fling at organized baseball . . . Tall, boyish-looking, his talents were first spotted by Chick Galloway, the old A's infielder, who was coaching at Presbyterian College at Clinton, S. C. . . Chattanooga signed him last spring, farmed him to Sanford, of the Florida State League. . . Led the league in hitting during the first six weeks and then was transferred to Charlotte. . . . 12 days later he was brought up to Chattanooga as the club's regular catcher . . . At Chattanooga his hitting slumped and he finished with an unfashionable .249 average. But he was tabbed by Washington scouts for his back-stopping skill . . . When Clark Griffith sold the Chattanooga club to Joe Engel, Livington was to become the property of the Nats under the terms of the deal . . . Bucky Harris has altered his batting style in an attempt to get a smoother swing . . . And the lad now stands at the plate with feet wider apart and elbows higher . . . Hits a sharp low ball when he connects . . . And when he throws to second base, the pitcher must duck, or else . . . He's ambitious . . . Knows that the door is wide-open for a young catcher on the Washington club . . . Is a 6-foot 1-inch 170 pounder . . . and a potential Ladies' Day favorite.

Prince Argo Wins At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, March 16 (AP).—Prince Argo, owned and trained by "Butsy" Hernandez, came through with a surprise victory in the 6-furlong dash for 3-year-olds which topped the Fair Grounds card today.

In chalking up his third triumph in eight starts, the bay colt broke in front and stayed there all the way to pay $27.40 for $2. His time was 1:12 2-5.

At the finish, the Prince had three lengths to spare over A. Barrera's well-supported William Palmer. Anthology was third in the field of seven.

War Threats, Buying Wave, Lift Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 16.—War forebodings gripped the wheat trade today, and excited buying swept prices higher 2¾ a bushel net, up 3¼ cents from the day's bottom level.

Big export purchasing of United States wheat, the first such development witnessed in a long while, added to the upward impetus of values. The total bought for shipment overseas was estimated at more than 1,000,000 bushels. Special significance on the part of wheat traders was attached to setbacks of securities, the degree of securities' losses being largely taken as a gauge of war fears prevalent both sides of the Atlantic.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅝@1⅞ cents above yesterday's finish, May 87⅞@88, July 84⅞@85; corn ⅞ cents to 1 cent up, May 59@59⅛, July 60⅞@61; oats ¼@⅜ advanced; rye showing 1⅞@2¼ jump, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents.

Railway Control Stake in Battle

Cleveland, March 16 (AP).—Managing control of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway was the stake tonight in the fight between Robert R. Young, New York financier, and two top ranking officers of the Chesapeake Corporation.

Young, who took over control of the Van Sweringen rail empire after the death of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, publicly demanded today the resignation of Charles L. Bradley, president, and John P. Murphy, secretary of Chesapeake Corporation.

Young indicated in letters published today that this was an attempt to forestall a special meeting of the Chesapeake Corporation, called April 4 by Bradley and Murphy to change the directorate structure and gain control of the board.

Sargent Proposes 'Pooling' of Interests to Speed Rehabilitation.

By the Associated Press.

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, proposed yesterday that Congress make possible "co-ordination and pooling" of railroads as one step toward rehabilitating the carriers.

Sargent made his recommendations at a Senate sub-committee hearing on rail finances.

He proposed in part as an immediate program:

Machinery for co-ordinating and pooling, either through the Interstate Commerce Commission or a separate agency.

Prohibition of all free transportation.

Financing of railroads by a Federal agency at rates of interest as low as the Government pays.

Re-examination by the I. C. C. of division of joint rates with a view to relieving the most distressed regions.

Repeal of requirements for reductions in rates because of land-grant provisions.

Permit railroads to engage in motor vehicle business without the present restrictions.

Re-examination by I. C. C. of rates paid for privately owned cars, such as refrigerator and tank cars.

For a long-time program, Sargent suggested consolidation of all railroads into a few transcontinental systems.

Sargent also advocated a "permanent and firm" rate-making policy; a permanent labor policy, which would outlaw strikes and provide a wage-hour board; Government financing and Federal incorporation of railroads.

Baltimore Insurance Co. Announces New Name.

Baltimore, March 16.—Marking its seventy-third anniversary today, the Central Fire Insurance Co. of Baltimore announces change of its corporate name to the Central Insurance Co. of Baltimore.

With expansion into other fields of risk in recent years to meet the demands of modern business, the old name did not sufficiently convey the broader scope of the company's service and led to adoption of a more definite title, according to officials. The company was founded in 1865, shortly before the close of the Civil War, and was originally named the German Fire Insurance Co. of Baltimore.

National Steel Corp. Votes 25 Cent Dividend

New York, March 16 (AP).—National Steel Corporation announced today a dividend of 25 cents on its capital stock, payable March 31 to stockholders of record March 25. During 1937, the company paid 62½ cents quarterly with extras of 50 cents each September 30 and December 24.

Stocks Tumble 1 to 5 Points As War Fears Shake Market

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, March 16.—A scramble for cash on war fears shook world security markets today, and leading stocks here broke 1 to 5 points in the sharpest decline in six weeks.

Steel, copper, rubber, aviation and other war favorites went down with the rest of the list despite the haste abroad to strengthen fighting machines.

The relapse wiped out rally gains in the preceding two sessions and carried rails and utilities on the average into new low ground for the year. Rail bonds joined the slide in face of the White House conference on the industry's problems.

Transfers mounted to 1,023,500 shares, the largest since February 23, from 760,220 the previous session. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks was off $160, at $42.20. Only a small margin separated it from the 1938 bottom.

A wide decline in Holland guilders and weakness in other foreign currencies, together with heavy selling of securities in London, Amsterdam and Paris, kept the financial focus on European events.

Rumors of impending developments, mostly inspired by the weakening of loyalist forces in Spain and apprehension the French would become more deeply involved in the aftermath of the Nazi coup in Austria, contributed to nervousness in speculative circles.

Foreign Selling.

Increased selling from abroad to obtain cash was reported by Wall Street brokers. The fall in European markets echoed in further selling of foreign bonds, particularly Central European issues. The flow of funds to New York resulted in additional small engagements of gold in London and India.

Tax revision prospects in Congress and a few signs of spring business improvement in the United States were overshadowed by the swift-moving European drama.

Profit taking as traders shifted to the selling side when the preceding rally failed to carry through at the opening sped the decline. United States Rubber common and preferred, after a sharp spurt, were heavily sold, each finishing more than 3 lower.

Down 2 to 5 at the close were United States Steel at 50⅝, Bethlehem, 55; Du Pont, 115½; Santa Fe, 31; Westinghouse, 89¼; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 49¼; General Motors, 33⅝; Chrysler, 50¾; International Nickel, 47; International Harvester, 63½; Douglas Aircraft, 39¼; Southern Pacific, 14¼; Anaconda Copper, 30⅞, and American Smelting, 47.

Conspicuous among the few gainers was Homestead Mining, leading domestic gold producer, which finished 1⅛ higher at 57⅝.

Rails Lead Decline.

The bond market broke today under lively selling incident to Europe's "war" tension. Most of the list was affected, with some rails in the lead of the decline. A few leading industrials and utilities held out against the trend.

The foreign dollar list was down correspondingly with Czechoslovakia Government 8s of '52 off 14½ at 80. United States Treasuries were mixed, but on the weak side, with closing losses of from 1-32 to 10-32 offset by a few 1-32 to 2-32 gains.

Volume was $7,237,425, face value, compared to the previous day's $5,799,400. Associated Press averages showed losses in every group. Twenty rails averaged 56.6, lowest since April 22, 1933, and 1.2 under yesterday's close. Ten foreign dollar bonds averaged 62.8, lowest since January 9, 1934, and down 1.1 from yesterday. Ten industrials were down .1, utilities down .3, and low yield down .3 under yesterday's close.

Losers of two points or more among bonds commonly traded included B. & O. convertible 4½s at 15¼; Illinois Central 4¾s at 31⅞; International Telephone 5s at 57, and M-K-T 5s of '62 at 37½.

Fractional gains were registered by Anaconda Copper 4½s at 104¾; Armour of Delaware 4s of '55 at 90⅞; Loew's 3½s at 98¼ and Northern Pacific 4s.

Steel Output Advances to 32% Capacity

Rise Is Attributed to Normal Seasonal Conditions.

New York, March 16.—A rise of two points in steel ingot production to 32 per cent has occurred this week without material aid from the automobile industry, the railroads or building construction, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the industry. The report states that the improvement comes mainly from miscellaneous sources and is partly seasonal in character and partly due to depletion of inventories.

"Disappointed as to the net amount of the freight rate increases granted last week by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroads have made no concerted move toward the resumption of buying of even the routine requirements that have been accumulating during recent months of inaction. While the immediate outlook for large-scale equipment purchases, which the railroads promised if their revenues were made sufficient, is not hopeful, it is probable that some delayed rail orders will be placed.

I. C. C. Decision No Stimulant.

"The freight rate decision is not counted upon to stimulate much buying by general users of steel in order to save the difference between existing rates and those that will go into effect about April 1, as the net increase to most buyers will be small. The fact that last fall's advance of 10 per cent, with a maximum of 20 cents a ton, is considered a part of the pending 10 per cent increase leaves only some of the longer haul rates subject to further increase.

"Thus the stimulus that a freight rate increase was expected to give to railroad buying and, over a short period, to general steel buying has been greatly discounted. Such improvement as may occur during the next month or two will spring from more natural causes, among which a return of confidence based on broad revision of corporate and capital gains taxation by the United States Senate might go far toward releasing backed up requirements.

Cotton Lower; May, 8.93 Cents

New York, March 16 (AP).—Cotton lost its early advances today as a more serious view was taken of the European political developments and the stock market weakened. May sold off from 9.00 to 8.92, and closed at 8.93, with final prices 5 points net lower to 1 higher.

The market opened 6 to 8 points higher in sympathy with the action of Liverpool, and on trade and foreign buying. Scattered selling soon developed, however, as securities turned weak and some early buyers resold.

Curb Declines; Trading Heavy

New York, March 16 (AP).—The curb market sagged lower today under fairly heavy selling.

Volume was 173,000 shares, heaviest since last February 23, comparing with yesterday's 119,000 shares. Metals and oils yielded most as groups. A few specialties held firm.

As traders shared the general nervousness over the European situation, Aluminum Co. of America closed 4½ points lower at 74, and Newmont Mining was off 4 at 57½. Other losers of more than a point in regularly traded issues included: American Cyanamid "B" at 22½; American Gas & Electric, 23¾; International Petroleum, 29½, and Lake Shore Mines, 50.

Montgomery Ward "A" was up ¾ at 134. Slight gains were registered by United Wall Paper, 2⅛; Venezuela Petroleum, 1⅛, and Mesabi Iron at 7-16.

Goodyear Tire Head Is Here On Sales Drive

Litchfield 'Hopes' to Keep Most of Production in Akron.

Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., was in Washington yesterday to launch an intensive sales and advertising campaign for his new "Lifeguard" safety inner tube for automobile tires.

But at a press conference in the Willard Hotel nearly every Goodyear production angle was discussed —except the new tube.

The tire executive said he "hoped" to keep a large percentage of the company's production in Akron, in answer to a question based on reports that another tire company has threatened decentralization unless workers accept a revised wage and hour schedule.

Litchfield said two years ago the company made 80 per cent of its tires in Akron, but that today only one-third of the Goodyear output comes from there.

He also expressed an opinion that the Goodyear-Zeppelin Co. would be eligible to build a new lighter-than-air craft for the Navy, despite the fact that Germans own 25 per cent of the company. All German engineers with the company, he said, have become American citizens.

Taxation Based On Ability to Pay Asked by Lawyers

The District Chapter of the National Lawyers' Guild last night adopted a resolution favoring the income tax and general taxation based on ability to pay, at the same time expressing opposition to the sales tax and the business privilege levy.

In another resolution, the Guild called for an increased relief appropriation for the District, and in a third resolution it favored means of using the Federal income tax as a basis for computing the District income tax.

Prof. Arnold Tolles, a member of the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation, spoke in behalf of the income tax and general taxation on ability to pay before the resolutions were adopted.

An income tax for the District was opposed by Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers' League, on the grounds that many wealthy persons from other States come to the Capital to live, and might leave the District if their incomes were taxed here. He said he preferred the sales tax tot the income tax here..

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in its fifty-fifth midweek concert Wednesday evening in Constitution Hall. Program: Two Sinfonie from "Orfeo" (Monteverdi), Sarabande, Giga and Badinerie (Corelli), Entr'acte from "Khovanshchina" (Musorgski), "Facade" (Walton), Symphony in C minor (Brahms).

In the prolonged applause that greeted Hans Kindler when he mounted the podium last night in Constitution Hall was unmistakably expressed a congratulation upon the successful outcome of the campaign for the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund. No other purport could be attached to the cordial quality of the ovation, which was one of those spontaneous outbursts of good will occasionally manifested by an audience. Its unpremeditation made it the most pleasant of preludes to the concert that followed.

Ranging over more than three centuries, the program began with two sinfonie or interludes from Claudio Monteverdi's first opera, "Orfeo," which was staged in Mantua on the distant date of February 24, 1607. Historians tells us that opera was then in its childhood, for Jacopo Peri's "Euridice" was at the time only 7 years old. But it was a strangely prophetic childhood, foretelling in its utterance the manner in which it would grow. The basic dramatic principles which were to govern emotional expression in theatrical spectacles were implicit in the early experiments.

These sinfonie by Monteverdi, the one grave and full of dignity and the other sinewy and impetuous, have a remarkable vitality and freshness, and their harmonic idiom springs surprises upon those who think that unexpected intervals were invented by modern composers. They prove once again that sincerely motivated music is timeless, and that true beauty does not fade in the realm of tone.

Arcangelo Corelli, usually known to us now only by some pieces which violinists keep in their repertoires, was shown in a new light by the orchestral arrangement of three movements from his sonatas for violin and bass. This clear and passionless music was in strong contrast to the somber and tragic entr'acte from Musorgski's "Khovanshchina" which leaped a wide chronological gap and prepared the auditors for the up-to-date witticisms of a gifted English composer of our own day.

William Walton's "Facade" is the cleverest satire through parody and allusion that has come to my notice. Auric, Milhaud and Casella, even Stravinski, have tried their hands at this type of humor without applying to it the intellectual honesty that Walton possesses. Their perversions of tunes and distortions of rhythm have a superficial air, while Walton uses the same devices in a manner that leaves no doubt of his serious intent. While one is delighted at the wit, one is at the same time troubled by the irony; one is aware that this music contains more than meets the ear. While it is amusing to the point of stimulating laughter, it has an underlying note of warning that all is not well with the world.

In his reading of Brahms' first symphony, Dr. Kindler reached one of his high moments, and the orchestra collaborated with him in full sympathy. After the first part of the program, I was not in the mood for Brahms, and only professional duty kept me in the hall. But the performance of the first movement caught my attention, and after that there was no wandering of thought. The exposition by conductor and players was clear as to form and sincere as to emotion, and the cumulative effect of the symphony was powerful in its conviction.

3 Held for Jury In Bogus Pass Case

Three colored men pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday to charges of forging Capital Transit Co. passes. All were held for the grand jury under $2,000 bond each by Judge Edward M. Curran.

Those arraigned were James A. Deal, 22, 1528 Church street northwest; James F. Small, 18, 1917 Thirteenth street northwest, and Walter J. Blackburn, 22, same address. A box of water colors, allegedly used in faking the passes, and a forged pass were exhibited by Detective Sergeant Dewey Guest.

The men were arrested Sunday after complaints were received from the company.

$7,000,000 Loan Made.

The Government advanced an RFC loan of $7,000,000 yesterday to the naval stores industry to stabilize the gum turpentine and resin market.

Security Unit Pays Lump Sums to 99

Payment of claims for lump sums under the old-age insurance plan of the social security act in the District amounted to $13,432, an average of $35.97 at the end of February. it was announced yesterday by Victor Sadd, manager of the Washington field office of the Social Security Board.

In February, 99 claims, amounting to $3,561, were certified for payment, bringing the total certified in the District to 454.

Largest single claim paid, amounting to $1,001.67, went to a person employed by seven companies. Such payments can be made, Sadd explained, since the act permits accumulation of wage credits from more than one job. Payments are based on 3½ per cent of total wages paid since January 1, 1937, up to the time a person has reached the age of 65, or until the date of his death.

Income Taxes Up $95,000,000 Over 1937 Collections

Income tax collections are approximately $95,000,000 ahead of what they were for the corresponding period last year, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering announced yesterday.

Collections for the Nation in the period March 1, 1938 through March 15, were $615,947,718, and in the same period in 1937 they were $520,893,563.

The income tax collections deposited by collectors amounted to $439,307,999 for the same period, as compared to $381,512,457 in 1937. Collections on hand but undeposited were estimated at $176,639,718, as compared to $139,381,126 on the same date a year ago.

The Maryland tax district, which includes the District of Columbia, reported that $11,703,954 in income tax returns has been deposited. Last year at this time, slightly over $12,000,000 had been deposited.

Virginia's total deposits so far, $3,592,002, also are lower than last year, when nearly $5,000,000 had been deposited by March 15.

Cambridge, Mass., March 6 (AP).—An assertion that the New Deal was "tending toward a totalitarian state" came tonight from Glenn Frank, chairman of the National Republican Program Committee.

"I refer to both the successful and unsuccessful attempts to shift more the authority of Congress, the courts and more the authority of the people themselves, first into the hands of the Federal Government and then into the hands of the Chief Executive," Frank said.

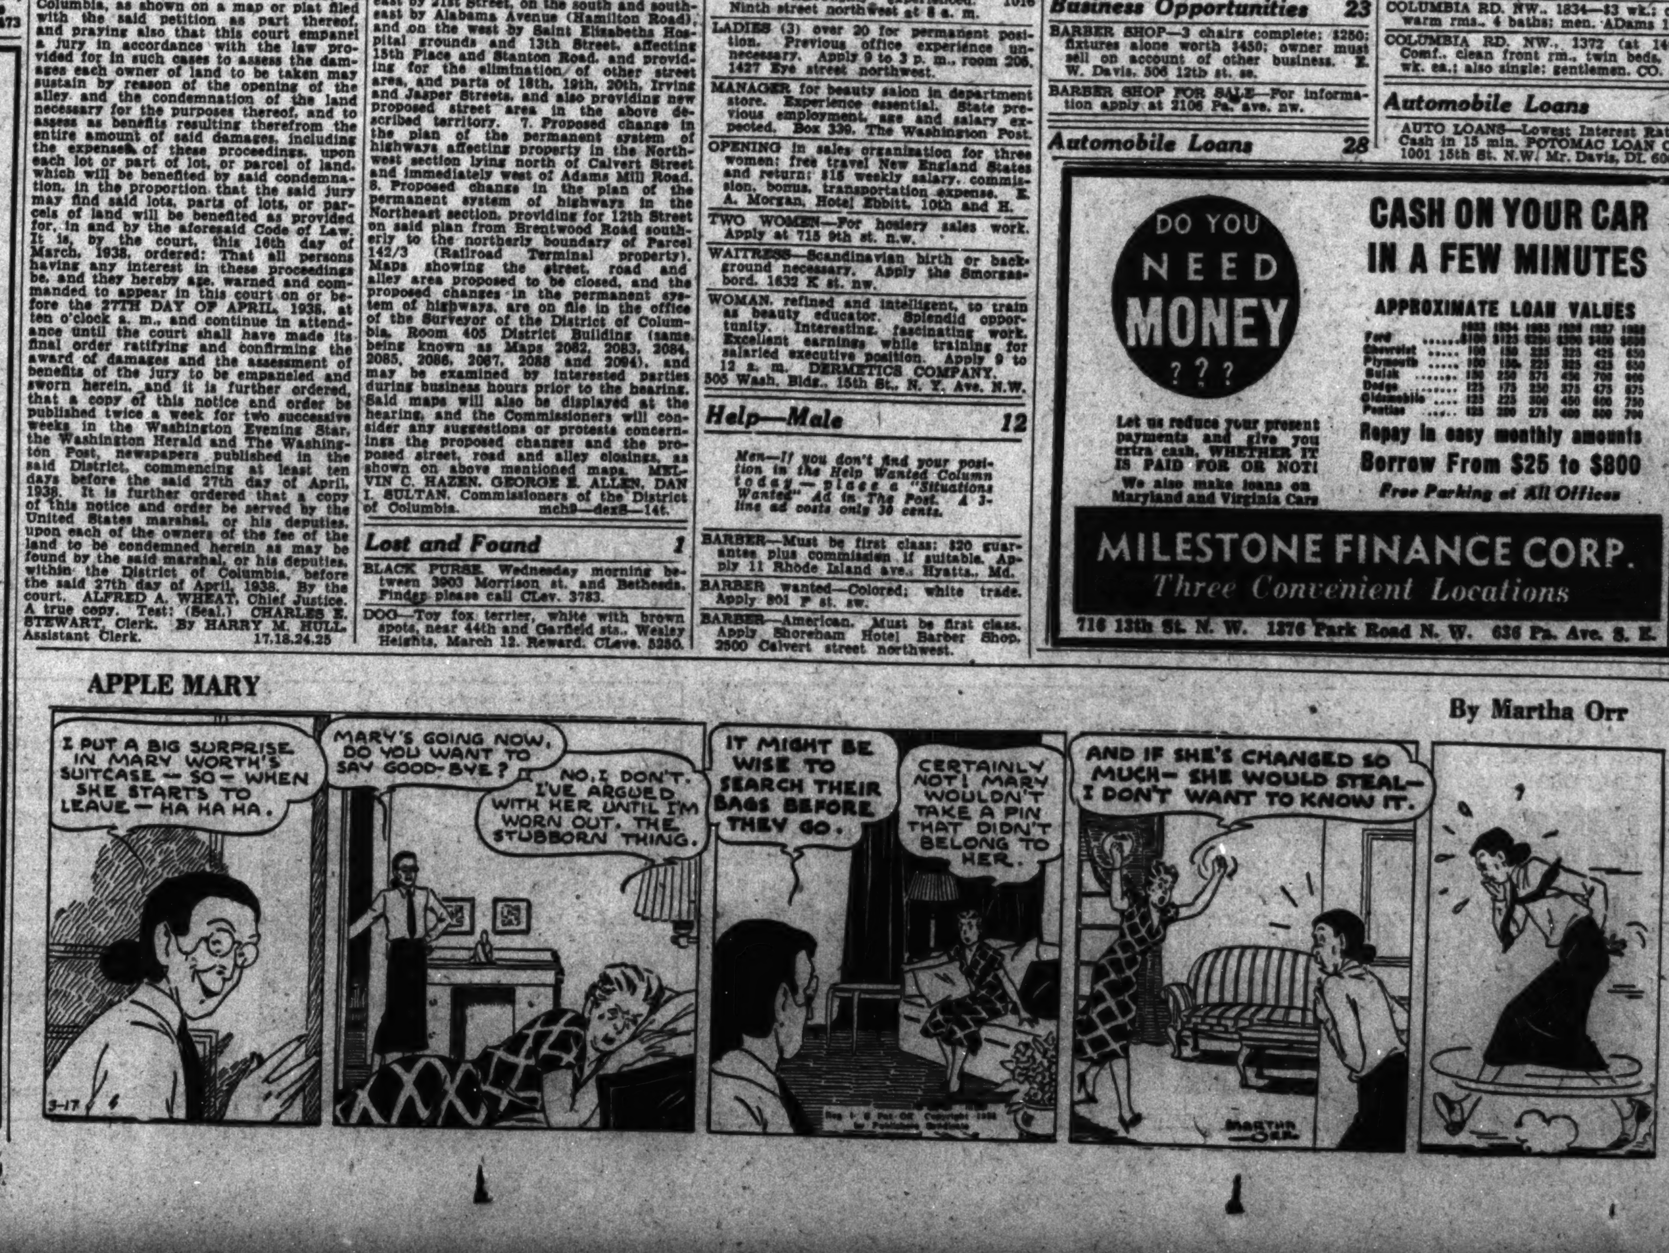
APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr



I PUT A BIG SURPRISE IN MARY WORTH'S SUITCASE — SO — WHEN SHE STARTS TO LEAVE — HA HA HA.
IT MIGHT BE WISE TO SEARCH THEIR BAGS BEFORE THEY GO.
AND IF SHE'S CHANGED SO MUCH — SHE WOULD STEAL — I DON'T WANT TO KNOW IT.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't think it's fair that every time a star falls out with his financee the word is flashed around the world, but nobody ever bothers to mention anything about the split-ups, separations or divorces of the extras.

I know one extra actress who was engaged to a playboy here in Hollywood and one time when this playboy had lost a lot'a money on his investments out at the racetrack he walked over to see his fiancee and she was very cold to him.

When he asked her, point-blank, what the trouble was she said "Well, when I heard that the finance company had repossessed your car, something died-within me."

Hull Will State Foreign Policy On Radio Today

Address Will Be Broadcast by Short Wave to Europe and Rest of World.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull will make a speech of world-wide importance at a luncheon of the National Press Club today regarding the foreign policy of the United States. The events of the last week in Europe give heightened interest to Secretary Hull's remarks.

His address will be broadcast between 1:30 and 2:15 p. m. and will be carried by shortwave to Europe, Canada and Latin America. Later in the day the address will be broadcast to Europe and South America in Spanish, Portuguese, German, French and Italian.

Secretary Hull has refrained from any discussion of Adolf Hitler's seizure of Austria since that event took place. Even though he does not refer specifically to this event and what has happened in Europe in the last month, he is expected to make clear the attitude and policy of this Government toward world conditions.

Nazi Flag Raised.

The only official development here consequent to the Austrian situation was the action of the German Embassy in physically taking over the Austrian legation on Massachusetts avenue. This move was symbolized by a huge Nazi flag flying alone from that building's flagstaff yesterday. Previously the Austrian flag had been displayed above the Nazi emblem.

Dr. Herbert Scholz, secretary of the German Embassy, went to the Austrian legation and sealed the archives and secret codes. Confidential papers were removed to the German Embassy. Austrian Minister Edgar Prochnik—for such he remains on the State Department roster—and his family will remain in the legation for a few days at least.

Meanwhile, German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff sent a note, in German, to Secretary of State Hull, notifying the government of this move. It is understood that the note advised this government that the Austrian legation was now the property of the German Reich as a part of the German Embassy here.

Legation Staffs Merged.

The note also stated, it was learned, that the German Reich flag would be flown in the future from the building when occasion required and that Minister Prochnik and the legation personnel in the future will form a part of the staff of the German Embassy here. The note requested that the interested American authorities be informed of this change as soon as possible in regard to the extra-territoriality of the legation building and Minister Prochnik and his family and staff.

At the State Department it was said no action had been taken regarding the contents of this note. It was explained that this Government was giving the fullest consideration to all phases of the situation in connection with each development and that it would be prepared to indicate its attitude in seasonable time when other governments likewise would indicate their attitude.

Coffee's Bitter in the Cafeteria, Say Labor Department Critics

Labor Department employes have figured that the way to a man's stomach is through the ballot box.

Wanting to learn what the employes thought of the Department cafeteria, Lodge 228 of the American Federation of Government Employes conducted a survey which, besides aggrieving the cafeteria management, produced the following sentiments:

Ninety-eight persons referred to the noise and suggested soundproofing the room. Twenty asked for better service and more variety of fish on Friday, or felt that the meat served was of poor quarity, or that there were too many stews and meat loaves on the menu. Forty-eight petitioned for a second cup of coffee free on the lunch.

Forty-five complained of the coffee—that it was bitter, inferior grade used, improperly prepared, or urns cleaned or fresh coffee added too infrequently. There were 12 who complained of the ventilation and 11 who wanted a choice of soups each day.

A total of 123 declared the salads to be too expensive or too elaborate, putting emphasis on the need for more 10 cent salads, especially of fruit, and a greater variety in general. A number mentioned a salad plate lunch with bread and buttter and a beverage for 25 cents, such as is served in the Postoffice cafeteria.

There was an outspoken bloc of 36 which demanded more 5-cent desserts, including a 5-cent cut of pie and a nickel scoop of ice cream. Some stood out for a 5-cent cup of soup. Fourteen said that 3 cents was enough for black coffee, or for bread without butter, while 119 drew individious comparisons with restaurants on the outside.

Of the total of 347 replies, 232, or 67 per cent, complained of the special lunches as being too starchy, combinations of food too heavy, or suggested an optional substitution of a small salad, or soup or dessert for bread and butter. Nine pointed out "housekeeping" flaws, and 46 kicked about how slowly the lines moved.

The expressions were placed in a box the lodge placed outside the cafeteria. They will be presented to the management, the Welfare and Recreational Association, headed by Capt. F. W. Hoover.

One of the officials said yesterday, "Just go to the door and take a look in there; the place is packed; they all seem to be enjoying the meal."

"But don't take any pictures," said Capt. Hoover, thwarting a photographer who was about to photograph an employe in the act of eating one of the sandwiches which, 23 employes declared, are spread too thin.

Display Opens Today.

Interior Department exhibits at the San Diego, Texas, Great Lakes and Paris expositions will be on display from 4:30 to 8:30 p. m. today and tomorrow at 1709 L street northwest, the department announced yesterday.

Brazil Rejects Reich Protest On Nazi-Baiting

Vargas Will Continue to Suppress Activities, He Warns.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, March 16.—President Getulio Vargas, it was learned tonight, rejected German representations against suppression of Nazi activities in Brazil.

The German objections were presented by Ambassador Karl Ritter who intimated Germany might withdraw her envoy if Brazil continued to outlaw Nazi activities.

Informed quarters said Vargas met his statement with a "courteous but short retort" that naziism would not be tolerated in the South American nation of which he assumed supreme control in a coup last November.

Ritter met an equally firm rebuff from Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranaha and other officials who held suppression of German Nazi activities, especially in southern Brazil, was in line with the administration's desire to keep alien political doctrines out of Brazil.

The Vargas administration has put down minor disturbances among Brazilian Fascists since the coup last fall. Members of the Brazilian Fascist organization aided that coup, and hoped to share its victory.

Negotiations are under way for a new trade pact, and it was understood Germany had agreed not to subsidize exports to Brazil thus surrendering the inside track she had in competing with the United States and other free traders.

Fright Causes Near-Panic in London Market

By the United Press

London, March 16.—Great Britain's prime investment securities were dumped overboard today in the most severe break on the London Stock Exchange since 1931.

Frightened investors from continental Europe hastened to convert their holdings into liquid capital. They arranged to take their funds out of London and the conversion operation sent the pound sterling down sharply in terms of all units except the Netherlands guilder, which vied with the British market as a financial feature.

So heavy was the selling and so gloomy the atmosphere that a delegation of British chambers of commerce called on Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain late today and requested him to issue a statement to "arrest this inexplicable decline in confidence." Chamberlain said he would consider the matter.

Outlook Is Bleak.

After the close, experts groped for explanations for the rout in the market. There was no letup in the liquidation after a brief interval of steadiness following a lower opening. Closing prices were at or near the worst of the day and the outlook for the coming session was considered bleak unless the international tension eased.

There were many others. Indications that Britain was considering eventual resort to conscription of industry and prospect of higher taxes on such industries as brewing and tobacco played a big part in individual stock declines.

"Gold Rush" Is On.

There was a rush to gold, and hoarders continued to make purchases of the precious metal into the evening. The official price was fixed at 139 shillings 9½ pence. A slightly firmer sterling price at fixing time for gold brought the dollar up 3 cents to $34.80. Late in the day hoarders paid as high as £7 per ounce for gold. A premium of 2½ pence over the official price. The latter, however, was a private transaction and did not enter into the calculation of the dollar price, which on the basis of sterling broke well below the level at which it is profitable to ship gold to New York.

Today, arrangements were made to ship $980,000 in gold to New York. Yesterday a total of $2,255,000 was shipped. Further shipments to the United States were anticipated to result from the recent furious exodus from European currencies by those seeking a safe haven for their funds.
